House Votes To Permit Wage-Hour Law Revision

Rule Adopted Despite Word President Opposes Drastic Change

By John E. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In a session at times both boisterous and bitter, the House threw the doors wide open yesterday for far-reaching amendments to the wage-hour law despite indication from President Roosevelt that he opposes drastic alterations to the act.

Against strenuous New Deal opposition, a rule was adopted, 233 to 141, which will permit the House to consider and to amend the Norton, Ramspeck and Barden bills exempting various classes of workers from the present law.

Adoption of the Barden bill, which would remove protection of the law from many hundreds of thousands of low-paid agricultural-processing employes, would be "a great mistake," said the President. His views were transmitted in a letter from his secretary, Stephen Early, to Chairman Norton of the House Labor Committee.

Second Major Battle

Decision of the House to engage in a real free-for-all over the many proposed amendments to the wage-hour law marked the start of the second of three major battles between New Dealers and "antis" scheduled for the closing weeks of the present Congress. The House has already passed the Walter-Logan bill curbing the administrative agencies, and it is due to take up amendments to the Wagner Act in the near future.

The fight yesterday centered even more about the "arbitrary and arrogant" action of the Rules Committee in reporting out a "hydra-headed gag rule" than about the merits of the wage-hour act. Under the rule as originally adopted by the Republican-Southern Democratic majority on the committee, the House would have had to vote the Barden bill up or down without amendments.

Apparently fearing a defeat on this proposal, Representative Cox, ranking Democrat on the committee and chief proponent of extensive exemptions to the wage-hour law, asked permission to modify the rule to make it more acceptable.

Recount Denied

The House agreed by the bare majority of 189 to 185, and when a recount was demanded, Acting Speaker Rayburn, who voted with the minority, denied the request.

After clearing that hurdle, Cox had it all his own way the rest of the afternoon. While Republicans egged him on with cheers and laughter, the bushy haired Representative from Camilla, Ga., taunted "the big-town fellows who try to legislate for those who till the soil." denounced the "liquidation" of farmers through operation of the wage-hour law, and charged that administration of the act is "wiping out small business everywhere."

High point in the field day for Republicans, who obviously enjoyed the internecine warfare across the aisle, came when Cox told New Deal Representative Hook, of Michigan, that he "would be greatly benefited if he could find it possible to get himself out of John Lewis' vest pocket."

Hook demanded that the words be "taken down;" and Rayburn ruled that Cox had spoken out of order.

When Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said he hoped the development of indus-

"LITTLE DUTCH GIRL"—Alice Mae Houtman, blond and beautiful in her Dutch costume, came from Holland (Mich.) to dance at the Folk Festival. (A page of pictures, Page 22)

America seemed a pretty good place to the 7,000 persons who jammed Constitution Hall yesterday for the opening performances of the seventh annual National Folk Festival.

They saw the America that the census taker doesn't tabulate—tribal dances of the Oklahoma Indians, the cake walk of Tennessee Negroes, the unique musical instruments of the Wisconsin lumberjacks.

Through the whole ran a thread of sheer good fun. The crowds caught the gaiety of the young cowboy dancers of Colorado as they swung their ladies through the lively measures of a cowboy square. And there was more than mere music in the stirring spirituals as sung by colored folk from Chattanooga and New Orleans.

The occasion proved to be a festival in the true sense of the word—a gala good time for performers and spectators alike. And, though many of the participants were by birth or by descent Yugoslavian, Ukrainian, French and Dutch, it was a thoroughly American sort of good time.

5 Groups Unite In War on High Property Tax

Depression Prolonged By Excessive Levies, New Conference Holds

Five national organizations in the real estate field joined forces here yesterday and launched a country-wide crusade against high property taxes, which, they claim, are prolonging the depression and "undermining the foundations of property ownership."

Meeting with Government officials, educators and tax experts in the Mayflower Hotel, representatives of the five groups formed the National Real Estate Tax Conference and elected as chairman Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, Governor of Ohio from 1928 to 1931.

The meetings will continue today with Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the Monopoly Committee, and Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, among the speakers. Resolutions outlining a program of action will be adopted.

Cites "Twin Millstones"

The conference yesterday heard Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, denounce "excessive taxation and mounting governmental debt" as the "twin millstones which threaten the economic and social well-being of rural life."

Taber called for insertion of tax limits as well as debt limits in State constitutions. He was joined by Earl C. Smith, of Chicago, vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who charged that property taxes on farms in many States are "confiscatory."

Smith, in a prepared speech read to the conference in his absence, stated that property tax increases, "along with low prices and heavy indebtedness," have brought a collapse in land values and have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of farms.

"It is a mistake to think," Taber said, "that American institutions

New Deal Hit For Punishing U. S. Business

Publishers Hear Willkie, Knudsen Score 'Scolding' Policies

By the Associated Press

New York, April 25.—Two of the country's leading industrialists—Wendell L. Willkie of the utilities and William S. Knudsen of the automobiles—accused the New Deal tonight of making business the Nation's whipping boy.

Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, and Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation, addressed members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association at a dinner.

Discussing "some of the issues of 1940," Willkie asserted that the New Deal had unjustly punished business to the detriment of the whole country and had criticized industry "for being unable to do what the Government prevents it from doing."

In this respect, Willkie said, the Administration had "drained the vitality and confidence" from industry and then turned on industry to "denounce it for its failure to recover and make wild charges concerning a 'strike' of capital.

Business Needs Encouragement

Knudsen joined Willkie in analyzing business' position by asserting that "this idea of having everybody get poor so nobody can get rich, is not going to work in the long run."

He contended "business needs a lot of encouragement" and should receive a "reasonable amount of credit" for putting people to work "rather than constant scolding because we are not doing enough for those not working."

He declared "security" had almost come to "stand for a living whether anyone works or not," and added that recent legislation, both projected and rejected, had developed the idea "that this world owes everybody a living regardless."

John S. McCarrens, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was re-elected

Litter of the Law

'One Dog,' Said the Court; But Nature Overrules Him

A brown dog named Snow White overruled Police Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday.

When a neighbor recently complained that Miss Helen Burche, 2027 H street northwest, "maintained a nuisance" by keeping more than a half dozen dogs in her home, Judge McMahon ordered all but one removed.

Snow White was the one Miss Burche kept. Yesterday Snow White replenished the Burche supply by becoming the mother of six pups.

Next door, Mrs. Hannah Seaquist, who registered the original complaint against Miss Burche's household of pets, said she would "let the law take its course" if the new brood started trouble.

Miss Burche had nothing to say and Judge McMahon admitted nature is no respecter of court orders. Said he:

"I can't stop the dog from having puppies. But Miss Burche will have to exercise proper confinement or we will be forced to bring her back into court for punishment."

Sen. Wheeler Will Refuse Second Place

Thomas, of Utah, Backs 3d Term, Offers to Run With President

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Speculation on a Roosevelt-Wheeler third-term ticket was abruptly checked yesterday by disclosure that Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, will not accept second place on a ticket with the President or any other Democratic candidate.

Senate friends of the Montana liberal Democrat said it can be definitely stated that Wheeler is out for the "top place" only and if the President runs the Montanan is not interested in second choice.

Wheeler has been invited to the White House, following the President's return from Warm Springs. Mr. Roosevelt's declaration for a "liberal pair" of nominees, meanwhile, had started a search for liberal Vice Presidential timber in event the President runs. Wheeler's name frequently was mentioned in possible combination with the President's.

Ran With La Follette

The Senator's friends yesterday said that he ran in the second position with the late Senator La Follette only because of his regard for La Follette and his devotion to a principle, but that today he would not accept the Vice Presidency "on a platter."

As Wheeler moved completely out of the Vice Presidential race another Western Democrat stepped forward with a defense of a third term and a willingness to run with the President if called.

He was Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, who has fought for the President's labor and foreign policies. Thomas was indorsed for Vice President by the Utah Democratic State convention last Saturday.

The Utah Senator said he may not be regarded seriously but "I would love to run with the President and battle for his cause in the West."

Thomas, former college professor and historian, called third-term opposition "a political superstition that can easily be overthrown when the time comes."

Likes Wheeler, Farley

An admirer of Wheeler, Thomas said he thought the Montana Senator and Postmaster General Farley would appeal to the West as a possible Democratic ticket combination if the President does not run.

Subject matter of Wheeler's forthcoming trip to the White House remained undisclosed, but Mr. Roosevelt and the Senator are expected to discuss politics as well as legislation handled by Wheeler's Interstate Commerce Committee. The Senator frequently has declared he will not be a candidate if the President runs.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, who launched the Wheeler-for-President movement, said the Montanan's campaign "in the circumstances is progressing satisfactorily" despite the fact that Wheeler has no campaign organization and no campaign funds. Johnson declared Wheeler "fits right into the President's demand that a liberal be nominated."

Georgia For Third Term

As Georgia's 24 Democratic convention votes meanwhile were dropped into the third-term knapsack yesterday, the "draft Roosevelt" movement showed no slow-down in its drive for new conquests. With about 300 pledged delegates, and

Crazed Gunman Shot to Death After Wounding 12

By the Associated Press

Burlington, Iowa, April 25.—An apparently crazed gunman was shot to death here today after he had barricaded himself in an upstairs apartment and had wounded a dozen persons, four of them seriously, with a wild shotgun barrage.

Sheriff Harry Hunt said the man was Henry Reeb, 36, unmarried and unemployed, on whom officers had attempted to serve an insanity warrant two hours earlier.

Police said they did not know whether Reeb killed himself or whether he was fatally wounded by bullets from the guns of the hurriedly mobilized besiegers.

Efforts to drive the man from the downtown apartment with tear gas proved futile. More than 1,000 persons watched the two-hour battle from vantage points outside gunfire range.

Nazi Columns Retreat, Dig In As British Win Race for Key To Advance on Trondheim

London Admits Reverse in South, Strategic Retreat Near Steinkjer

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

London, April 25.—German troops aided by their warships have driven the British back from Lillehammer in southern Norway and forced them to retreat in the vicinity of Trondheim, the war office announced tonight.

Persistent reports tonight say a detachment of British troops which was advancing toward Trondheim from the British landing base at Namsos was cut off by the Germans, but these reports are denied by the war office.

In the official communique the British military authorities said: "Facts are advanced that a detachment of larger force pushed forward toward Trondheim from the direction of Namsos. Germans moving reinforcements by water inside Trondheim Fjord threatened to cut off advanced troops from the main body. They therefore withdrew but were not followed up by the enemy, who are now reported to be digging in at the head of the fjord. Our troops suffered some losses."

Driven Back 25 Miles

The extent of the British retreat in the Trondheim area may be gleaned from the fact that some British troops several days ago managed to advance along the Namsos-Trondheim Railway to the edge of Levanger, which is around 50 miles from Trondheim. Now it is officially admitted the Germans established their new line north of Steinkjer, which means the Nazis have driven the British troops back about 25 miles.

What apparently happened in his area is that the Germans succeeded in dividing the British troops by sailing destroyers right to the head of Trondheim Fjord and shelling the foe from the shore. The single railroad and the road from Namsos to Trondheim pass close to the tip of the fjord. The Germans evidently allowed part of the British troops to pass the tip of the fjord, then landed reinforcements near the railroad and opened fire on the rest of the British as they came south.

This maneuver forced the British to retreat back through Steinkjer, out of range of the German destroyers, and the new Allied line is now said to have been established 2 miles north of this town.

Both in the Trondheim and Lillehammer areas the Allies are working at a disadvantage. They have no adequate airport at their rear so they must face the strafing tactics of the German bombers without the support of fighter aircraft.

At the first, too, the Allied anti-aircraft material is said to have been inadequate, though in the last few days antiaircraft reinforcements have been landed.

Went Too Fast

News of the fighting in the Lillehammer district is very limited. The general opinion here is that perhaps the British tried to rush their attacks both on Trondheim and Oslo too fast.

Detachments which crossed the North Sea and landed at Romsdal Fjord, south of Trondheim, hurried southward by road and rail from

Window Sniper Kills Schoolgirl, Speeds Away

Abington, Pa., April 25 (AP).—A single shot fired through a window killed pretty 16-year-old Edith Snyder tonight as she studied. The slayer escaped.

So stealthy was the gunman that even the girl's brother, in the same room, was not alarmed by his approach to a front window of their home.

One bullet crashed through the glass, hit the girl in the back and pierced her heart.

Neighbors told police they heard a car drive up to the Snyder home shortly before they heard the shot, then a door slammed and the car roared away.

Edwin said his sister had not dated any boys prior to the last six months. Since then, he said, she had accompanied several to school affairs. She was a Junior in high school.

Skipper Tells of Slipping Out Of Norway With Swedish Gold

FLIGHT FROM TRONDHEIM—Mormacsea officers in life-preservers on the bridge of the gold carrier as it slipped out of the Norwegian port

Copyright by New York Times

New York, April 25.—The American freighter Mormacsea, the first ship to come out of Norway since the German invasion of Norwegian coastal cities on April 9, docked here today in command of Capt. William A. McHale, who told a thrilling story of his experiences during six days of German occupation and his escape from Trondheim with his small cargo, his crew of 39 and a shipment of $4,500,000 in Swedish gold still intact.

CAPT. McHALE

Before dawn on the morning of April 9 Capt. McHale was awakened by a voice at his door asking for permission to moor "another ship" alongside his own. The sleeping American seamen and the sleeping city of Trondheim alike had been quietly engulfed by a swift-moving and heavily armed German force of marines, soldiers and seamen.

Still half asleep Capt. McHale peered out into the late winter gloom; saw armed men on the pier, destroyers nearby in the harbor and not far off the great German man-o'-war Admiral Hipper, laden with men.

To a Norwegian night watchman on the deck he said:

"Those men down on the dock look like German soldiers to me. Are they?"

The watchman yawned and said: "No, they're Norwegians."

But in a few minutes the realization of what had happened smote them.

"I then realized that the port had been taken by the Germans without a shot," said Capt. McHale.

The captain didn't want a German warship moored against him, as the German captain who had knocked on his door planned to move his men across the Mormacsea to the pier. The master was afraid the Germans would be too curious about his cargo, so he said he would move forward 300 feet,

Lightning Thrust Halts

By the Associated Press

Stockholm (Friday), April 26. The Germans have abandoned Roros, which they seized for a few hours in a dazzling exhibition of lightning war yesterday, and are digging in at Tolga, 15 miles to the south in the Osterdalen, Swedish newspaper correspondents reported early today.

The German retreat was ascribed to the need for hasty fortification, which the terrain at Roros does not favor.

Another cause also appeared to be a British advance south in the Gudbrandsdalen to the west, threatening to outflank the Germans' extended positions.

Set to Block Nazis

The correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported that the British have broken through at Storen, and are now in position there to block any German advance from Roros, or up the Gudbrandsdalen Valley to reinforce German-held Trondheim on the west coast.

These British troops, after landing at Andalsnes, south of Trondheim, took a northern route to Storen, where they repulsed a German force from Trondheim, and perhaps prevented their striking a more telling blow at a British force from Namsos to the north of Trondheim.

The British then turned and united with some of the Norwegians in the Osterdalen, 70 miles houtheast of Trondheim.

Sent to Save Trondheim

They appeared headed on parallel routes for Trondheim to prevent a Norwegian-Allied drive to encircle that strategic German base.

But late yesterday the British were reported at Storen, 35 miles southeast of Trondheim, astride the Gudbrandsdalen and Osterdalen rail lines that converge there before entering Trondheim.

There was heavy fighting at Tolga last night, with heavy artillery and air forces participating, and Tolga was reported badly bombed.

But whether the fighting took place as the Norwegians retreated

President Invokes Neutrality Act and Stops Credits in U. S.

Warm Springs, Ga., April 25 (AP).—A Presidential proclamation added Norway today to the list of European belligerents and another declared the intention of the United States to remain neutral in the Scandinavian nation's war with Germany.

Automatically, President Roosevelt's action put Norway on a "cash and carry" basis so far as obtaining war supplies in the United States was concerned. She must pay cash for any such supplies and carry them away in non-American vessels.

Export-Import Bank lawyers said in Washington that the proclamation also meant suspension of the bank's $10,000,000 credit to Norway.

Formal application of the neutrality law did not, technically, cancel the credit, it was explained, but had the effect of preventing disbursement of it. Norway has used only about $200,000 of the loan in the

U. S. Sends Officer to Inspect Nazi Camps for War Prisoners

Maj. Harvey H. Smith, an instructor at the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., it was learned yesterday, is now en route to Berlin to assume the post provided under a treaty signed by leading world powers in 1929.

While in the Reich, Major Smith will have the title of assistant military attache to the American Embassy and may perform some of the duties connected with that post. His main job, however, will be inspection of camps housing prisoners.

ECHOES ABE: Connoisseurs of Tom Dewey's oratory claim it's a remarkable, if unconscious imitation of Raymond Massey's version of Abe Lincoln, as heard on the stage and in the movie—slow sustained enunciation in the upper registers. It's a 5 foot 7 tenor's version of an actor's rendition of a 6 foot 4 baritone's drawl, and there are reports that Massey has helped coach Dewey. He used to be more staccato.

Senate Delays Spanish War Benefit Bill

House Passes Measure Over Roosevelt Veto By Vote of 274 to 82

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

A Spanish War veterans' benefit bill which has been knocking around Congress for 40 years was temporarily sidetracked in the Senate yesterday after the House had passed it over President Roosevelt's veto, 274 to 82.

When the veto message came over to the Senate, it was referred, on motion of Democratic Leader Barkley, to the Claims Committee.

The motion was approved by unanimous consent and without discussion.

As a result of the Senate action, the fate of the bill is uncertain. The United Spanish War Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who have been supporting it, were said to be disappointed but hopeful that the committee would make a favorable report and that the Senate would override the veto.

Benefits Held Unwarranted

The President recalled that, in a previous memorandum of disapproval, he had said the bill would authorize "a benefit utterly without warrant" of about $7,000,000 to 15,000 Spanish War officers and men who already had been liberally compensated.

Representative Smith (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the House Pensions Committee, who introduced the bill, said other estimates were that the cost would be only $3,200,000 and the number of beneficiaries 8,000.

The President pocket-vetoed the bill twice—once in 1935 and once in 1938.

In the memorandum of disapproval, dated June 20, 1938, he recalled, he said he had been advised by the Comptroller General that each volunteer who remained in the Philippines to quell the insurrection after the peace with Spain would receive a travel allowance equal to one day's pay and one ration for each 20 miles from the Philippines home. The payment for water travel alone, he declared, would exceed one year's pay and one day's ration for each day of the 8,000-mile voyage.

Extra Pay Is Cited

Congress, he said, has approved a special medal for the volunteers who remained to fight Aguinaldo. Moreover, he declared, they received full pay for the entire time they served, transportation and subsistence at Government expense, and two months' extra pay in addition.

Beneficiaries would be the survivors of the volunteer force and the widows and children of such soldiers.

Impasse Sends Farm Aid Bill Back to House

Senate Refuses to Yield On $347,000,000 Put In Agriculture Bill

A joint conference committee abandoned efforts yesterday to break a month's deadlock of the agricultural appropriation bill. It reported a hopeless disagreement on Senate additions of $347,000,000 to the measure.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, one of those who have been working in an attempt to iron out Senate and House differences on what to include in the bill, said the effect of yesterday's action would be to send back to the House, Senate amendments providing for $212,000,000 in parity payments, $85,000,000 for disposal of surplus farm products and $50,000,000 for loans to farm tenants.

Senate Is Adamant

Russell said Senate conferees refused to yield on the Senate's action in adding these amounts to the $714,000,000 in agricultural appropriations approved by the House on February 2. The Senate voted $922,864,688 in farm funds, with $90,000,000 additional provided in loans for agricultural purposes.

The Agriculture Department weighed the possibility, meanwhile, of a recurrence of the land speculation boom touched off by the World War in 1914, and canceled precautions.

Noting that World War conditions had sent farmland values skyrocketing almost 100 per cent in a decade, the department sought to gauge the possible effects of the present conflict on farm prices.

Adverse Factors Noted

Factors adverse to another land boom, it was said, tended to outweigh those which might encourage one. The department emphasized, however, that the unpredictable element of "inflation psychology" could upset all calculations.

Figures were cited in a department report to reflect the extent of the World War's influence. In 1910 the value of the country's farm real estate was $34,801,000,000. By 1920 it had soared to $66,316,000,000, with most of the increase occurring after 1914. Values have since drifted downward to $35,356,000,000.

The Gallup Poll

Popularity of Chamberlain Drops in England, But Prime Minister Still Holds Big Majority

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 25.—The popularity of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of England has declined among British voters in the last six weeks, according to a survey just completed by the British Institute of Public Opinion.

This organization, founded originally under the supervision of the American Institute of Public Opinion, has been regularly conducting surveys without interference or censorship on the part of the government. Even when results have shown trends of public sentiment unfavorable to the government they have been published in London without restriction from the ministry of information.

DR. GALLUP

Whereas Chamberlain was approved in February by 66 per cent of Britons expressing an opinion about him, today he is approved by 61 per cent, the survey shows.

Popularity Declines

There has been a steady decline in the Prime Minister's popularity since the outbreak of the war, according to British Institute figures. When the war began, nearly seven voters in every 10 (69 per cent) approved of him. However, the elderly British statesman is more popular today than he was just after Munich, when 57 per cent approved of him.

The recent trend has been as follows:

"In general, do you approve or disapprove of Mr. Chamberlain as prime minister?"

Those Expressing an Opinion

	Approve	Disapprove
December, 1939	71%	29%
January, 1940	65	35
February	66	34
Today	61	39

In the most recent survey an average of one voter in every 14 (7 per cent) expressed no opinion.

Bigger Cabinet Favored

Another recent British Institute survey indicates that the people of Great Britain would like to see Winston Churchill, Anthony Eden, Leslie Hore-Belisha, Viscount Halifax and David Lloyd George serving with Chamberlain in a small war cabinet to push the war more vigorously.

This survey asked: "If a small war cabinet were formed for more active prosecution of the war, which five leaders would you like to see in it?"

Sixty-seven per cent named Churchill, 65 per cent Eden, 46 per cent Hore-Belisha, 34 per cent Lord Halifax and 29 per cent Lloyd George.

Of these men, Churchill and Halifax are the only ones now in the war cabinet.

Voters Think Italy Will Join Nazis

As signs multiply that Italy may be getting ready to join the European War, there is widespread speculation as to whether Mussolini will cast in his lot with the Allies or with Hitler.

Although probably no one but Mussolini knows for sure, voters polled throughout the United States on the subject say that while they would like to see Italy join the Allies, less than a majority think she will do so.

The survey, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion follows:

"If Italy goes into the war, which side would you like to see her join?"

Prefer Italy to Join Allies	96%
Prefer Italy to Join Germany	4

Approximately one person in six (17 per cent) expressed no preference.

"If Italy goes into the war which side do you think she will join—Germany, or England and France?"

Germany	55%
Allies	45

On this question, one-third (33 per cent) of those polled said they were undecided.

more than enough additional uncommitted votes in sight to nominate, "draft" leaders apparently were determined to offer Mr. Roosevelt a choice betwee the nomination or a convention control so complete that he can write his own ticket or platform and candidates.

Action of the Georgia State Democratic executive committee in naming convention delegates without a primary, was a direct slap at Vice President Garner, who had offered to enter the State contest if a primary was ordered.

Neither Senator George, who had espoused Garner's entry, nor Senator Russell, both of whom were omitted as delegates, offered public comment on the delegate selections or the delegation's indorsement of a third term. It has been customary for the two Georgia Senators to serve as delegates.

Privately some Southern Democrats commented that the committee's selection of 72 delegates with one-third vote each is contrary to the Democratic National Committee's fractional voting rules. But Russell predicted all 72 will be seated.

Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina, leading Senate antithird termer, observed he was "not sure that the President being down there had anything to do with" the Georgia action, "but two and two make four."

Like Willkie For G. O. P.

Noting progress of the third-term drive he has personally led, Secretary of Interior Ickes at a press conference predicted Roosevelt will have nearly all of the Democratic convention delegates, then philosophized on Republican possibilities.

Ickes said Wendell Willkie, utilities operator who has figured prominently with Holding Company Act negotiations with the Administration, "would make a very appropriate Presidential candidate" for Republicans. But he hastily added that President Roosevelt, or any other Democratic nominee, could defeat him.

Willkie, head of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, recently had figured prominently in Republican "dark horse" speculation.

Ickes said Willkie "has undoubted ability," that he knows how to take care of himself and has "big business" support. He added:

"He writes well, he talks well, and he meets Mr. Dewey's requirement that a man be 'somebody' before and after he serves in public office."

try to assure compliance with the pact. The Allies, it is said, asked for an American inspector and Germany agreed.

It was pointed out that the United States was the logical nation to undertake the task for the Allies, as it represents them in other matters at Berlin.

At the same time, the War Department ordered Col. Hermann H. Zornig, an ordnance expert, as an additional assistant military attache to Berlin. Now assigned to Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., he will sail for Genoa May 11.

Accompanying him will be another ordnance specialist, Capt. Gervais W. Trichel, to assume a like post in Paris to observe armament developments abroad since the war began. Yesterday's orders also direct Lieut. Col. George C. Kenney, air attache to France, to sail for home for duty at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, where he can apply aerial lessons gained from the war to the manufacture of new Army planes. Wright Field is the center for military air research.

The shifts bring the number of Army officers assigned to Germany and France to six each. There are eight at London.

president of the Publishers Association, and Walter M. Dear, of the Jersey Journal, Jersey City, was re-elected vice president.

Norman Chandler, of the Los Angeles Times, was elected secretary to succeed John S. Parks, of the Fort Smith (Ark.) Times Record. William G. Chandler, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, was re-elected treasurer.

Two new directors—J. L. Stockhouse, of the Easton (Pa.) Daily Express, and Ted Dealey, of the Dallas Morning News—were elected, and the following were re-elected:

J. D. Barnum, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post Standard; Howard Davis, of the New York Herald Tribune; David W. Howe, of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press; F. I. Ker, of the Hamilton (Ont.) Spectator; W. E. MacFarlane, of the Chicago Tribune; Linwood I. Noyes, of the Ironwood (Mich.) Globe; James G. Stahlman, of the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner; S. R. Winch, of the Portland (Oreg.) Journal.

While Knudsen pleaded for cooperation among industry, labor and government, Willkie implored the Government to relax "restrictive" processes which he said were stifling industry.

The three basic factors of economic enterprise—the inventor, the investor and the administrator—Willkie said, "can provide jobs enough and product enough to restore prosperity to America."

The New Deal, Willkie continued, was in the position of the Egyptian Pharaoh who ordered his taskmasters to take away the straw from the Israelites and at the same time direct them to make as many bricks as before.

"The story is not different today," he said. "The taskmasters in Washington have taken away that freedom of economic enterprise which is as vital to recovery as straw was to the making of bricks.

"And then they have turned on the leaders of these enterprises and blamed them for unemployment and depression. But in the words of the people of old we say: 'The fault is in thine own people.'"

Willkie condemned what he said was the President's definition of "liberalism." Willkie said:

"He made the issue very simple: All New Dealers are liberal; all others are reactionary."

The utility head, frequent critic of New Deal business policies and mentioned as a possible dark-horse candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, declared one common quality all definitions of liberalism must have is this:

"The liberal is a man who believes in freedom for himself and for other people."

Knudsen asserted certain practices of labor organizations led to disorderly negotiations and worthless contracts and resulted in "four-flushing and name-calling which does nobody any good. . . ."

"The greatest need in the labor picture today is for better management on the labor side," Knudsen said, adding that strikes in several instances had, under unwise leadership, cost workmen as much in lost wages as wage increases sought in the strike would yield in five years.

Union contracts stressing "seniority," he said, actually hampered workers, because it froze them in jobs and thwarted their efforts to secure better employment.

Committee Votes Funds to Remodel Three Battleships

Modernization of the Navy's three oldest battleships, the New York, Texas and Arkansas, at a cost of $5,725,000, was voted yesterday by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The committee approved a bill authorizing elevation of the 14-inch batteries of the vessels to increase their range by 10,000 yards.

Meanwhile, Acting Secretary of the Navy Lewis Compton said he was "shocked" at the testimony of Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, declaring that Japan was aiming at world conquest and that war with her was inescapable.

Communists Spy on Plants, Dies Is Told

Witness Says Members Of Party Got Jobs In Aircraft Factory

By the Associated Press

Testimony that the Communist Party has planted its members in aircraft and other key industries on the West Coast was given to the Dies Committee yesterday by Ezra Chase, who said he was a former organizer for the party at Los Angeles.

Asked by Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, whether the party's immediate purpose was to obtain valuable military and industrial secrets for transmission to Moscow, Chase said that it was.

He testified also that the party intended ultimately to plunge the country into civil war, and to overturn the present Government by calling a general strike in basic industries.

Dies inquired whether the American Communist Party and the German-American Bund did not give Russia and Germany—free of charge—the greatest facilities they had ever had for espionage in the United States.

Native of Idaho

"There is no doubt that there now exists the greatest political and economic conspiracy in all history," the witness replied. "The Communist Party has made it plain that if any nation should be so bold as to declare war upon Russia it would paralyze the industries of that Nation."

Chase, tan-faced, bespectacled and partly bald, told the committee that he was a native of Idaho Falls, Idaho. He said he had joined the Communist Party about 1931 and later went to work in the furniture industry at Los Angeles where he joined the Upholsterers International Union, at the direction of the party, and finally became organizer of the union.

He identified what he said were resolutions passed at the Los Angeles County Communist Party convention in March, 1937. These, he said, directed that Communists organize a "progressive caucus" in the Los Angeles Central Labor Council and that Communist units be formed in the unions for basic industries, particularly in C. I. O. organizations of automobile, steel, aircraft, rubber and communications workers.

Put in Douglas Plant

In the party's effort to penetrate basic industries, Chase said, groups of "Red builders" were sent into plants. He described the "builders" as trusted party workers engaged in recruiting and circulating literature.

Using a method known as "colonization," he said, the party sent members to obtain employment at Douglas Aircraft and at a Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. plant. At Douglas Aircraft, a unit of 40 members was developed from a "very small colony," he added.

Chase said that a report of the Communist Party's California convention in 1937 showed that, of 4,751 party members, 2,336 were members of trade unions. Of this number, he said, 698 were members of the A.F.L., 1,455 of the C.I.O. and the remainder of unaffiliated organizations.

The witness told reporters that he had resigned from the party and denounced it publicly in recent years. He is employed at present, he said, in a private industry in Los Angeles.

Donald Douglas Comments

Los Angeles, April 25 (AP).—Douglas Aircraft Corporation declared in a statement today that "every possible precaution" has been taken for a number of years to safeguard secrets and interests of the national defense from unauthorized persons.

Within he last year, it added, Donald W. Douglas, president, has called the attention of the personnel to the necessity for using extraordinary precautions to protect military and naval secrets.

State to Execute Wife Slayer Today

Richmond, Va., April 25 (AP).—Gov. Price has studied the record of Wilmer Davis, 25, colored, sentenced to die tomorrow for murder, but has taken no action to stay the execution, it was learned at his office today.

Davis was convicted by a Southampton Circuit Court jury of slaying his wife and sentenced to the electric chair.

Driver Exonerated In Death of Woman

Robert L. Miller, 20, of Berwyn, Md., was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the traffic death on April 12 of Olive May Mason, colored, 35, of 1545 Fourth street northwest.

The jury's verdict that the woman died "due to her own negligence" automatically released the motorist. Police said a reckless driving charge placed against him at the time of the accident would be nolle prossed.

Green Offers 5-Point Plan At Trust Probe

Program Includes Shorter Workweek To Create More Jobs

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday outlined a five-point attack on technological unemployment as the Monopoly Committee neared the end of its sweeping "men and machines" inquiry.

The labor leader urged shortening of the work-week and advancement of retirement age to spread existing employment further; Government tabulation of detailed statistics on employment, wages, hours labor costs and productivity; measures to bring workers "their share in the return from technological improvements;" pooling of information on labor opportunities by industrial and labor groups and a $10,000,000,000 increase in the national income.

Green said the A. F. of L. will soon announce "practical proposals" to swell the country's income. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, said he saw no reason "why we shouldn't get it up to $100,000,000,000 or $110,000,000,000." The figure for 1938 was $64,000,000,000 and for last year is estimated at $68,500,000,000.

Another witness touched off a volley of questions yesterday when he quietly announced that the way to create more jobs is to train more and more skilled workers.

Shortage Claimed

The theory was explained by Dr. Harold F. Clark, of Columbia University, who said "one of the reasons we cannot buy more is the fact that there are all kinds of monopolistic tendencies that hold up prices, and among these monopolistic tendencies are high prices caused by relative shortages of trained workers in particular fields."

An expansion of the trained labor force would create greater competition for numerous specialized jobs, lower the wages paid for these jobs, thus "reduce the cost of many products, and . . . enormously expand purchasing power." Clark maintained.

Clark warned that "bottlenecks caused by shortage of skilled labor in particular industries constitute one of the greatest dangers to a country in time of war." Only solution to the problem, he said, is to create a big and highly trained labor force available for work in a wide range of occupations.

Many Industries Hit

Green said that production in 1939 nearly equaled the volume of 1929, while total employment dropped about 3,000,000 during the decade. This decline took place despite a fall from 48 to 38 hours in the average work-week during the same period, he added.

Disappearance of hundreds of thousands of these jobs must be attributed to the introduction of labor-saving machinery, Green asserted. He cited a 45 per cent increase in cigarette consumption between 1929 and 1939 and a fall of 27,000 in employment in the tobacco industry.

In the glass, mining, tire, railroad, shoe and numerous other industries, he declared, labor "is paying a terrific price" for technological change.

The A. F. of L. executive said "there is no magic" in the classic explanation that labor-saving machinery reduces prices, increases consumption and leads eventually to greater employment. There is no assurance that the formula "will hold true in the future," he asserted.

Arthur Treacher, Film Butler, Reports He's Happy, Well Paid

TABLES TURNED—Marjorie Weaver, screen player, offers hors d'oeuvres to Arthur Treacher, who usually plays the butler. They are two of a group of Hollywood stars in Washington for personal appearances

Being on a Personal Appearance Tour Is Good for the Ego, Hollywood's Best Gentleman's Gentleman Tells the Press

A troop of children who wanted to be in Hollywood some day themselves stood outside the door and looked until Bela Lugosi, the Dracula man, got a tender feeling and signed their autograph pads.

Inside the room, the children got glimpses of Arthur Treacher's condescending eyes (he plays the role of the butler and has to keep such eyes to keep his gentlemen in place) and glimpses of the pretty faces of Helen Parish, Marjorie Weaver and Betty Jaynes, and the handsome Douglas McPhail.

The children couldn't hear, but Treacher was saying: "Folks ask me often why I'm out on the road. Well—to make money! Am I right?" He was told he was right and then said: "The rest of them can seek their art where they choose. I play the role of the butler. It pays as much money as anything else. I'm glad to get it. Am I right?"

Then he said being out like this is good for the ego because people are good enough to tell an actor they like him. And then he emphasized that his roles of gentleman's gentleman never hurt his ego because he can feel as superior as they and, from his height, can look down on them.

Then Miss Weaver said she was going on the air last night with Happy Chandler, whom she knew quite well in Frankfort, Ky., when Happy was Governor and making people colonels. He had made her a colonel and she wanted to sing "My Old Kentucky Home" with him on the radio. She wouldn't comment on Chandler's voice.

The stars are here for personal appearances at Loew's Capitol Theater, as Ed Sullivan's "Star Dust Cavalcade."

Lawyers Guild Backs Public Defender Bill

Group Hears Measure Speeds Justice, Offers Counsel for Indigent

District members of the National Lawyers Guild last night expressed approval of the Capper public defender bill after they heard the opinion of Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, that it would assure proper counsel to indigent defendants and speed up the administration of justice.

Meeting in the auditorium of the Old Interior Building, the guild also adopted resolutions condemning both the Norton and Smith amendments to the Wagner Act.

Celler, sponsor of a bill to establish the public defender system in the Federal courts, said that there is nothing revolutionary about the plan. He pointed out that similar systems are in operation in Spain, Argentina, France, Belgium, Mexico, Norway, England and Denmark, as well as the cities of Los Angeles, San Francisco, Omaha, Minneapolis, Chicago and all of Connecticut.

The Capper bill provides for the appointment of a public defender for the District. He would be a district attorney whose function would be to defend instead of prosecute defendants who cannot afford to hire counsel.

Celler, whose prepared speech was read in his absence, told the guild that the public defender system expedites justice because the "public' defender has no interest in pursuing dilatory tactics. He is under no temptation to present highly technical or ill-advised defenses. He certainly does not adduce perjured testimony, as unfortunately is occasionally done by some types of lawyers."

Mine Blast Laid To Black Powder, Long Condemned

A shot of black blasting powder, use of which long has been condemned by the Bureau of Mines, caused the explosion which took 72 lives in the Willow Grove mine of the Hanna Coal Co. at Neffs, Ohio, March 16, the Interior Department said yesterday.

While the report said the past safety record of the mine was good, it criticized the ventilation system and failure to wet down the coal.

The report urged:

Changes in the ventilation system, operation precautions to operate the property as a "gassy" mine, sealing off worked-out sections of the mine, thorough wetting to keep down coal dust, use of "permissible" explosives by competent workers, training selected workers in use of oxygen equipment and rescue work.

Are Harvard Alumni 'Boring From Within?' Local Diners Know Berle Is Making Fun

The Harvard Club of Washington dined last night at the Carlton Hotel. Among those attending were (left to right) Dallas McGrew, British Ambassador Lord Lothian, Walter Tuckerman, past club president, and Robert Lincoln O'Brien, president

"Revolutionary" activities of Harvard graduates were denounced facetiously last night by Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle at a dinner of the Harvard Club of Washington at the Carlton Hotel.

Membership in the New York branch of the "bourgeois" alumni organization by Walter Lippmann, newspaper columnist and one-time secretary of the Harvard Socialist Club, revealed a subversive "boring from within" Berle told 200 diners.

The State Department also referred to Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt's vice presidency in the local unit to prove "insidious" post-graduate activities in his address which was entitled "The Function of the University in a Revolutionary World."

In serious vein he declared universities are of paramount importance in the "preservation of values . . . and choice of premises" in a world threatened by revolutionary doctrines.

Berle prefaced his speech by saying that all speeches on controversial subjects by State Department officers were read in advance by department heads. This applied particularly, he said, to addresses delivered "abroad."

Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, spoke, but it was off the record. Dr. William Langer, Harvard history professor, also spoke. Robert L. O'Brien, club president, was master of ceremonies.

Frank Urges Little Business Finance Pools

Speculative Companies, Federal-Private Capital, Suggested in Speech

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 25.—Jerome N. Frank, Securities and Exchange Commission chairman, suggested today that the Government and the public establish "frankly speculative" regional investment companies to give financial encouragement to "prosperous small business enterprises."

Frank declared his proposal, presented in a Kiwanis Club speech, would be "a step in the direction of filling the gap in our underwriting machinery which presently makes it too difficult for small and medium sized companies to obtain capital."

He suggested setting up a financial institution—"a sort of speculative finance company or investment trust"—in each Federal Reserve district, with the common stock "owned by private persons in the district."

"Each institution, would in turn, buy the stocks of deserving and growing local business enterprise, in good financial condition, which needed money for capital expansion," he said. "Generally speaking the institutions would not make loans. They would supply equity capital instead of debt."

Frank also suggested the regional companies, "in appropriate circumstances," should also "participate with underwriters in the distribution of securities of such businesses" and said he "would like it better" if the companies could be formed "entirely by private funds."

Georgia Names Pro-Roosevelt Delegation

Committee Ignores Primary Demands, Maps 'Draft' Drive

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, April 25.—Ignoring demands for a primary, Georgia Democratic powers today named a pro-Roosevelt convention delegation and mapped a "draft" program, but carefully avoided any effort to force the President's hand.

The State Democratic executive committee—dominated by New Deal Gov. E. R. Rivers — selected a 72-member delegation to cast the State's 24 votes for the President if he is a candidate. No second choice was named, but it was indicated the group would be bound to any candidate indorsed by Mr. Roosevelt at the July 15 convention in Chicago.

The delegation swiftly organized, elected Clark Howell, Atlanta Constitution publisher, as chairman, and resolved to call on the President "at his convenience," to urge that he accept a third term nomination.

"Draft" Headquarters Planned

It decided to set up immediately in Atlanta "Draft Roosevelt" headquarters, but to delay presentation of a personal appeal until the President was ready to announce his third term decision.

Announcement from Warm Springs that Mr. Roosevelt would make no more appointments before leaving his Georgia home this week indicated the delegation would await opportunity to see the President in Washington.

Smoothly following a previously-laid pattern, the committee set up machinery for the regular State offices primary September 11, and blandly ignored a voluminous petition for a Presidential preferential primary presented by a group embracing anti-New Dealers and advocates of Vice President Garner.

Senators Ignored

The petitioners, ordered from the hall by a call for executive session, quickly turned out a resolution branding the meeting a "star-chamber . . . rubber stamp for delegates appointed by Gov. Rivers."

A departure from custom was failure to name Georgia's Senators among delegates-at-large. They are Walter F. George, who won reelection against a New Deal "purge" attempt in 1938, and Richard B. Russell, jr., generally a supporter of the Administration. Each was a delegate in 1932 and 1936.

In Washington New Deal quarters, the Georgia "draft" action served further to raise third term hopes.

Norse Explorer Killed at Oslo

Stockholm, April 25 (AP).—Capt. Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, outstanding Norwegian airman and explorer, was killed in the first fighting at Oslo's civil airport when Germany invaded Norway, the Norwegian Telegraph Agency, Norsk Telegrambya, reported today.

Riiser-Larsen, who accompanied Roald Amundsen and Gen. Umberto Nobile on their flights to the North Pole, is reported to have been killed when he rejected demands to surrender the airport.

Woman Asks $10,000, Says Dog Chewed Hand

Beatrice Ann Young, 30, of 601 Nineteenth street northwest, charged yesterday in District Court that her right hand was chewed $10,000 worth at the dog show at Meadowbrook Riding Club by a prize Afghan hound.

Her suit alleged the show's management knew the dog, Imported Champion Gerrymhor Kishtwar, "had a vicious disposition." Defendants named are the National Capital Kennel Club, the Foley Dog Show Organization, Inc., of Philadelphia; Jenedith Kennnels, Fairfax, Va., and the dog's owners, R. W. Sampson and Edith M. Grove.

Missing Boy's Books Found Among Bushes

No trace had been found last night of Lionel Henry, 14-year-old Paul Junior High School student, who disappeared after leaving his home, 6703 Second street northwest, for school last Monday.

LIONEL

Police found the boy's books behind a clump of bushes at Third and Van Buren streets northwest, and located a school chum who said he had seen Lionel throw them there and walk away.

Parents of the missing student told Detective Edwin Grayson that they believed he might try to hitchhike to his grandfather's farm at Olney, Ill. Word was forwarded to the grandfather, but he replied he had not seen the boy.

CAA Transfer Is Opposed By Air Group

McCarran Supported In Fight to Block Roosevelt Proposal

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Staff Writer

Tulsa, April 25.—A protest against the absorption of the Civil Aeronautics Authority by the Department of Commerce, as ordered by President Roosevelt under a departmental reorganization plan, began boiling today at the third annual southwest aviation conference.

Attended by representatives of eight States, the conference is expected to take formal action Saturday. Moss Patterson of Oklahoma City, conference president and originator of the annual conference, tomorrow will appoint a committee to consider it.

At a luncheon which opened the three-day meeting a telegram was read from Senator McCarran (Democrat) Nevada, one of the authors of the law creating the CAA as an independent agency and an active opponent of the absorption move.

"Those of us who believe strongly in the science of aeronautics," McCarran said, "are acutely aware that aviation is today facing a crisis."

Frank E. Gannett, the "flying candidate" for the Republican nomination for President, yesterday assailed the Roosevelt Administration's order placing the Civil Aeronautics Authority under the Department of Commerce.

Senate Minority Leader McNary of Oregon said he expected virtually all the Republicans to rally behind a resolution of disapproval introduced by McCarran.

Lieut. Col. T. S. Smith Dies at Fort Benning

Lieut. Col. Thomas S. Smith, Infantry, U. S. A., died yesterday at Fort Benning, Ga., the War Department announced.

A native of Chocolay, Mich., Col. Smith, 54, was regularly stationed at Fort Brady, Mich., but was in Georgia for the Third Army maneuvers. He became a member of the National Guard in 1910 and entered the Regular Army in 1920.

He was a graduate of the Infantry, Chemical Warfare and Command and General Staff Schools. His wife survives.

Navy Awards Contract For Medical Center

The Navy yesterday awarded a $4,360,250 contract to John McShain, Inc., of Philadelphia, for completion of the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md.

Work will start early next month, it was said, and the order calls for completion of the job in 540 days.

American Skipper Tells of Flight From War-Gripped Norse Port

Had Fears His Ship Might Involve U. S.

So, He Decided He Would Rather Face Peril of Mines

Thus began six days of frenzied activity and clever maneuvering on his part, six days that finally ended when he took his ship out with the aid of a calm, unexcited Norwegian coastal pilot.

For a while during the six days the captain feared that Norwegian guerrillas would raid his ship to seize 3½ tons of Thompson machine guns which showed on his manifest for Trondheim, but which he had fortunately unloaded the week before in Bergen.

"I thought there would be a fight and that some of my men and some of the Norwegians would be killed," he said. "I was thinking also of the millions in Swedish gold that I had taken on in Bergen for New York, and which the Germans hadn't had time to discover in their perusal of papers at the customhouse.

"I wanted to get out of there," he added.

Born a Briton

The captain, who was born in Liverpool, had served in the British minesweeping service during the last war and was decorated with the Victory Medal. He is 44 years old and has been at sea 29 years, ten of them with the Moore-McCormack Line. He is a lieutenant commander in the United States naval service.

The captain kept a day-by-day diary of events and his own thoughts during the six days. His ship has been "adopted" by the children of the Richard E. Byrd School of Glenrock, N. J., where he lives, and he has been in the habit of sending reports and letters to the children from time to time. For them he had written out his complete diary and had some 30 copies run off on board the ship for distribution.

Throughout the five closely typed pages run the threads of high adventure, set down in the terse language of the sea.

The captain generously set down some of his opinions and thoughts during the six days, bending over his report at the end of each day despite exhaustion from running back and forth between his ship, which had moved 12 miles up the fjord to Hommelvik, away from the invaders. Doubts and misgivings appear candidly in the laconic paragraphs, and at the end, as the Mormacsea passed down the fjord with her American flags showing on the sides of the rusty hull, he wrote down simply:

"Well, it seems that we are now clear of that mess. But whether I did right or wrong is another matter. I had to judge one way or another, and I judged."

He had in mind as he wrote that the Germans had refused to give him a pilot, had declined to say whether or not they had mined the roadstead outside the fjord, and that he might be taking his ship and his men into unknown mine fields.

"Here We Come"

Once clear, his radio operator was ordered to send out frequent messages saying "Here we come," hoping that the British who were believed to be outside would help them through Allied mine fields, if there were any. However, they saw no mines nor any warships.

He entered Trondheim on April 8, one day before the invasion, and left on April 14, a Sunday afternoon.

The following is the captain's diary, in part:

Trondheim, 5 a. m., April 9.—Somebody knocked at my door and said, "we have a boat and would like to come alongside of you. Will it be all right?" As I was half asleep, I answered, "Yes, certainly," thinking it was some small Norwegian vessel that wanted to lay alongside of me. So I got up and looked around and could only see a destroyer, just off the entrance to the inner harbor and nothing else moving, so I went back to my room. About 10 minutes later there was a terrific racket and I realized that an airplane was circling around my ship.

Wondering what it wanted at that time of the morning, I again went on deck. A three-motored seaplane was just making the last circle close overhead. I could not make out what nationality, as it was just breaking day, but I thought it very strange that a plane should be circling me at such an early hour.

So I took another look around and saw some soldiers on the dock and they looked sort of familiar. So, calling out to the Norwegian watchman who was then on the after deck, I asked him, "Are they Germans?" and he replied, "Oh, no, they are Norwegians."

I was still suspicious of them. Just then I spotted a large cruiser with a lot of soldiers on its deck. It was the von Hipper. I then realized that the port had been taken by the Germans without a shot.

Ship Is Shifted

I called the chief officer and chief engineer. I told them to be ready to leave. About 6 a. m. we shifted the ship up the dock as I did not want the Germans to come on my ship and find out too much about my cargo. A German officer had come aboard previously and asked if they could come alongside and I told him I would prefer to move my ship.

He told me that there were about 2,000 troops and that they had had a fight with a British destroyer just outside the harbor which was patrolling the mine fields (Allied) just laid, and that they had sunk her in about 10 minutes and taken 60 prisoners, including one officer.

I was also told that the destroyer captain had put up a gallant fight, firing several torpedoes and his guns until the last shot, but that he had had no chance to get the Von Hipper and four destroyers.

I asked the officers if the war was on in Norway. He said "No, we are only here to protect Norway against the English" and that they all had orders not to bother neutral ships, especially American ships. He said I could go and do anything I pleased.

I decided to get in touch with our consul at Bergen as soon as possible. A little later Capt. Staman came aboard and we both went ashore to the agent's office. Troops were scattered around the town and there was a small radio station rigged up on the dock. When we got there (to the office) we were stopped by a soldier and told to wait, as the office was under suspicion.

Nobody was allowed to enter (the office) until it had been searched. It was before office hours, anyway. So I went into a store down the road, as it was freezing while there, decided to go to the German consulate as the telephone system was in charge of the Germans.

French Not Mentioned

All street corners had printed notices in Norwegian, put there by the Germans, telling the people to be calm and that the Germans had landed and taken over the whole of Norway to protect it from the British. The French were not mentioned at all.

At the consul's I had to wait until about 9:30 a. m., when he came in. He was very pleasant and told me to tell the telegraph manager that he had given me permission to speak to Bergen. I finally got through and spoke to Mr. (Maurice P. Dunlap (United States Consul).

I told him it would be a good idea for me to leave as soon as possible, but I could not mention my cargo or anything that the Germans might hear or that I had Capt. Staman and wife (not further identified) aboard.

I went back to the office to wait for word. As I was in uniform, I think it was mistaken a lot for a German by the Norwegians and I certainly did more saluting in one day then I had ever done in a month during the last war. Going into the consul's—the place was full of soldiers, who all "heiled" me as I entered. They certainly can click their heels together smartly.

From the office I went to the Phoenix Hotel, where the German headquarters was located. They had taken over the whole hotel.

There I had more saluting and "heiling." A Lieut. Fritch Schneider told me I could leave whenever I wished but that he did not know whether the Germans had laid any mines outside or not. He also told me that he had just taken off 40 English prisoners from the English ship then in the drydock.

I decided to go back to my ship and sail to Homellvik, about 12 miles away, so as to be out of the way in case there was trouble. Staman (representative of the line in Trondheim) was to meet me there.

Nazis Fire on Own Planes

On my way to Homellvik I saw the cruiser and two destroyers a short distance from the port, while five large three-engined planes flew from the northward over me. They were Germans, but I was told by the German commander the next day he had mistaken them for enemy planes and had fired on them. We saw the shells exploding in the air and were all expectantly awaiting a fight but it amounted to nothing.

One of the planes was having trouble and landed near Trondheim. I saw it with its wings in a ditch the next day. I took some pictures of it, but do not know how they will come out through a train window.

Two planes were brought down today (April 10) by Norwegians, I was told. The forts at the entrance were taken so easily that there must have been some traitors in them or else they were asleep. I took aboard two women, United States nationals, who requested asylum.

After anchoring at Homellvik I had the engines at an hour's notice, but could get them sooner if required. I had to conserve on oil. I then went ashore and ordered two life rafts to be made, one for the foreward and one for the after deck. Capt. Staman came aboard.

April 10, Homellvik—Heavy snow today, but went to Trondheim by train and again tried to get in touch with Bergen, Oslo or Stockholm, but no good, the wires were all cut, they say, but I do not believe they want me to use the lines.

Today at the Phoenix Hotel I spoke to Capt. Puffendorf, of the destroyer flotilla. He spoke very little English, in fact all he could say was "ya." He was a very conceited four-striper, not a bit like our naval officers. He looked to me like he was not all there. He had a sort of wild look about him. He was very obliging and made some other officers pay us some attention.

He had the Iron Cross and several other decorations. He and Capt. Weiss were in charge of operations. The two officers he introduced me to sat down and then with pad and pencil tried to pump us. They asked me what I thought about the war and this landing in Norway. I asked them to excuse me from making any statements as I was absolutely neutral. Then they started to tell me why they invaded Norway. It was just to protect them (the Norwegians) from the English who were already prepared to take Norway themselves.

They said that they did not intend to fight on the French border, but would only fight back if attacked, as they had nothing against the French, only England.

They said Germany wanted colonies and England had too many. I asked them about Russia and said that I did not trust her and that I would not be surprised if she turned on Germany. One said that was what the democracies wanted and that it would benefit the democracies. They forgot that the United States is a democracy. They really believe that people are starving in parts of London and New York because of the few rich. They got sort of flustered after that, but told me that Germany had all the oil, steel and grain that she wanted and plenty of food.

I never thought I would ever have the experience of visiting a German headquarters during an invasion.

The people were leaving town all night and today and young men went into the hills apparently to ski, but (really) to be mobilized.

No Pro-Germans There

They all went very willingly. The Germans have not a single friend in this town. They have all had secret orders.

The Germans have requisitioned all private motorcycles as I have been trying without luck to hire one to go back and forth to the ship. The railroads are not now reliable, but a private detective arranged for me to have a car. Gas has been rationed and I have been told that the food may last a month.

God knows what these poor people will do then.

April 11, at Homellvik—went into Trondheim and German headquarters again to try and get in touch with outside. Was told that it could not then be done, but that they were trying to make connections and would I come back at 5 p. m. Bought some films today as I managed to get my camera out. The Germans expect some action today. They seem to be worried and tense. So do the people. They are all crowding out of the town and into the country. It is a pity to see all the families in busses and trucks and some on bicycles and some on foot going along the road. I brought some small United States flags in case there was some fighting.

Met the same German officer today. They all tried to be very pleasant. I also spoke to a captain of the Norwegian navy. He tells me that he is sure that the forts have been taken. He expects trouble any minute.

Waiting for British

All are with the Allies and against German aggressors. The stores must accept the German marks. One mark equals K 1.60 (about 37½ cents, American money). The Germans asked me if I had any bananas I could sell them. All stores are closed. Newspapers are controlled by the Germans, the editor of one told me. Went to the hotel Britannia for lunch. It is deserted, only one old waiter. I had to go to the kitchen for him. Everybody hopefully awaits the British.

No use. Cannot phone today.

April 12 at Homellvik.—I decided not to discharge or load, as the less I do the less I will be bothered by the Germans. I heard on N. B. C. radio that we could not carry passengers back, so must contact consul at Stockholm.

Saw several British prisoners taken from buses to lifeboats, then to a German transport in the bay supposed to have landed some troops today. Crowds of Norwegians were watching but were very silent. It was like a funeral. After the prisoners were in the boats some of the crowd waved to them. These prisoners were off the ship that was in the dry dock. Saw some German soldiers marching through the town singing German marching songs.

"Something Fishy"

While I was at the Trondheim office this a. m. I was told that a person saying that he was a Capt. Tornberg of the Royal Swedish Airforce, had called and said he had made arrangements with the railroad to have cars down to the ship for a consignment of Thompson machine guns, parts and ammunition, "about three tons of machine guns alone." I was surprised that a Swedish officer should be in Trondheim at this time especially as I had an idea that these munitions had all been discharged at Bergen. So I told the agent that there was something fishy about it all.

I told him that nobody would get anything unless they showed me their credentials. On our way to get a car we met a young man who told me that he was on his way to the hills to join up. He said somebody was coming to take the munitions in question off the ship. When I asked him who, he said:

"The Norwegians from inland," and that we had better let them have it and the gold. Things seem to be getting a little lively around here. We hurried and got our car and returned to Homellvik. I found that the guns in question had really been discharged at Bergen, so it looked as if we would be involved in trouble with these young Norwegians and possibly some of my crew killed or wounded for nothing. Decided to sail as soon as word was received from Stockholm.

April 13 at Homellvik—Called consul and he gave me the telegram from New York. (Saying he could sail.)

Was I glad. Of course it mentioned nothing about discharging or loading but I had to get rid of my passengers so arranged with the German consul that he would give them all a safe passage out of Norway.

I again went to Fritch Schneider and asked permission to sail. I had all my papers with me after looking at my crew list and asking if I had any English or French aboard he said that it was alright to sail.

I asked again if I could have a pilot through the minefields. He replied, no. When I asked him if the Germans had laid any mines at all outside he could not answer me, but told me that I could be assured that the Germans would not harm my ship, and that he did not know what the English had done outside.

I am wondering if my judgment was right not to discharge any more cargo or to load. Sweden might declare war and then both Norwegians and Germans would be after the gold. We might have a fight on my ship at any time for the munitions that were not on board, and probably get the (United) States involved. From all accounts the Germans did not know whether they had laid mines or not. Probably not, and did not want it to be known that there were no mines, and lastly if the British had laid mines they would have broadcast it over the radio.

"I Was Getting Out"

Anyway, I had to get out. And I was getting out.

The rafts were not finished owing to all the men going to join up. I landed some men at the yard and finished one of them ourselves and placed it in position on the after deck. During the day our agent tried to get a pilot, but they would not take me out. They were afraid. I told the agent to pay a bonus, and if I could not get a pilot I would take her out myself.

April 14 at Hommelvik and toward New York—Rigged out all lifeboats, passengers were disembarked, and given instructions. Staman will look after them. 9:30 a. m., Capt. J. Dahl, a coast pilot, came aboard. I asked him if he minded going to New York in case I could not land him and he was quite willing. He turned out to be an excellent pilot, and very calm and collected.

I called the crew on deck and told them what to expect, that when the alarm rang they should all come on deck and from then on stay on deck with lifebelts on and ready for any emergency. Be handy to the boats, and that if anything did happen to go to their respective boats and obey the orders of their officers.

We sailed a little after 10 o'clock. The Germans seemed to have laid low as we saw nothing all the way out, not even a plane.

At 1 p. m., just before we were abreast of Agnese Forts, I rang the alarm bell and all hands came on deck with only a skeleton crew in the engine room, and remained on deck until 6:30 p. m., at which time I considered it safe to reduce the precautions, but warned them still to be on the lookout for trouble.

I was in deep waters, so was sure we were safe from mines, except floating ones. We managed to land the pilot O. K. I was glad of that.

While still in the fjord but just out of range of the forts I told the operator to send the message, "Korx leaving Trondheim via Halten." This was broadcast several times so that if any ships were outside they would not make a mistake, and if British would probably guide me through any mine field they had laid.

Well, we are now clear of that mess. But whether I did right or wrong is another matter. I had to judge one way or another and I judged. I think we must all live right.

Britain, France Double Orders For U.S. Planes

By the Associated Press

Great Britain and France have swelled their pending orders for American war planes to well beyond 4,000, it was indicated yesterday by an announcement that the Allies in the last two weeks have placed aircraft and engine contracts aggregating $200,000,000.

The announcement came from officials of the Allied Purchasing Mission who said large quantities of speedy Curtiss and Bell pursuit planes, Douglas bombers and engines of three types were included.

The latest purchases, it was estimated, represent nearly 2,000 planes and an undisclosed number of Allison, Wright and Pratt & Whitney motors.

Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the mission, and Rene Pleven, French representative, said the cost of the engines included facilities to produce them. They explained that the Allies were financing factory expansions necessitated by the orders.

The announcement of the Bell contract promised a European war test for an unusual type of fighting plane, the P-39, developed for the Army Air Corps. This plane mounts a small cannon in its nose and is powered by an engine placed in the center of the fuselage.

The Curtiss pursuit planes include both P-40 and P-46 models, released by the Army in accord with the new policy by which the Air Corps expects to acquire more advanced models at no additional cost along with valuable technical information on the performance of American planes in combat.

The Douglas craft are fast two-motor bombers. They figured with the Curtiss planes in contracts disclosed previously.

Fatalities Drop In New Method Of Amputation

D. C. Surgeon Finds Technique to Reduce Lung Complications

A Washington surgeon yesterday reported a new technique for leg amputation which he is confident will appreciably reduce the present high mortality rate from that cause, particularly among the aged.

He is Dr. J. Ross Veal, chief resident in surgery at Gallinger Hospital, and his findings are described in the Journal of the American Medical Association, out today.

The method is quite simple, he explained, consisting merely of tying off the vein high up on the thigh, near the groin, instead of at a point near the amputation. In 28 gangrene cases handled, each of which required removal of a limb above the knee, this technique was used and there was not a single death from pulmonary infection, Dr. Veal reported.

Worst Peril

Lung complications are, at present, the worst peril faced by gangrene victims following leg amputations. The elderly patient particularly, is more likely to contract a fatal case of pneumonia after losing a leg than he is to die from surgical shock or failure of the heart or kidneys.

Of the 28 cases, 9 were operated on in Charity Hospital at New Orleans, Dr. Veal's post prior to coming here in July, 1938, and the remainder in Gallinger Hospital. In 24 instances the gangrenous condition was due to arteriorsclerosis or diabetes.

There were five deaths in the group, but none was due to pulmonary infection, as proved by autopsies.

"Striking Results"

Dr. Veal contrasted this record with two series of cases, totaling 275 amputations, handled in New Orleans, in which there were 97 deaths, 41 of them resulting from some type of lung complication. The old method of ligation or veinlying, was used in those cases, the blood vessel being tied just above the point of amputation.

"The striking results of this procedure in eliminating pulmonary complications in this present series of 28 cases seems worthy of further study and application," Dr. Veal asserted.

The advantage of the high ligation, he explained, lies in its reduction of the chances of blood clots breaking off from the stump, entering the bloodstream and traveling to the lungs, there to cause infection and probably death.

Dr. Veal, a native Alabaman who received his medical education at the University of Pennsylvania and other Northern schools, is one of the five chief residents at Gallinger Hospital whose addition to the staff in 1938 was at first opposed by Georgetown and George Washington medical schools.

Irish Speed I. R. A. Probe In Castle Blast

By the Associated Press

Dublin, April 25.—Premier Eamon De Valera took personal charge tonight of investigation of the bombing, allegedly by the outlaw Irish Republican Army, of the Dublin Castle headquarters of the Irish government's special detective branch.

Five detectives were injured, none seriously, in this morning's blast, caused by detonation of either a time bomb or a land mine. It threw tons of debris—masonry, costly blue and gold stained glass memorial windows—into the courtyard of the old castle, in the heart of the Irish capital.

Troops on Guard

The scene resembled the aftermath of an air raid.

While troops mounted guard at approaches to the castle and others stopped motor cars on bridges and roads leading out of Dublin to question their occupants, De Valera hurried to the castle for a personal inspection of the damage.

Authorities believed that the deaths last week of two I. R. A. hunger strikers in prison, incited the bombing as a retaliation against the government and police.

Caretakers Narrowly Escape

Damage to the Chapel Royal, where memorial windows were shattered, was described as irreparable. Only last week, St. Patrick's Banqueting Hall, partly wrecked today, was the scene of a dinner given by De Valera for United States Minister David Gray. Birmingham Tower also was damaged.

The families of several Castle caretakers narrowly escaped death when the bomb went off.

"I was thrown out of bed by the force of the explosion," said one woman. "The building rocked. I could hear the crash of glass and people screaming."

Colm to Address G. W. Economic Parley

Gerhard Colm, of the New School for Social Research and the Department of Commerce, will be the chief speaker at the second session of the Conference on National Economic Policy at 8 o'clock tonight at the George Washington University Hall of Government.

He replaces Marriner Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, who was forced to withdraw from the program because of illness. Colm will discuss "Financing of Recovery." Subsequent sessions of the conference, which is under the sponsorship of the university, will be May 15 and June 7.

Laborites Demand More Men, Guns

Andalsnes all the way down to the edge of Lillehammer without much interference. The Germans, however, rushed powerful forces north to meet them before they took Lillehammer, which is important because it is the gateway to the great valley leading to Oslo.

Norwegian sources here say the British forces were outnumbered in this area and greatly handicapped in meeting the attack from the air.

Another strong German unit is now driving north through the Glomma River valley. The object of this drive is to establish communication between the strong German forces in Oslo and the comparatively weak Nazi garrison at Trondheim. Unless communication can be established between these two points the German position at Trondheim must, it is felt here, become eventually precarious, for even if the British are held back north of Trondheim, they are said to be entrenched in Storen, which lies between Trondheim and the German forces driving north.

It probably will not be long before the Germans contact the Allies somewhere along the railroad between Storen and Roros, which is located in the mountains of east Norway, near the Swedish frontier, about 300 miles north of Oslo.

Town Surprised

The rapidity of the German advance on Roros surprised the Norwegians, who suddenly discovered Nazi troops only a few miles from the edge of the town before they could get the entire 6,000 inhebitants evacuated.

In an effort to hold up the German advance the Norwegians sent a train full of troops out to meet them. A German pilot, however, according to a reliable report, located the train and set it on fire with bombs. The number of casualties in this action is unknown.

Though the Germans apparently reached Roros they are reported to have had considerable trouble on the way.

(A later Associated Press dispatch from Stockholm said the Germans had abandoned Poros.)

Just north of Rena, which is on the Glomma between Elverum and Roros, it is reported that the Norwegians blew up a large railroad bridge just as a German troop train was crossing it. Many Nazi troops are said to have been killed.

The Allied tactics, despite the initial setback, remain the same—to halt the Nazi march northward and isolate the German garrison in Trondheim and then with an air base behind them to push south to Oslo.

At the same time the Allies are determined to keep up an incessant bombing of German air bases in an effort to keep the German bombers on the ground.

Norwegian officials are urging the British and French to make a conquest of Trondheim as soon as possible. As the former Norwegian capital has been the scene of crowning of Norwegian king it is felt its capture would have a great moral effect on the Norwegians.

Discuss Norse Finances

Three important Norwegian officers and two Norwegian politicians arrived here today. The politicians are Oivind Lorentzen, Norwegian director of shipping, and Arne Sunde, former cabinet minister and financial expert. They both are to confer with British officials on support for Norwegian shipping and currency.

It was stated officially today that between April 9 and April 22 26 German supply transport ships were sunk or scuttled as a result of Allied action and 10 others hit by torpedoes, 1 set on fire by air attack and four other German ships captured. Though all these were announced before British officials recalled them again in answer to German claims that their men and supplies are going to Norway "according to plan."

These accomplishments are acknowledged by the Norwegians who point out, however, that while 3,000 German dead have been washed ashore in Oslo Fjord, many thousands of other German troops are landing in Oslo every week.

Communists' Fate Weighed

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 25.—Sir John Anderson, home secretary, told the House of Commons tonight he is considering the question of declaring the Communist Party an illegal organization as part of the general problem of strengthening defense regulations for the purpose of checking any internal activities that may impede Britain's national war effort.

The status of the Communist Party was brought up by Capt. Hammersley, conservative, who charged it was, in effect, an agent for a foreign power. Sir John, in reply, did not commit himself definitely as to what action would be taken to combat the Communists.

Replying to a series of questions dealing with the activities of the so-called fifth column, the home secretary said:

"I have for some time been considering the activities of certain small groups of people, of which some appear to be deliberately anxious to hinder the war effort. The national resolution that the war must be waged with all our strength is such that these activities have had, so far, little practical effect. Nevertheless the possible consequence of continuous attempts to impede the war effort cannot be ignored."

The secretary said the matter of checking harmful propaganda was discussed when defense regulations were adopted on October 31, but at the same time there was general agreement an effort should be made, even in wartime, to avoid interference with the propagation of opinions held by small minorities. He added, "there is a risk, however, that the liberty allowed by our traditional principles may be abused by extremists, some of whom are anxious to destroy that liberty."

Budget Reply Halted

By Raymond Daniell.

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 25.—The booming of Big Ben striking 11 tonight cut off Sir John Simon's reply to critics of his budget proposals and left the most important questions raised by the opposition unanswered.

Not until Parliament reconvenes after the long week-end recess, which even the war cannot interrupt, will its members and the British public have a chance of learning just what the chancellor's new "purchase tax" implies, nor how hard it is likely to hit their pocketbooks and family budgets.

Senate Adds $25,000,000 To CCC Fund

River, Harbor Bill Passed 40-29 Despite Plea for Delay

By the Associated Press

Spending forces regained control of the sometimes-economy-minded Senate yesterday, pushing through a $150,000,000 Rivers and Harbors Bill and adding $25,000,000 to the appropriation for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The 40-to-29 vote approving the rivers and harbors measure cut sharply across party lines.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, spoke of a "lean and empty Treasury that is yawning for accretion" and Senators Reed (Democrat), of Kansas, and Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming, urged that the bill be delayed until next year. Schwartz expressed fear that "when we consider the relief bill for the needy, we will look in the sack and find there's nothing left."

The measure would authorize appropriations beginning in 1941 for more than 140 waterway projects throughout the country. The finally approved bill, which now goes to the House, compared with an $83,848,100 measure passed earlier by the House and a $231,000,000 bill recommended by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Under customary procedure, a joint Senate-House conference committee would seek to work out differences between the two chambers.

After approving the waterway legislation, the Senate took up the $308,000,000 appropriation for Federal labor and security activities and promptly raised the CCC appropriation from $253,000,000 to $280,000,000.

Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, led the drive for the higher figure, and won by a vote of 43 to 14.

O'Mahoney argued that if the $25,000,000 were not added it would be necessary to close 156 CCC camps and dismiss 30,000 enrollees after the next fiscal year begins July 1.

'Turn Back, Your Policy Will Terminate In Finis Germania,' Thyssen Told Hitler

Exiled Banker Reveals Futile Pleas to Fuehrer

FRITZ THYSSEN

By the Associated Press

New York, April 25.—"Turn back as long as it is still possible," Hitler was urged last December by Fritz Thyssen, German banker, steel and coal king, who financed the Nazi party and made possible Hitler's rise to power.

"Your policy will terminate in a finis Germania," he said.

Thyssen's communication to the man he joined forces with willingly when the Nazi party was young, is one of a number of hitherto unpublished letters from Thyssen to Hitler, which appear in the current issue of Life Magazine.

The letters bare a burning German patriotism and a bitterness against the course of the Nazi regime.

In making public the letters, Thyssen fulfilled a threat he made last December to Hitler that he would "call upon the conscience of the world" by disclosing the full story of his flight from Germany, events which led up to the confiscation of his vast properties, the denationalization of himself and his wife by Nazi decree and the warrant for his arrest which has made him today a fugitive in France.

Helpless Protests Revealed

The letters tell of Thyssen's increasingly helpless protest against dictatorship.

"Think of the oath you swore at Potsdam to uphold the German constitution," Thyssen wrote Hitler. "Give back to the Reich a free parliament, give back to the German nation freedom of conscience, freedom of thought and freedom of speech.

"Create anew the foundations which are necessary to restore law and justice, which will make it possible to trust a German treaty again. Stop the useless bloodshed and Germany will obtain peace with honor and will preserve her unity . . .

"Should the German nation be prevented from hearing my words which are the words of a free and upright German, than I shall call upon the conscience of the world, and shall let the world pass judgment. I am waiting. Hiel Germany."

"Sole Error . . . Believed in You"

A Thyssen letter of December 11 from Dusseldorf reads in part: "I state herewith that no court of administrative procedure whatsoever has been instituted against me . . . my conscience is clear.

"I feel free of guilt. My sole error was that I believed in you, Adolf Hitler, the Fuehrer, and in the movement you led. I believed in you with all the ardor of one passionately German."

The letter urged Hitler not to forget "that your rise was not the result of a great revolutionary action, but was due to the country's liberal constitution to which you are bound by oath."

Thyssen wrote the German leader that he had protested "against the persecution of Christianity, against the brutalization of its priests, against the desecration of its churches," and that "when on November 9, 1938, the Jews were robbed and tortured in the most cowardly and brutal manner and their synagogues destroyed all over Germany, I protested once more."

Fought Russian Accord

The German agreement with Russia brought renewed protests from Thyssen who wrote Hitler at the time that "your present policy amounts to suicide. Its beneficiary will be your arch-enemy of yesterday (Stalin) who is your 'friend of today.'"

Thyssen said earlier this month that "war will make Germany dependent on Russia in the matter of raw materials and thereby she will lose her position as a world power."

"Your new policy, Mr. Hitler," Thyssen wrote, "is driving Germany into an abyss and the German nation into perdition."

Thyssen asserted that Germany's declaration of war was voted at a Reichstag meeting at which "approximately 100 members were absent—their seats taken by party officials" and that Thyssen demanded of Field Marshal Goering that the German public be informed that "as a member of the Reichstag I have voted against the war."

"Let Freedom Rise"

Thyssen declared that "I am and always shall be German with all my heart, with all my thoughts and endeavors; I profess proudly and loudly my German nationality and shall continue to do so with my last breath."

"Listen to me," Thyssen wrote Hitler last December, "and you will hear the voice of a tormented German nation that is crying out to you: 'Turn back, let freedom, right and humaneness rise again in the German Reich.'"

4,000 Pupils Cheer Folk Festival

show to the cowboy dancers who closed it, all the participants received an ovation seldom accorded a professional cast. Especially vociferous were the 4,000 public and parochial school children who crowded the house from front row to top tier at the matinee.

For the afternoon student audience as for the more sophisticated evening spectators, the opening dances of the Kiowa Indians from Oklahoma provided the lively keynote to which the rest of the program was pitched. Bells jingled and feathered headdresses swayed as the tribal drummers beat out the rhythm of the war dances.

A startling contrast was provided by the subtle grace of the Hawaiian hula that followed. Iolani Luahine, most exquisite of the island Territory's dancers, demonstrated to a spellbound audience the way hula has been performed in Hawaiian ceremonials for centuries. Sweet-voiced Rosalie Montgomery, also of Honolulu, accompanied the dances with traditional chants.

From Albuquerque, N. Mex., came Spanish folk songs sung by two boys to the accompaniment of their guitars; from Tennessee, Negro spirituals sung by a chorus of school children. The unique songs and instrumental music of a lumberjack group from Rice Lake, Wis., made a lively contribution to the musical portion of the program.

Sword Dances Performed

Fairhope, Ala., sent a troupe of attractive youngsters to perform English sword dances. From the Tennessee mountains came another youthful group which presented old-time singing games. Fiddlers included John Weaver, of Polk County, N. C., and Mrs. Ben S. Scott, lively octogenarian from Turlock, Calif.

A cake-walk group from Chattanooga, Tenn.; French rondes by a youthful Chicago team; the famed Tamburitza Orchestra, of Duquesne University, and poignant cotton-field songs by a Dillard University chorus were among other highlights of the show. Dillard University is in New Orleans.

Quaint Dutch costumes and rhythmic stomping of wooden shoes featured the scrubbers' dance by girls from Holland, Mich. And the pioneer square dance group from Denver, Colo., closed the program with a bang!

Town Crier Amos Kubik, of Provincetown, Mass., whose bell began and ended yesterday's programs, also will be seen at matinee and evening shows today and tomorrow.

Indians, Hawaiians to Repeat

Audiences at all four remaining programs will see the Kiowa Indian dancers and the Hawaiian group. The Spanish-American singers who appeared yesterday also will take part this afternoon and evening, although their songs will be different.

Features of today's performances will be country dances by Madeira School girls, folk tunes from West Virginia and Arkansas, and a program of Irish songs and dances. Kentucky mountaineers will sing the plain song chants peculiar to their region, and the Cotton Blossom Singers of Piney Woods School in Mississippi will present spirituals.

A group of anthracite miners from Pennsylvania will introduce to audiences the songs and dances which make up the principal entertainment in mining villages. Cowboy songs and dances, Lithuanian dances, Finnish folk music and camp-meeting songs also are included in today's show.

Highlights of tomorrow's programs will be bamboo pipe tunes and fiddle tunes; dances of Sweden, Germany and the Massachusetts hills; sailors' chanteys and soldier songs; Kentucky and Vermont fiddle tunes, and spirituals.

Folklore institutes open to the public will be held today and tomorrow at the Harrington Hotel from 10 a. m. until noon. Subjects to be taken up today include Gregorian music, Finnish magic incantations, Gaelic songs, fiddle tunes, migrant folk songs, the history of whaling, and New England folk dances.

Today's student matinee starts promptly at 2:15 p. m. so that pupils may get home on time and that traffic difficulties may be avoided. Those who have tickets are urged to arrive early. The festival management has announced another sellout for this afternoon; as a result, tickets for the matinee will not be available at Constitution Hall at the time of the performance.

Tickets for tonight's show, as well as for tomorrow's matinee and evening performance, are still on sale at The Post.

Italy Refuses French Parley On Differences

'Moment Inopportune,' Ciano Is Reported Telling Paris Envoy

By Reynolds Packard
United Press Staff Writer

Rome, April 25.—Italy refused to resume conversations with France regarding "outstanding differences" between the two countries when French Ambassador Francois-Poncet suggested the move to Foreign Minister Ciano today, unimpeachable sources said tonight.

Unimpeachable French and Italian quarters said that Vount Viano replied that he regretted that "the moment is not opportune."

Francois-Poncet, a usually reliable source hinted, intimated that this might be the last time the French government would be in a position to make overtures.

Disclosure of this conversation followed an accusation by the Italian ministry of colonies, through its weekly publication, that Great Britain and France are massing a huge army in the Near East with the intention of attacking Italy's African possessions and extending the war.

Great Britain and France hope to drag in Turkey and Egypt, the publication alleged, and accused the British of "foul maneuvers in the Mediterranean which are most explosive in a zone dear to Italy."

The maneuverings in the Near East were described as "an attempt to bluff Italy" but the publication asserted that Italy cannot be bluffed, as was shown during the Ethiopian campaign when the British home fleet was concentrated in the Mediterranean.

Paris Willing, Says Premier

By P. J. Philip.
Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 25.—Premier Reynaud repeated today before the Chamber of Deputies commission of foreign affairs the statement he made last week to the Senate commission, that France remains willing at any time to take up the discussion with the Italian government of the questions at issue between the two countries.

It was not the fault of France, he said, that such a discussion had not been already begun. His government was and would remain convinced that it was perfectly possible to harmonize the needs and the legitimate interests of the Mediterranean peoples, he added.

Reviewing the Norwegian situation, the premier said that the first objective of the Allied naval and expeditionary forces had been secured. They had prevented the joining of the main German force in Norway with the units in the north and in doing so they had both cut Germany's access to the iron supplies, and incidentally sunk a great many German naval and transport ships.

House to Permit Wage Law Change

try in the South was not dependent on "cheap wages and long hours." Cox retorted that the North "has advantages we haven't got."

The Georgian asserted that "of course" he was opposed to a uniform wage scale throughout the country.

Continues Feud

Mrs. Norton continued her long-standing feud with Cox by asserting that the Rules Committee is "under the domination of men who come from districts where poor people are not allowed to vote on account of the poll tax."

She alleged that the Barden bill would take "2,000,000 of the lowest paid workers" out of reach of the law.

The bill sponsored by Mrs. Norton and the Labor Committee would make a few agricultural-processing exemptions from the wage-hour act, while the Ramspeck bill contains no amendments of this type.

In his statement quoted by Early, President Roosevelt said that the wage-hour law "has been administered with discretion, and no substantial groups of employers have been damaged."

The act, he said, "is in an evolutionary stage where we are learning by practical experience in the field as to whether and how it should be amended. It is too early to form definite conclusions . . ."

Mrs. Norton said she construed the President's letter "as meaning he prefers no amendments to the act."

Neutrality Act Applied to Norway

several weeks since it was made available.

The proclamation did not mention Denmark, invaded by Germany, and the $10,000,000 credit given that nation remains technically in good standing. But Denmark has used none of it, and numerous legal obstacles might prevent future efforts to use it.

Germany, France and England already are on a cash-and-carry basis, although the Allies' superior sea power permits them alone to augment their own war materials with purchases in this country.

The proclamations signed here today took no note of Germany's invasion of Denmark, and the White House had nothing to say about the chances that similar documents pertaining to Denmark would be issued.

A third proclamation, following the precedents invoked last fall when the European conflict began, barred Norwegian submarines from American ports and territorial waters.

Backing up his proclamations, the Chief Executive prescribed in an executive order regulations for enforcing the neutrality of the United States.

Earlier this month, the Chief Executive had extended the "combat zone," which American vessels are forbidden to enter, to include all waters adjacent to Norway. He also took action to insure that Norwegian capital, credits and property in this country would not fall into German hands.

The proclamations were issued after a White House aide said Mr. Roosevelt was standing by to leave for Washington on a half hour's notice, if need be. His special train was being held in Atlanta and arrangements have been made for the President to motor there and board it whenever he believes conditions warrant.

Reich Turns To Sweden

Great Britain and France.

These persons said categorically that Germany has no designs on Sweden. Nevertheless:

"We must be prepared for all eventualities, of course," they added.

Thus Sweden was put into German diplomatic perspective while the official news agency and the high command were stressing what they said was the British bombing of "open, undefended towns of no military importance," and implying that this sort of thing will be repaid, "bomb for bomb," should it continue.

London Denies Charge

The open towns which the Germans say were bombed are a village in Schleswig-Holstein and a sea resort on the Island of Sylt. (London denied the charges.)

Otherwise, German official sources drew a northern military picture which showed German reinforcements racing north toward Trondheim on two railroads while German troops sealed Steinkjer, further north, by occupying important roads and passes; strong Allied detachments pressing the Germans north of Narvik while British warships tossed shells into that Arctic port; German planes bombing Allied transport columns and scattering the Norwegian main army near Dombus, railway junction point which the northbound German reinforcements are approaching.

At sea the Germans claimed the sinking, by air bombs, of a British minesweeper, firing of a destroyer and the hitting of two transports with heavy bombs off Norway's west coast. In the Skagerrak, other planes were reported to have scattered a fleet of French destroyers, sunk two submarines and hit a British cruiser.

Drive Launched On Property Tax

are threatened only by sinister alien forces from abroad. They are only a drop in the bucket. Our dangers are more indirect and more subtle. One of the most serious forces is the growth of taxation and its effect on rural life."

A statement to the conference from Gov. Clarence D. Martin, of Washington, announced the successful operation of a measure adopted in 1932 limiting the total State and local government general property tax to 20 mills.

Martin stated that home building has increased sharply in Washington and is expected to be a major factor in relieving unemployment. New industries have been attracted to the State and tax delinquency has almost disappeared. He said that a 2 per cent sales tax, profits from the State-operated liquor business, the gas tax and other levies have provided all the additional revenue needed.

Lawrence G. Holmes, secretary of the conference, reported that nine States which have placed a ceiling on real estate levies show an average tax decrease of almost 24 per cent over the past ten years. The limitation, he added, forced a broadening of the tax base and economy in government.

Cooper sounded the keynote of the conference when he called "our archaic tax system" the "key log of our economic jam." He estimated real estate taxes take $4,500,000,000 of the $7,000,000,000 gross annual income derived from privately owned real estate in the United States, and added:

"We have permitted taxes to be levied on property in a cumulative manner without regard to income or value and without serious effort to shift unjust burdens to other forms of wealth."

Yesterday's sessions were opened by a District resident, James McD. Shea, president of the National Apartment Owners Association, who said "real estate taxes, grown beyond ability to pay, are confiscating homes, farms, apartments and office buildings; blighting large areas of our cities, and undermining the very foundations of property ownership."

He said objectives of the conference were "to study the apparent effects of the disintegration of the property tax and to consider alternatives for equitable tax readjustment which would halt the impending destruction of real estate security, business activity and governmental stability."

The conference is sponsored by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the National Grange, the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, Mortgage Bankers Association of America and the National Apartment Owners Association.

It will conclude today with a dinner at 7 p. m. in the Mayflower.

British Seize Opel, Nazi Auto-Maker

New York, April 25.—Fritz Von Opel, general manager of the Opel Automotive Works, Germany's largest manufacturer of low-priced cars, was removed from the Italian liner Conte di Savoia at Gibraltar last Friday by British contraband control officers. He was traveling on a passport of the principality of Lichtenstein, it was disclosed today when the vessel arrived here.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Nazi Columns Retreat, Dig In

to Roros or as they chased the Germans back to Tolga was not clear in advices filtering across the Swedish frontier.

It was evident, however, that the Norwegians were thankful for the British aid coming to them from Storen, for they had been engaged in a tiring, grueling delaying battle as the German blitzkrieg rolled northward.

Late last night the Norwegian commander, Gen. Ruge, praised his troops for their spirit and courage and the depressing withdrawal, and then declared:

"But now the time for withdrawing has passed.

"Allied troops are in northern Norway, in Trondelag (Trondheim district) and here where we are fighting in order to collaborate. Go on in the same fighting spirit and confidence as up to now."

Nazi Rear Lightly Held

The Germans, in their advance, apparently were strong enough to brush aside what opposition remained after their planes cleared the way. But they were reported to be in small numbers, leaving but small guard units to hold the line open behind them.

The Norwegian Telegraph Agency said Marshal Goering's bombers were roaring all day yesterday across the mountains and fjords of western Norway, bombing villages and machine-gunning luckless civilians near military objectives.

A German plane was shot down during the attacks on Andalsnes, south of Trondheim, where units of the British northwestern expeditionary force have disembarked.

The agency said that, though high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped, the damage was limited to one cowshed.

Three wooden houses were set afire when four planes raided Molde, "the Town of Roses," at the mouth of the fjord at Andalsnes. Two persons were feared to have been trapped in the blazing houses. The dispatch said the planes machine-gunned the streets.

In another series of raids on Alesund, on the coast southwest of Molde, a school used as a first aid station was fired by incendiary bombs and the blaze spread to surrounding houses. A few persons were reported wounded there.

The British, reinforcing Norwegians at Lillehammer, were swept back 30 miles by the German machine in the advance to Ringebu. The Allies were reported retreating to Otta, 30 more miles north of Ringebu.

Swedish news agency correspondents who reported the British at Storen, 90 airline miles north of Otta and 50 miles northwest of Roros, said both sides were rushing reinforcements into central Norway.

The Germans are landing large numbers of troops every day at Oslo, it was reported by reliable Norwegian sources, and rushing them by air and motor to the Trondheim and northern fronts.

The advances to Roros and Ringebu apparently also are for the partial purpose of reinforcing the Germans in Trondheim.

But the column reaching Roros, Swedish correspondents said, appeared to be small, and left behind only small guard units to maintain its line of communications.

Minimum forces were left at Elverum, 60 miles north of Oslo, where a number of wounded Germans are under treatment. Only a small force is being kept in Oslo.

The Allied aim is to isolate German-held Trondheim with forces moving up from Andalsnes, debarkation point about 100 miles to the south, and from Namsos, about the same distance north.

The Germans say they have, already, smashed this effort by victory at Steinkjer, north of Trondheim.

Germany's two-pronged drive north and west across narrow Norway is pointed, moreover, between the two British forces.

Thus, if the northbound Germans close the 70-mile gap still separating them from their forces on the coast, they will have accomplished three significant aims:

1. The German hold on Trondheim, challenged by Allied forces moving south from Namsos and north from Andalsnes, will be vastly strengthened.

2. The Allies will be prevented from establishing communication with inland Norway along the railroad lines radiating from Trondheim.

3. Germany will have bisected Norway with a line stretching from the Swedish frontier in the southeast, below Oslo, to Trondheim with the most important areas of the invaded kingdom in Nazi hands. They already claim complete domination of southern Norway up to the por of Stavenger.

But the hardest part of the job still lies ahead.

The whole strategy on both sides seems to be a fast race of outflanking movements on which, foreign military observers believe, may turn the whole war in Norway.

Teamsters' Antitrust Trial Opens

Union Denies Jurisdictional Fight Caused Strike

The causes of strikes which hampered $4,000,000 in Government building operations here last year were scrutinized yesterday in the District Court, where the teamsters' union and five of its officers are on trial for alleged violation of the antitrust laws.

The Government charges the strikes were called by the teamsters because of a dispute with the Operating Engineers' Union over which union should enroll drivers of concrete mixer-delivery trucks.

Jurisdictional Fight Aired

As Justice F. Dickinson Letts adjourned the trial until Monday, John P. Shilds, president of the engineers' union, was just beginninng to tell his story of the jurisdictional dispute with the teamsters.

Chief Government witness yesterday was George L. Potts, Baltimore contractor, who testified that teamster union members working on the new Census Building struck last September 12 because engineer members were driving the concrete trucks.

Special Assistant Attorney General Walter R. Hutchinson, who is prosecuting, contends that such strikes amount to combinations in restraint of trade and violate the antitrust laws.

Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the American Federation of Labor, defense attorney, disputes this contention, and claims in addition that wages, hours and other legitimate issues were involved in all the strikes that were called.

On cross-examination, Padway drew from Potts testimony that no strikes were called after last September 26, when a wage and hour agreement was reached, covering dump truck operators.

Wages Called the Issue

Teamster spokesmen charged that employers professed respect for their contracts with the engineers because these provided lower wages and longer hours than teamster contracts would have required.

The defendants are Local 636 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters; Thomas O'Brien, international union business agent; Charles J. Bell, local president; Linwood A. Trainham, secretary-treasurer; Stuart M. Keyser, recording secretary, and Aubrey Z. Stream, local business agent.

Welfare Board To Weigh Bill On Baby Brokers

The proposed "baby brokers" bill for the District, designed to prevent commercialization of placement of children for adoption, will advance another step Monday, when the Board of Public Welfare will consider a draft of the legislation.

If the board approves the bill, it will be sent to the Commissioners and the Corporation Counsel's office.

At its meeting at 2 p. m. Monday, the board will consider a proposed bill to replace the Bastardy Act of 1912 and to provide additional safeguards for children born out of wedlock.

The bill to regulate placement of children provides that no child-placing agency shall be maintained in the District unless licensed by the Board of Public Welfare.

Office Opened For Symphony's Drive to Live

Temporary headquarters for the National Symphony's "life-or-death" campaign for a $107,600 sustaining fund were opened yesterdy in room 211 of the Woodward Building. Fred G. Spaulding, drive director, will be in charge.

The headquarters will be moved to suite 225 in the Carlton Hotel May 4. The campaign is scheduled to begin May 6 and end May 16.

A. F. E. Horn, the campaign's general chairman, reported he is rapidly assembling personnel for the drive.

Dummy ducks the opening lead of the club queen. West continues clubs and South ruffs. The diamond deuce is led and West takes his ace. He leads his last club, and South again ruffs. Declarer cannot risk a finesse against the trump queen. He can make the contract even with a trump loser, provided that he does not take three rounds of trumps. The correct play is to cash the king and ace of trumps, then cash the diamonds, discarding spades from dummy. No matter when West takes his trump queen, four of dummy's spades can be discarded on the diamonds, and South's spade loser can be ruffed out with dummy's last trump.

Methodists Oppose Envoy To Vatican

Conference in Cheers As Bishops Oppose Diplomatic Relations

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., April 25.—Delegates to the general conference of the new United Methodist Church broke into applause for five minutes today, when they heard an objection of the Council of Bishops to any possible diplomatic relations between the United States and the Vatican.

Bishop Francis John McConnell, of New York, read to 776 conference delegates the quadrennial message of the bishops, which praised President Roosevelt's interest in world peace and added:

"But we do deplore and must firmly resist any union of church and state, and are, and will be unalterably opposed to any establishment of diplomatic relations between the Vatican and the United States."

The message did not mention the name of Mr. Roosevelt's personal peace envoy to the Vatican, Myron C. Taylor. It stated the Roman Catholic Church "does not yet abate one trace of her claim to totalitarian authority over all aspects of human life (and) recent events reveal anew her purpose to press to the utmost even the most doubtful diplomatic advantages, especially in her relation to the United States."

The bishops hailed the "inherent decency" of present-day youth and asserted this new generation had been underrated morally.

"It is quite the custom," they said, "to speak of the youth of the present generation . . . as if they merited severe condemnation because of moral laxity. It is evident there has been, and is, much looseness. But what may not be so apparent is the inherent decency of the generation now coming into power . . ."

Protesting against sale of American war supplies to "any aggressor nation," the bishops condemned warfare, asserted the younger generation's protest against it was "clean and sound," and expressed sorrow that humanity couldn't be made to realize the "horror" and "uselessness" of war.

"Aside from professional militarists," the report said, "nobody today sees any glory in war . . . War costs so much that the conflict now going on is likely to bankrupt the so-called western civilizations . . . . Men do not want war, but material costs, pain and death do not restrain them from it."

Reapportionment Bill Signed by Roosevelt

President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill providing for automatic reapportionment of the 435 seats in the House on the basis of the 1940 census. The reapportionment will be effective in 1942.

Postlude

Composers' Group of League of American Pen Women present a concert Thursday night in the Women's City Club. Program of compositions by Pearl Adams, Iris Brussels, Elizabeth Merz Butterfield, Bonita Crowe, Dorothy Radde Emery, Mary Howe, Alma Grayce Miller and Harriet Ware. Participating artists: Margaret Spencer Besler, soprano; Ione Hoffman, mezzo-soprano; Lily Garrett, contralto; Margaret Merz Richardson, violin; Fred Denniston, tenor; Clarke Paulsen, barytone; Alice Finckel, piano; Millard Taylor, violin; John Alden Finckel, violoncello.

BROWN

Composer members attending the annual convention of the League of American Pen Women met for the second time last evening in their dual capacities as writers in tone and hostesses to invited guests at a concert of their own provision. In the presentation of the program they had the willing assistance of resident musicians, and the occasion had a cooperative and friendly atmosphere quite refreshing in its contrast to the usual formality that convention establishes between performers and listeners.

It was an occasion, too, when the critic felt no call upon his professional acumen in detecting flaws, for the music was presented in the spirit of artistic companionship. Some of the compositions had been published and others were still in manuscript, but there was no rivalry between them. Enjoyment of merits was the rule of the evening, and there were merits in plenty to be enjoyed. One was impressed by the uniformly high quality of workmanship and by the evident sincerity of the motivation.

While the greater part of the program was vocal, variety of subject and treatment kept one's interest stimulated. From Alma Grayce Miller's opera, "Mirage,' was excerpted a barytone aria. Dorothy Radde Emery was represented by two vocal trios with violin obbligato; "Serenade to Vida" and "Moon Madness." Iris Brussels offered three songs: "Butterflies," "Deep in the Night" and "Thursday."

"Devotions," "Boats" and "Omnipresence" were the contributions of Pearl Adams. Bonita Crowe programmed "Journey's End" and "You and I," and Elizabeth Merz Butterfield had her place with "My Country's Creed" and "America for Me."

Harriet Ware, who was unable to be present, was represented by "Joy of the Morning," "Hindu Slumber Song" and "Sunlight Waltz." The program closed with a delightful trio for piano and strings by Mary Howe.

M. T. Johnston Funeral Planned For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Matthew Tilghman Johnston, 69, a former lawyer of the Maryland Eastern Shore and a resident of Washington for several years, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Easton, Md. Mr. Johnston died Wednesday in Baltimore.

Born in Easton, Md., he was a descendant of Col. Tench Tilghman, aide de camp to Gen. Washington. For several years he was president of the Talbot National Bank in Easton. He was graduated from Columbia University.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Julia G. Johnston, and a sister, Mrs. Frances Goldsborough, both of Baltimore.

Sister John Baptist To Be Buried Here Today

Funeral services for Sister John Baptist, born Delia Costello, Dominican nun, formerly of Washington, will be at 3 p. m. today at St. Dominic's Catholic Church, Sixth and E street southwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery. She died Tuesday in New York.

Born in Washington about 58 years ago, Sister John Baptist was educated at Notre Dame Academy here, and was employed in the Treasury Department before joining the sisterhood 25 years ago.

She was stationed at convents in Sinsinawa, near Superior, Wis., and at Evanston, Ill., before going to her last post in New York City.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Margaret MacMahon and Mrs. Mary Collins, both of Washington.

Mrs. S. A. Meagher Dies Here at 65

Mrs. Sarah A. Meagher, 65, a resident of Washington for 45 years, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. McLarney, 35 Girard street northeast.

Mrs. Meagher was born in Philadelphia, and came here about 1895. Twice married, her second husband was Richard Meagher, an employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, who died about 20 years ago.

Surviving, besides Mrs. McLarney, is a son by her first marriage, Edward Connolly, of Newport, R. I. Requiem mass will be at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at St. Martin's Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Alaska Could Support Millions, Says Dimond

Anthony J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from Alaska, yesterday told the Junior Board of Commerce the Territory "easily could support a population of more than 10,000,000 persons." He said there are only approximately 75,000 persons in the Territory today.

Minor Hudson presided at the luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel.

Dr. Pieters, Is Dead at 74; Noted Botanist

Was Chief Agronomist In Agriculture Dept.; Funeral Sunday

Funeral services for Dr. Adrain J. Pieters, 74, noted botanist and former chief agronomist of the Agriculture Department, will be at 3:30 p. m. Sunday at his home, 7206 Blair road northwest. Burial will be in Holland, Mich. Mr. Pieters died yesterday at his home after a short illness.

A specialist in the growth of legumes and the culture of clover, Dr. Pieters was the author of numerous books and papers on agricultural subjects. Entering the Department of Agriculture in 1895, he retired as chief agronomist of the Soil Conservation Service in 1938.

Dr. Pieters was a native of Alto, Wis., and was educated at Cornell University and the University of Michigan, where he received a doctor's degree in 1915. From 1910 to 1912 he studied botany at the University of Heidelberg.

In 1901 he was placed in charge of the division of seed introduction and distribution, from which grew the present Bureau of Plant Industry. He headed the Division of Forage Crops and Diseases of the Plant Industry Bureau from 1931 to 1935.

Dr. Pieters was awarded fellowships in the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Agronomy Society. He was also a member of the American Botanical Society, the Cosmos Club, Sigma Xi fraternity, and the Takoma Park Citizens Association.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Burr Pieters, of Washington; a brother, Albertus Pieters, and a sister, Miss Johanna Pieters, both of Holland, Mich.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

LES BROWN GOES BIG. With Les Brown and his boys "giving out" in the grand manner, the Metronome Room has registered the biggest week in its history. When Les arrived there was some talk about his 14-piece band being awfully big for the Metronome, but we're told the Wardman management said in effect, "Go ahead and blow the roof off if you want, as long as the folks come pouring in like this." . . . Bill Downer and most of his Nightingale orchestra were in the Metronome the other evening and we had the pleasure of introducing young maestros Brown and Downer.

P. S. Tonight's most important event is the appearance of Song Writer Jimmy Van Heusen in the Metronome. He'll sing and play his new music for Billy Rose's 1940 Aquacade at the World's Fair for the first time in public.

BUDDY'S A PAPA! Lotus' favorite singer, Buddy Shaner, is the brand-new papa of a 6-pound boy. Buddy and his attractive wife, Mildred, were married while Buddy was on that extended vacation last summer. Buddy says the baby looks like him, "has black eyes and needs a hair cut."

FACES IN PLACES. Shoreham. Representative Richard M. Kleberg, of Texas, owner of what is probably the world's biggest ranch, introducing his little daughter, Alice, to Dick Nash, the Blue Room dude wrangler. Any time that Dick gets tired of swinging a rope at night spots, we're told that he can start lassoing dogies on the Kleberg ranch. . . . Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherwood tripping through the lobby on their way to another triumphant night at the National Theater.

Shar-zad. Eric von Stroheim, famed movie director and actor, sitting away back in a corner. . . . Ann Corio, ace Broadway beauty, at a table not ten feet away. . . In between, a table of Mutual radio execs. . . . Not one of the celebrities gave each other the slightest tumble, —while we were there, anyway. Von Stroheim turned up at the Hi Hat later.

Troika. A bunch of White House correspondents, all laughing fit to kill at the new Ukrainian sketch presented by Lola and Sasha. Later we saw them talking to Leo who reads the stars. For all we know they were getting material for political columns.

Mayflower Lounge. Mrs. J. Heart T. Mitchell, of New York, and daughter, Anne Mitchell. They stopped in town before sailing to Honolulu, plan to visit an Indian Maharajah later, if the State Department will give them passports to troubled India.

"BETTY BOOP" is at the Casino Royal. She's one of those cute Reeves Sisters who also turn into Harpo Marx, Mae West, Garbo and Jimmy Durante as the mood hits them. Another nifty of the C. R. show is the "Doll Dance" with both the Dancing Darlings and their dolls doing tap steps.

FOLKS YOU LIKE. Lyle Smith who leads his trio at Mayfair. Has more wise cracks than Ringling has elephants. Used to play with Paul Whiteman and George Olsen. His favorite sport is fishing through the ice. . . . Jimmy Nichols, of the Lounge Riviera. Daneers are always stopping to chat with him. He makes the arrangements for those sleek quartets warbled by Riviera's "We Four." . . . Carr and Don, of the Madrillon. They were college pals, are also the pals of all those folks you always see at the Madrillon. Play piano duos that'll really "send" you.

CELEB'S FAVORITES. From Cafe Caprice's Freshmen we hear that Mrs. Evalyn B. McLean's favorite song is "Garden in the Moon" and that Gov. William Vanderbilt of Rhode Island prefers "My Bill" from "Show Boat."

TOMORROW'S BEST TRICKS. A "summer wedding" parade will top off the luncheon style show in the Pall Mall Room tomorrow. . . . If you have afternoon cocktails at the Flag Ship tomorrow, the first one will be full price, the second half price and so on ad infinitum. If you remember, it'll be the smart thing to stop on an even numbered cocktail. . . . If you have luncheon at L'Escargot, you'll feel like spending the rest of the afternoon in its authentic Parisian atmosphere.

ARE YOU FOOD-MINDED? Then you'll be very happy sampling one of those fine seafood platters in the Neptune Room. Especially nice, too, are the always varied and original Neptune desserts. . . . For a snack that's really a full meal, try those savory "specials" in the Harrington Tavern. . . . The crab gumbo soup in Dick's Grill will make you think you're down in Louisiana. . . . Maynard's is shrimp feast headquarters every night in the week, including Sunday when the doors open at 5 p. m.

Ickes Blasts Elliott Report On Internes

Fortas Calls GAO Statements Untrue And Impertinent

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Ickes said yesterday that acting Comptroller General Richard M. Elliott had gone "outside the statutes and far afield" when he questioned employment of a law interne in the Bituminous Coal Division, in reporting to Congress about schools in Government departments.

Ickes' comment brought release of a letter from Abe Fortas, general counsel for the coal division, saying that hte Elliott report contained untrue, misleading and impertinent statements.

Elliott, according to a spokesman for the General Accounting Office, had not decided last night whether to answer Fortas' letter.

Hearings Considered

The report, sent to Congress April 12, reviewed the operation of the schools and training programs, including intern training in the Government departments. Chairman Van Nuys of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments asked members of the committee yesterday to decide whether they want to hold public hearings on the report, and a decision is expected early next week.

Center of the row between Interior officials and Elliott is the section of the report dealing with employment of Tucker Dean, Chicago University law student as intern in the coal division.

Secretary Ickes said he had approved letting Dean work in the Division, and that it involved no expense to the Government. He said it was "beyond" him why Elliott, charged with responsibility for overseeing expenditures, should have raised a question about Dean's project when no money was paid out. The Secretary added that he has no intention of halting similar projects because of Elliott's report.

Fortas told the Comptroller General that the section on Dean was prepared by a GAO investigator who had been discharged from the Interior Department. Both offices declined to identify the investigator.

Fortas added that it was "a plain misstatement of fact" to say, as the report did, that his name appeared on the Dies Committee listing of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

"If your investigator had merely checked the list published in the official report of the Congressional committee or the list appearing in various newspapers, this libelous statement could have been avoided," Fortas said. "This error is due either to incredibly slipshod investigation, gross negligence or willful fabrication."

Denies Any Connection

Fortas said neither he nor members of his family had been connected with the league.

He said Elliott's report had implied that the Interior Department lacked authority to appoint Dean without pay, and he cited the Bituminous Coal Act as permitting use of voluntary help. Failure to report this provision in the act, said Fortas, "is another example of the slipshod work of your investigator or of gross disregard of the facts."

Fortas stated that Elliott had "exceeded the powers which Congress granted you," in examining the Dean project. No public funds were involved, he told Elliott, and "your office does not have a roving commission to inquire into all matters relating to the Government service."

Despite lack of jurisdiction, said Fortas, the GAO had spent Government funds to "investigate" Dean's employment.

In describing Dean's work, Fortas said that the student had traveled to and from Washington at his own expense, and worked here on the same basis. Dean, he said, completed a memorandum on technical problems under the Coal Act, which could not have been done by the regular staff, and which has been "useful and of high quality."

During three months in the Coal Commission Dean, according to Fortas, had access only to public documents, and usually consulted with the staff at lunch or after working hours.

Upholds Intern Plan

Fortas praised the intern plan which brought Dean to the department, and listed these "obvious" advantages of the internship program:

"It builds up a reservoir of trained personnel from which the Government can recruit employes.

"By placing training on an uncompensated basis it saves Government money which would otherwise be spent in salaries to pay employes during training.

"It interests high-standing students in the idea of applying for Government positions and so gives the Government an opportunity to select the best qualified personnel.

"Even if interns do not later enter Government service they are likely to be better citizens because they have had a chance to see the Government in operation.

"It doesn't cost the Government or the taxpayers a cent."

Fortas said that Dean was the only legal intern that had been taken into Interior, and added he believed that anyone interested in improving Government service would approve this "modest experiment."

"I would welcome its discussion and criticism by the public and by authorized Congressional and governmental agencies," said Fortas, "but I deplore an attempt to smear it on irrelevant grounds."

Calendar Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee will speak at a meeting of AFGE Lodge 624 at 7:30 p. m. Sunday, in the auditorium of Glen Dale Sanitarium . . . Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, commander of the District National Guard, will speak at the District department AFGE meeting tonight in the Hamilton Hotel.

Dempsey, Koplovitz To Leave FCC, Form Law Firm

William J. Dempsey, general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, and William C. Koplovitz, assistant general counsel, yesterday announced their intention of resigning to form a partnership for the private practice of radio law.

Known as the "Junior Corcoran & Cohen" team of New Deal attorneys, Dempsey and Koplovitz were hired at the height of the 1938 FCC "purge" by former Chairman Frank R. McNinch.

Dempsey is the son of Representative John J. Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico. He is 34 and Koplovitz is 30.

Tomorrow Deadline For Indiana Voters

Indiana absentee voters who wish to cast their votes in the State primary must make a ballot application not later than tomorrow, the Democratic National Committee reminded them yesterday. Application blanks may be obtained at the Absentee Voters' Bureau, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

Registration must be made in person. Those who are not registered to vote in the primary must do so between May 15 and October 5 if they intend to vote in the November election.

Tuberculosis Fight Not Won, Group Is Told

Testing of Healthy Persons Declared Forward Step

Dr. Herbert L. Edwards, director, New York City Bureau of Tuberculosis, yesterday warned here against overdisplays of enthusiasm that would give the impression that the fight on tuberculosis is about completed.

Speaking before the annual early diagnosis campaign luncheon of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association, in the Y. W. C. A., Dr. Edwards asserted that "case finding is fundamental in the ultimate eradication of the disease."

It deserves more emphasis and a wider application "than has been the practice thus far in most communities," he told the audience of nurses, physicians and association members.

The question of case-finding has been important in the Washington activity against tuberculosis, the association has said. The question has been raised here as to the relative value of X-raying fourth-year public and parochial high school students, "despite the fact that 11 positive cases and 10 suspicious cases were located in a recent high school survey sponsored by the association," it was said.

The greatest advance in case finding today is in the examination of apparently healthy persons, the New York authority stated. "It has been demonstrated over and over again that early tuberculosis is usually without any symptoms of sufficient importance to cause the individual to seek medical advice," he reminded.

"There is ample experience now available to indicate clearly that the old methods of case finding such as the examination of contacts to known cases or deaths, or those with some one or more of the symptoms usually associated with the disease are inadequate to discover all significant cases of tuberculosis."

Rather, it is well known, he said, "that in the majority of instances the appearance of symptoms usually indicates a well established disease."

It is fair to state, he went on, that in most communities where tuberculosis is still a problem, the major emphasis is mass case finding should be among the adult population.

At the conclusion of the luncheon address, the association considered the relative worth of a program of X-raying school children as against one of X-raying persons on relief and in the penal institutions.

Sewer Tunnel 'Holed Through'

A 565-foot tunnel between the Calvert Street Bridge and the Zoo was "holed through" yesterday by workers completing a major section of the Rock Creek east side diversion sewer.

The sewer, financed under the District's $18,150,000 PWA program, will run from Twenty-seventh street and Virginia avenue northwest to Piney Branch Parkway and Sixteenth street northwest.

Detour Bridge Over Rock Creek To Open May 6

The detour bridge along Massachusetts avenue over Rock Creek, now under construction, will be opened to traffic on May 6, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced yesterday.

Heavy trucks operating in the city will be forbidden on the bridge, he said, and interstate trucks will be diverted along Wisconsin avenue. The detour bridge, which will have three lanes for traffic. Two of the lanes will be available to east-bound traffic during the morning rush from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and to west-bound traffic from 4 to 7 p. m. At all other times the middle lane will be closed, Capt. Whitehurst stated.

Traffic lights will control either end of the span, he said.

Mrs. H. S. Shertz Succumbs in Philadelphia

Former Miss Block, Of Washington, Was Attorney's Wife

News of the death Wednesday night in Philadelphia of Mrs. Harold S. Shertz, formerly of Washington, was learned here yesterday.

Before her marriage to the Philadelphia attorney Mrs. Shertz was Miss Bertha Block, of Washington.

Besides her husband Mrs. Shertz leaves three children, Robert Shertz, Miss Peggy Shertz and Mrs. Stephen Gimber. Other survivors are four brothers, Bishop Karl M. Block, of San Francisco; Maj. H. E. Block, Leonard Block, Theodore Block, and two sisters, Miss Paulina Block, of Washington, and Mrs. Hunton Palmer, of Fairfax, Va.

Funeral services and burial will be in Philadelphia tomorrow.

J. H. Patten, D. C. Attorney, Dies by Gas

Wife Discovers Body In Kitchen; Suicide Verdict Is Returned

James Horace Patten, 62, lawyer and publicist, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of his home, 1918 S street northwest, last night. His body stretched across two tables which had been dragged near the stove. A pistol lay on the stove top.

Police said he was discovered by his wife, Mrs. Olive L. Patten, who noticed the kitchen door closed and the key and a note lying nearby. The note instructed Mrs. Patten not to enter the kitchen, but to notify police.

She said her husband had been afflicted with a nervous disorder for some time. District Deputy Coroner Christopher Murphy issued a certificate of suicide by gas.

Patten was born in Sullivan, Ind., and was educated at Harvard College and Harvard Law School. He had been a resident of Washington since 1905. He was assistant legislative superintendent and a member of the executive committee of the American Purity Federation.

A member of the Congressional Country Club and the University Club, Patten was also a member of the Harvard Club of Boston and the Patriotic Order Sons of America. His office was at 1018 Eighteenth street northwest.

Cosmopolitans Hear Plea for Tolerance

Promotion of tolerance and friendship among religious sects was urged yesterday by Dr. A. W. Gottschall, head of activities of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, in the Southeastern United States, before more than 60 members of the Cosmopolitan Club. His talk was given at a luncheon in the Carlton Hotel, with William E. Edelblut presiding.

QUIZ FOR OWNERS OF LOWEST PRICE CARS

PROF. QUIZ says "O.K. folks, how about answering a few questions?"

Q. Which lowest price car proved its superior gas economy in the Gilmore-Yosemite Sweepstakes?
A. The car that averaged 29.19 miles per gallon and defeated all the other largest-selling lowest price cars in gas economy by 17% to 29%. This remarkable performance was made, under A.A.A. supervision, by a Studebaker Champion with an expert driver and low-extra-cost overdrive.

Q. Which lowest price car stands up remarkably under punishing driving?
A. Night and day, for 15,000 miles each, two cars traveled around Indianapolis Speedway, at better than 60 miles per hour, without a single structural defect showing up. The two cars were Studebaker Champions—soundest, strongest cars in the lowest price field.

Q. Which lowest price car has the most attractive styling?
A. The only lowest price car that is designed to perfection, inside and outside, by internationally famous Raymond Loewy—noted for his achievements with streamlined trains, airplanes and steamships. This car is the beautiful, luxurious Studebaker Champion.

Q. Which lowest price car rides most comfortably?
A. The only lowest price car that's equipped with self-stabilizing planar suspension and finest hydraulic shock absorbers—the car with an exceptionally low center of gravity that insures steadiness. This lowest price car is the safe, sure-footed, restful riding Studebaker Champion that makes even rough roads seem smooth.

Q. Which lowest price car is easiest to handle?
A. The only lowest price car with variable ratio steering and foot-regulated, "feather touch" hydraulic brakes. The only lowest price car that rounds turns with "straightaway" steadiness at cruising speeds. Its steering wheel gear shift operates at finger-tip pressure. This lowest price car is the delightfully responsive Studebaker Champion.

Q. Is this lowest price Champion a true blood Studebaker?
A. It certainly is, in every roomy, luxurious inch. It's built of the same fine materials and by the same expert craftsmen as the Commander and President. It comes complete with non-slam door latches, front-compartment hood lock, sealed-beam headlamps. See and drive a Studebaker Champion now—easy C.I.T. terms.

Gauleiter For Norway

In proclaiming "unrestricted German sovereignty" over the occupied area in Norway, Germany would seem to be applying to its latest conquests the system of government previously imposed on Austria, Bohemia-Moravia and part of Poland, but thus far not applicable to Slovakia and Denmark.

Just what this move means is far from clear. It is possible that it is only a war measure to be limited, as is asserted by the German authorities at Oslo, to the period of occupation. It is also possible that in the event of a German victory the period of occupation will be indefinitely extended and that Norway, for all intents and purposes, will become an integral part of the Third Reich.

In any event, the limited authority exercised during the past fortnight by the Nazi-tolerated Oslo "Administrative Council" is now apparently to be further curtailed. According to one Berlin spokesman the new regime will be "completely German." This will be carried out by a Nazi gauleiter, Joseph Terboven.

In actuality it will make precious little difference to the people of the conquered parts of Norway what system of government is imposed upon them during the occupation. For the Nazis are not much given to respecting the wishes of the inhabitants in regions that fall into their hands. Those regions have almost invariably been treated directly or indirectly as part of Germany's lebensraum.

The regime now established in occupied Norway indicates that the respect for old forms manifested by conquering German armies during the World War is now regarded as unnecessary. During the former conflict the question of an outright annexation of Belgium was frequently raised in Germany. But the decision was put off to the end of the war. During the more than four years that Germany was in occupation of that country Belgian sovereignty was at least nominally respected.

While refusing to annex Belgium outright the German conquerers, nevertheless, spared neither the land nor its people. Civil rights were curtailed, huge levies were imposed on the population, Belgian industry became an economic annex of the Reich and no fewer than 120,000 able-bodied Belgians were deported to Germany to work in German factories.

The fate of those parts of Norway which have fallen, or may fall into the hands of the Nazis will be no less grim, regardless of the ultimate aims that are embodied in the extension to those areas of "unrestricted German sovereignty."

Tragic Contrast

Life and death are tragically contrasted when an amusement hall is swept by fire. It took only 15 minutes for the popular Rhythm Club of Natchez, Miss., filled with a gay young crowd dancing to a swing band, to be turned into a hideous death trap for both merrymakers and orchestra. It is reported that scarcely a colored family in the town was left untouched by the disaster.

The cause of the fire responsible for some 200 lives is as yet undetermined. But whether it was carelessness or some perverted deliberate gesture, the number of deaths is a terrible reminder of the results attendant upon inadequate precautions. The dance hall was a converted blacksmith shop, with only one exit and with the windows firmly barred against gate crashers.

Although the toll of lives taken in the Natchez conflagration was much more appalling, the general situation somewhat resembled the recent O street fire here. A building had been converted to another use than that for which it was designed, without the addition of even elementary fire precautions. And in both cases the fire spread rapidly, preventing escape through the single exit.

In Natchez, as here in Washington, the disaster will undoubtedly cause tightening of fire inspection laws and administration. While this is of some value, it is small comfort for the families mourning the needless death of those who never returned from what was anticipated as an evening's harmless pleasure.

The British Reverse

The defeat sustained by the British to the north of Trondheim, so graphically described in the eyewitness account written for the Chicago Daily News Syndicate by Leland Stowe, recalls that it was at just this time of year in 1915 that the Allies made their first landing on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

For the ill-fated Gallipoli campaign Winston Churchill, then first lord of the admiralty, is held primarily responsible. On him, because of his recently enlarged war powers in the British cabinet, will also fall a major share of credit or blame for the fate of the present expedition to Norway. Mr. Churchill has never been the type of man to dodge responsibility. And he has always been ready to shoulder its penalties as well as its privileges.

There is, however, one very notable difference between the Norwegian and Gallipoli campaigns, wholly regardless of the eventual outcome of the former.

The attack on the Dardanelles was essentially an offensive action, designed to relieve pressure on Russia and cut communications between Berlin and Turkey. The British landing in Norway is essentially a defensive action, forced on the London government by the German invasion of Scandinavia and the inherent threat of new Nazi air bases much closer to the industrial heart of Britain.

If the British troops in Norway now are, as reported, deficient in equipment, it is in part due to the fact that the expedition has necessarily been hastily organized, to meet a carefully planned German attack. Shortcomings in material are natural—indeed often inevitable—in a defensive action. It is lack of adequate preparation for an offensive which is inexcusable.

The Allied troops in Norway face a task of enormous difficulty and magnitude. They must be transported 400 miles from the nearest English port and supplied with all the paraphernalia of modern warfare under the constant challenge of a vigilant enemy air force. If a transport carrying artillery is sunk by bombs, obviously the units which should have those guns will have to go without.

Germany, on the other hand, holds the inside lines, with relatively easy transportation problems. And Germany, by the advantage of her ruthless initiative, has been able to supply her army in Norway with essential equipment before the Allies were in a position to strike back.

The decision to fight in Norway, whatever the outcome, was forced on the British. That heavy losses could be expected there was, of course, anticipated. But Winston Churchill, old in the ways of war, knows that one battle seldom decides a campaign and that one campaign seldom decides a war. Recalling Gallipoli, one also recalls that it did not affect the outcome in 1918.

House For Sale

When so many monuments to the ancient culture of Europe have been, or seem soon to be, blasted away by war, it is the more dispiriting to read of the continuing sacrifice of beauty, here in America, to what we are still pleased to call progress.

For example, the old Hammond-Harwood house at Annapolis, deemed by many competent critics the finest example of Georgian domestic architecture on this continent, is again reported in peril. Since it passed from possession of the Harwood family, about 15 years ago, this exquisite little building has been under the aegis of St. John's College. The college, it is said, can no longer afford to maintain it. Thus, one of these days may see it razed as a site for another filling station or garage.

But at least an effort is being made to preserve this heritage. And the effort certainly deserves the support of all who place any value on beauty of form or on historic association. Today begins the annual ten-day pilgrimage to ancient Maryland homes and gardens under the auspices of the Federated Garden Clubs of that State. All money raised from the sale of tickets for the pilgrimage is to go into a fund for the purchase and preservation of the Hammond-Harwood house.

Let us hope the federation will get the cooperation it deserves. It has been so often predicted, and seems daily more probable, that America is to become the modern Byzantium—i. e., the last stronghold of traditional Western culture. If so, it is time that we awakened to some of the responsibilities inherent in the expression.

Explanations In Order

Secretary Wallace recently issued a statement harshly criticizing the credit policies of the Federal land banks under the former independent management and asserting that the Department of Agriculture "now is taking steps to place the credit policy of the Farm Credit Administration on a sound basis."

Following his indictment of past policies, Mr. Wallace outlined a plan of action for the future calling for lower interest rates to farmer-borrowers, the placing of responsibility for losses entirely on the Federal land banks, and the elimination of the requirements that borrowers acquire stock equal in amount to 5 per cent of their loans.

This statement, together with a covering letter from Governor Black of the FCA, was sent free of charge through the mails to over 600,000 farmer-borrowers from the land banks.

Every one of the three proposals listed by the Secretary as a basic need is authorized under the Jones-Wheeler bill now before the House Agriculture Committee. There are strong reasons for concluding, therefore, that the chief purpose of the official circularization was to secure farmer support for this measure which had previously been indorsed by Secretary Wallace. That belief is strengthened by the closing paragraph of the Wallace memorandum expressing confidence that "when farmers understand what is going on, they and the organizations which represent them will support moves for sound credit and away from soft credit."

This, of course, is Secretary Wallace's way of replying to critics, who for good reasons insist that the Jones-Wheeler bill would destroy existing safeguards against unsound loans and encourage "soft credit" policies. However, the merits of the pending legislation have no bearing upon the charges of unauthorized lobbying which have brought an invitation to Messrs. Wallace and Black to appear before the House Committee on Agriculture. The committee wants to know whether their communications to farmer-borrowers constitute a violation of the Antilobbying Act, as well as the law forbidding dissemination at public expense of documents designed to influence legislation, except on request.

If the existing antilobbying legislation does not cover the activities of the Secretary of Agriculture and the Governor of the FCA, it should assuredly be amended specifically to forbid the kind of indirect pressure employed in the present instance. Whatever the verdict of the House committee may be after listening to the explanations of these two officials, it is obvious that the spirit, if not the letter of the Antilobbying Act has been violated.

Since the Department of Justice has made no effort to suppress official lobbying, the House Committee on Agriculture is performing a much-needed service in asking Messrs. Wallace and Black "under what authority" they distributed their thinly veiled indorsement of a pending bill.

Ignorance Not Stupidity

From The Memphis Commercial Appeal.

At a teachers' meeting up the country a few days ago a man waged a brisk attack on the business of attaching so much importance to what is familiarly if not always affectibnately known as the "I. Q." It may be said that children and older students are put through a series of tests, supposedly accurately designed to gauge their mental abilities, and their rating is called the "Intelligence Quotient." The critic of the matter held that too much store has been laid by the I. Q., which he said should be regarded as interesting rather than conclusive.

As we have observed the system in operation, the temptation on the part of the operators has been to confuse ignorance and stupidity. Ignorance may be, and frequently is, the result of lack of experience rather than of lack of intelligence. The fact that a youngster of a certain age does not know certain things does not mean necessarily that he can't learn them. It shows that he has not learned them, which may or may not be bad. In a word, the I. Q. theme seems to have been overplayed to the consequent discouragement of a great many boys and girls led to think themselves stupid when they were merely inexperienced.

Visitors from other sections in the Southern highlands, especially a few years ago, went home impressed with the stupidity of the mountain people. As a matter of fact, the average run of mountain people had merely been secluded and hence without opportunity to learn the things the visitors knew. In the field of their own environment and chance for knowledge the mountain people did not need to bow to anyone in the matter of knowledge.

The critic of the I. Q. called it useful within limits, and we think he had something there. It is an excellent sign, in any event, for education to produce its own questioners.

Or Are We Rats?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It doesn't seem to occur to some of our good American people that they are continually begging us to be rats. They seem to forget that it is a rat who fights only when he is cornered or when he is hungry. A rat never fights for values, principles, ideals.

The common-sense view I have heard some people call it. Yes! I am quite sure the rat—if he could think that far—would feel that to fight only when cornered or hungry is just good common sense. But the rat doesn't have a sense of moral values—that sense that so greatly distinguishes man from the animal kingdom.

Current opinion seems to be, that, since a small minority group headed by the late Senator Lodge nullified any good that might have resulted from the World War by preventing us from joining the League of Nations, it is now up to us to revert to the rat. We were men during the World War, fighting for ideals, principles, values (at least some of us were). What did it get us?

So now let us be sensible. Let us be rat-like and fight only when we are cornered or hungry. If this is truly the American attitude today, then it does look as though most of the men did die during the World War—or have since degenerated—leaving the United States to the rats.

Rumor also has it that a big, bad, British propagandist (please note it is always British) may come along—in fact, will come along—and tempt us to be men, tempt us again to fight for ideals; but we must be sure to remember that we are Americans and only fight when we are cornered or when we are hungry. We must never be betrayed into being men again.

It never seems to occur to some of our good American people that whether or not Britain is fighting to maintain decency in the world—or fighting for her life—or perhaps a mixture of both—it has nothing to do with America's attitude toward the war. That the only thing that really matters is whether or not Americans are going to live up to their past traditions of being men—that is live up to the highest that is in them even in the face of adversity—or—are they degenerating into a bunch of rats? Father Of Sons

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The never-ending torrent of protests against our involvement in war, pouring into publications of every sort causes me to question whether I am some kind of un-Christian monstrosity as a father and a citizen.

Am I, I ask myself, only one in a million men who dares to speak his true feeling, or am I so lacking in parental affections that I will even encourage a carnage sure to destroy one or two of these six sons of mine—all of military age? Or is it the same temperament that made my father, on his sixteenth birthday, enlist under Lincoln's first call for volunteers?

Had America followed the advice of Theodore Rooosevelt when Germany invaded Belgium, war would have ended a year sooner and a million less men would have been killed.

Complete and total alliance with England today would stop Italian help to Hitler, would immediately draw Balkan, Belgian and Dutch into the same alliance, would definitely call a halt to Japanese aggression in the East and would restore to ourselves the self-respect so sadly damaged by following the counsel of timorous people who usually have nothing to lose but an arm chair or a political job.

If other fathers of sons agree or disagree, let's hear from them.

Eastern's Band

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Thursday, April 11, the regimental band competition was held at Central High School, Washington, D. C. In this demonstration six bands were to compete for first, second and third places. Among the six we find, in their winning order, first place, McKinley High School; second place, Roosevelt High School; third place, Wilson, Western and Central High Schools, and last place to Eastern High School.

I wonder if the judges of the band competition knew of the circumstances and trials that the Eastern High School Band had to undergo. But you ask, "Just what difficulties the Eastern Band had to face that the other schools didn't?" These, of course, would not be known by someone who has not spent a few years in the Eastern High School Cadet Band.

During the practice year many remarks were made to and about the band that were not at all encouraging. Some phrases thrown at the cadets after the drill was over were: "Why don't you get a good band?" "You boys were awful on that field yesterday." Do these remarks tend to make a good band? Does this encourage a fair band to become a better one? Of course not.

The boys in the band are ignored by not only the fellow students in general, but even by their own associates, the cadets.

Today my plea is simple and direct, for these problems are of concern to everyone, and especially to the countless mothers and fathers who do without to keep their children in uniforms for the cadets. Should your child be treated this way? Encouragement, as you can see, is one of the principal means of pushing a boy forward. To further this encouragement students should be allowed to attend these drills, and this can only be done by an early dismissal.

Not many of us realize that Eastern High School would not have had a band on the field that day at all if it had not been for the commanding officers of the band. It was the courage and persuasion of these few boys that led Eastern's partially filled band on the field.

The Eastern Band had neither moral support nor an instructor to help them over rough spots and to encourage them on. What these boys did on the field was the product of their own training.

Jobs, Not Arms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The statement of Rear Admiral Taussig "that war between Japan and the United States is inevitable" is unjustifiable. The prompt denial by the Navy Department is to be commended. For reasons best known to the Admiral he did not mention that a serious situation exists close to Alaska, where Russia is preparing many air bases on her island possessions.

The threat from that source and the boring from within by Soviet propaganda agents in the United States are more dangerous than to suppose that Japan would be inclined to provoke an attack upon us. Let's use some of the contemplated outlay (of more than normal Naval expansion) to find jobs for our millions of out-of-work people instead of spending billions for programs that may give us a short era of wartime prosperity.

Against Third Term

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here in the little village, where we have but recently pulled ourselves out from under a hurricane, we thought we had learned to take all things in our stride. Yet we find our eyes popping at that acrobatic feat which a group of "Young Democrats" are attempting. They have announced that they will stand on a platform of broad Americanism and a third term.

We have seen straddles in our days, but nothing to equal that. What does the breadth of the platform matter? It is the gulf between those two opposing creeds which makes the feat impossible. Any Young Democrat who attempts it will have to kick off from one platform or the other, or split his straddle.

Had their attention been less absorbed with the "Oh, Promise Me" of the Third-termites and their leering suggestion that: "These are the days when the reward is to those who make wrong appear right," we think the "Young Democrats" might have heard their honorary guest, Tom Jefferson, turning in his grave and reaffirming: "The reeligibility of the President for life I quite disapprove."

Law Of The Jungle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the evidence of a long chain of brutal events abroad has made it abundantly clear that the destiny of the so-called civilized world is henceforth to be determined only by the law of the jungle, it becomes equally obvious that in order to survive we must see to it that our teeth are longer and sharper than those of the fiercest of all other jungle inhabitants—and without a moment's delay.

Compelled, without choice, to become one of the jungle denizens, we simply cannot afford to stake our continued existence upon the bare hope that as we thread our way through the dense underbrush of international relations we will never be so unfortunate as to meet a crouching carnivore lying in wait.

It so happens, by virtue of our great wealth, that we have it in our power to grow the longest and most fearful teeth on earth—those great, steely teeth; those gray, gleaming teeth of gunmetal which are set within the bulldog jaws of our Navy's battleships!

Let us lose none of the precious hours now at our disposal, and which may never be available again, to acquire, at whatever cost, so many and such large teeth that even the Tiger of Berlin will slink away in terror at our approach.

Otherwise, by the law of the jungle, we must inevitably be devoured. ROGER GISH McDARE.

"Doubly Tragic Wreck"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in the Sunday Post raised a presumption that high speed in rounding a curve was a contributing factor in the New York Central train wreck. Then this paragraph followed: "The Mohawk Valley smashup is the second tragedy of its kind during the last six months. In November the Southern Pacific's City of San Francisco carried 23 persons to their death near Carlin, Nev."

The latter accident actually occurred on August 12 instead of last November. After a 5½-month investigation, the Interstate Commerce Commission reported it an absolute case of sabotage. To use its exact words, "The accident was caused by malicious tampering with the rails." CHARLES M. WAGNER.

A Scenic Invoice

Stopping off between trains at a Kentucky town whose principal job is serving as a place where two branches of the same railroad can meet without the embarrassment it would be to both branches to meet right out in an open field—well, in such circumstances the hardened (or mellowed) traveler is struck with the feeling that he has been at that identical place at least 10 times during this present sojourn on earth and maybe 20 times in his previous one.

In other words, the country is strewn over with towns that serve only a junction function. And they are all as alike as the same thing twice; not only as alike as two peas, but as alike as the same pea seen a second time in rapid succession.

The hotel is always right at the railroad tracks, usually in that little bit of land—the shape of the remaining dough after the biscuit-cutter has cut three biscuits. The water tank for the locomotive is in the hotel's front yard, which positively guarantees that all the "bull-gines" stop right smack in the front door and have an attack of asthma.

All those funny posts with signal lights and mysterious gadgets like semaphores, are right beside the writing desk. So close, in fact, that you are almost afraid (if you're writing about it as I am) to use the spacer on your machine for fear you may derail a train 5 miles away or cause two oppositely headed trains to get together endwise. Which is regarded as bad luck, even by seasoned railroad men with the baggiest of overalls and the fiercest visors on their caps.

The Rotary Club (Kiwanis, if you're sensitive) doesn't meet at the hotel any more. It used to, but that 75-cent lunch was unreasonable in price. So they have moved their weekly meeting place to the Greasy Spoon over on Main street, where they can get a colder potato at 4 bits. In fact, small-town hotel dining rooms are something of a joke. Almost as much of an anachronism as a whip-socket on the cowl of an up-to-date automobile; as worthless as the hat-checking concession in a hobo jungle.

Across the tracks, in the residence section—which is at least 200 feet from the main lines and switches—the wash is still hanging out, if it is Tuesday. There are calico dresses, patch-work quilts, flannelette night shirts and nightgowns and ankle-length undies. Whoever has not yet witnessed, on a windy day, the twin captive blimps known as a long union suit, gracefully zooming and volplaning from a clothes-pin decorated cable—well, he hasn't been nowhere nor seen nothin'. Until dry, the garments are practically puncture-proof.

One strongly suspects that the place whence he sees the blue-coveralled railroader emerge, aggressively using a wooden toothpick, is a boarding house. Against the one visible window is a white iron-arched bedstead, carrying—it is dollars to crullers—a macadamized mattress that would resist the worst a depth bomb had to offer.

You can see the edge of the mattress and gauge its thinth. Judging also by those I have automatically caressed in such places, under stress of circumstances and not enough covers, the thing is stuffed with corncobs instead of cornshucks, and the springs are cast en bloc. It is guaranteed to produce nostalgia and insomnia even in a feller who has slept most of his life in a haymow.

The "gar-ridge" door of the boarding house is wide open—propped that way so the wind won't slam h—l out of it. The Model T is out in the country somewhere, probably on the tilling job in Lev Hardacre's back forty. Or maybe on the WPA project down by Polecat Run. The folks at the house won't know which. Not knowing things you'd like to know is the best thing small town people do. They're almost as ignorant as are the people in large cities.

When you venture out on the street you are made aware that you are something new in town. Passers-by all look at you intently; if you're wise, you will speak to every one of them. And you'll get yourself spoken to, right back. They draw near and almost analyze you. You expect them to trot stiff-legged around you, and whoof.

If you go into the barber shop, silence sets in—and that's something, for a small-town barber shop. The barber who is shaving the skinny guy looks so hard at you while he is scooting his snickersnee around the bird's adam's apple that you cringe for fear he is going to remove it.

And everywhere the trees are bare, the ground is bare, the half-dead and sparse privet-hedges are bare, the ladder leading to the water-tank needs a new coat of railroad-red paint—

There comes the letter-collector. He rifles the box on the post near the railroad station platform, then heads toward the hotel. On a post here in the lobby is a bin labeled "MAIL BOX." Somebody painted the words on it, themselves. The M is an inverted W. The box is big enough to mail a Clydesdale horse in. Can I beat the collector to the box, after addressing this—there, I did! Watch Mussolini!

By Dorothy Thompson

Is Italy Ready To Jump?

Bucharest.

IN THE LAST column on Italy I tried faithfully to report what many persons better informed than I about Italy think regarding the political and economic situation of that country at the present time and what leads them to believe that Italy will stay out of the war, at least for a considerable period to come.

Perhaps they are right, but it is also true that those who have tried to prophesy events on the basis of rational considerations, especially of economics, have thus far been oftener wrong than right. Rational advisers were against every adventure of Hitler's, but the adventures occurred just the same.

The organized campaign of the Italian press, its interpretations of the war in Norway, Mussolini's latest birthday telegram to Hitler saying that he believed Germany would win in the north, may be a mere "chantage," but on the face of it it looks as though Mussolini were systematically preparing the Italian people for another adventure, and, on the basis of experience, it would seem wiser to take Mussolini at his word rather than speculate as to whether he really means it.

So far, the dictators, when stating policies, have been fairly candid. Certainly Mussolini means it when he says he will choose his moment. That moment may be nearer than the more optimistic think. Speculating regarding the meeting on the Brenner between Hitler and Mussolini some six weeks ago, we can now be wiser. We may take it that Hitler met Mussolini because he was contemplating an attack in the west. We may believe this to be so because since then the attack has occurred and has been fully supported by Mussolini. The Italian Fascist Party takes an entirely different attitude toward the invasion of Norway and Denmark from the one they took toward the invasion of Finland. It would seem likely from Mussolini's words that "there is a communication between the North Sea and the Mediterranean" and this movement in the west is to be accompanied or supplemented by action in the Mediterranean.

THIS WAR so far has followed a sort of pattern. Its actions are seemingly isolated. Instead of a war we have a series of wars—sample wars as it were.

Germany, Italy and Russia are not allies in the usual sense of that word. Great Britain and France are really allies. They have a common policy and a common strategy. But Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin have merely agreed, tacitly or openly, to work various streets or various sides of the same streets.

For quite different reasons and aims, each has his own interest in weakening or destroying the French and British Empires. Each action, whether taken by Germany in Czecho-Slovakia, Poland or Norway, by Russia in Finland, or by Italy in Ethiopia, has contributed to this single aim that the three have in common.

Their geographical distribution and differing kinds of power make it possible for them to move separately, possibly without any common strategical agreement, each in his own time, taking some new point. One might sum it up by saying that for the time being none of the three cares how or by what means the others contribute to breaking down the power and dissipating the strength of the common enemies, Britain and France.

NOW, IT WOULD SEEM to be about time for Il Duce to have his innings in this particular war. So far he has got nothing from it except some useful foreign exchange. Speculations of the wiseacres that Mussolini does not want to fight on the side of Germany because public opinion in Italy is anti-German, or that he does not want to become involved in war with France and Great Britain, are probably correct. But neither does Russia want to fight on the side of Germany or become involved in a war with Great Britain and France, and she took Finland and avoided both.

This, I think, will be Mussolini's program. He will try to get something without having Germany as more than a political and diplomatic ally, and he will try to get it without involving Italy immediately in war with France and Great Britain. That looks difficult, but it is not impossible.

He may speculate that as long

as Britain is as seriously engaged as she is at present in the North Sea she will not want to take on anything in the Mediterranean. He may argue that Gen. Weygand's army in Syria is not yet as strong as it will be in a few months, and that until it is up to its ultimate strength the British and French will not be anxious to encounter submarines and planes in the Mediterranean. He may argue that fear of Germany and Russia will hinder the other Balkan states from coming to the aid of one of their number if it is attacked by Italy. For Germany's land forces are not tied up, and if Rumania should go to the aid of, let us say, Yugoslavia, the Germans would have exactly the excuse that Rumania is trying to avoid giving to come in and take the oil wells.

If Mussolini's calculations are correct and whatever adventure he launched should go fairly easily Germany would simply stand aside. He would be fighting solely for Italy.

What excuse would he give for a move, for instance, against the Dalmatian coast of Yugoslavia? Probably nothing more than an expression of the certainty that Britain and France were planning something and that Italy needed this coast for her own protection. Possibly as a pretended move against Russian expansion in the Balkans—which would go down with everybody in Italy, including the Vatican.

At any rate, I am inclined to take Mussolini at his threats. His time is coming soon.

Of course, when all three, by a nibble here and a nibble there, have got the Allies weakened and strategically outmoved, they will all three go at them together, for then there will be big spoils to divide.

This is a big game.

A Needed Inquiry

THERE HAVE BEEN so many Congressional investigations, and so many of them have been ill-managed and exploited by political profiteers, that one hesitates to propose just one more. Nevertheless, there seems to be no other means of placing on record the true state of affairs in labor organizations and enabling the rank-and-file of workers, both union members and non-members, to relate their experiences. The finances of the unions amount to some vast sum, so big and so badly managed that no authority can guess within millions of the total even for one year.

This money comes off the top of the earnings of the organized workers, much of it being exacted by extortion, through an authority amounting to a taxing power which has Government compulsion behind it in some cases and Government sanction or tolerance in others. Many workers, far from gaining by union membership, show a net cash loss.

The present investigation of the Labor Relations Board does not cover the field of union organization, administration and activity. It does not inquire into the scandalous unfitness of many powerful union officials or their right to their positions, and it avoids the question whether the unions have complied with the responsibilities that accompany their privileges.

COMPARATIVELY few Americans really know anything about union organizations and conduct. Always, up to now, popular sentiment has favored unions, but I seriously doubt that the sentiment is as favorable today as it was in times past. Bad leadership, abuse of the picketing privilege or right, and intimidation or worse treatment of individual workers have caused a turn of feeling. Little individual cases of mistreatment, whether of the small employer or the individual employe, spread by word of mouth, and these many little ripples have combined into a rather heavy sea of resentment.

But no local prosecutor, such as Tom Dewey in New York, smashing union rackets at the risk of political reprisals through the charge of labor baiting, can do a large-scale job of investigating.

Notwithstanding many cases of outrageous conduct, even by bad criminals, in various communities, by locals and offshoots of the powerful Teamsters' Union, Mr. Tobin, the international president, himself no criminal, to be sure, but, on the contrary, an old-style union fighter, defends his organization from reproach. This seems to mean that his job is too big for him or that he has no disposition to insist on decent conduct.

NOT ONLY the comparatively new unions, such as the rackets run by Willie Bioff and George Scalise, have been guilty of brutality, extortion from both workers and employers, and violations of the constitutional rights of the workers. Some of the old, sturdy originals of the A. F. of L. are equally in need of Government discipline in the interest of the whole public, including, of course, the members and those who are excluded from membership and thus from employment.

A Congressional investigation could accomplish great good for organized labor itself, for it might be expected to cause reforms, and the obvious fact is that organized labor must reform, be reformed or blow up in a rank-and-file revolution against the present control. An explosion of this kind would be very destructive to the gains that have been made by the frontiersmen and developers of union organization.

It need not be thought, either, merely because a few A. F. of L. unions are conspicuously evil in the present scene, that the C. I. O. would be excluded from such an inquiry. The C. I. O.'s most pressing trouble is Communism, which in California, for instance, dominates the State organization, but its offenses against the rights of the rank and file will be found to run generally parallel to those which have corrupted the A. F. of L. groups.

SUCH AN INVESTIGATION would show the public, including the union membership, much that is not generally known about the powers of the unions, the abuse of those powers and the squandering and theft of money.

The recommendations, translated into legislation, might be no more drastic than some requirements for honest elections and honest handling of the money. That would mean a degree of Government supervision, but not necessarily a labor front. But unless something of the kind is done soon the rank and file will revolt, and then the Government's remedies, devised in a hurry amid excitement, might constitute a labor front.

MR. CHURCHILL

Helping The Allies

By Ernest Lindley

How Much Further?

IF THE NEED arises, what further aid is the Roosevelt Administration willing to give the Allies?

The quick answer, I believe, is:

1. Loans, or perhaps preferably outright gifts of American raw materials and manufactured products.

2. Possibly the active participation of our Navy and Air Force.

This belief is not mine alone. It is shared by other close observers, including Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner, who have just reviewed succinctly and most interestingly American diplomacy from Munich to the present. (American White Paper, published by Simon & Schuster.) Their account is not only as accurate as to fact as it can be made by two extremely competent journalists, whose work has been facilitated by important officials; it is also sympathetically accurate in its interpretation of the President's hopes and purposes.

Messrs. Alsop and Kintner cite English and French estimates, conveyed to officials of our Government, that their buying power in this country will be exhausted in two or two and one-half years. The campaign for loans, or even gifts, is, in fact, already under way. It is being conducted informally by British and French representatives, and more openly by friendly journalists. Farm leaders are being told that if we would only lend the money the Allies would buy more of our farm products.

EVENTUALLY, if the war lasts long enough and the Allies buy heavily enough in this country, their assets convertible into dollars will be exhausted. But that day is still far distant. In the World War, the Allies professed to have used up their dollar assets before we joined them as a belligerent. But at the end of the war they took home several hundred million dollars in blue-chip American securities which they had managed to hang onto. They also took home a great chunk of valuable South American, West Indian, and Dominion securities which they had deposited here as collateral on private loans, and which American investors probably would have been delighted to buy.

At the beginning of this war, the dollar assets of the Allies were very much larger than at the beginning of the World War. In addition, they still have ample bond, stock and direct property holdings in other neutral countries outside Europe and the Continent of Asia, which probably could be sold here.

If by doing so they could break down the present legal ban on loans and credits, the Allies undoubtedly would take more of our farm products. But if they really need them they will buy them anyway.

ALREADY we are drifting along the path of 1915-17 by relying on a boom in war exports to keep our economic system going. If and when the Allied dollar asserts are exhausted, the pressure to preserve our war export business by granting loans will become very great. If we start now to build up a still bigger boom by advancing loans and credits, we will have still less freedom of choice about our future course. Whether we should extend credits is a question which can wait until the Allies have used up their dollar assets. Most of these dollar assets, it may be recalled, are still in their hands only because they did not settle their debt from the World War.

As to direct military aid, Messrs. Alsop and Kintner emphasize that the President has specifically declared only that an American Army would not be sent to Europe. He has not closed the door to the use of our Navy and Air Force in behalf of the Allies. Of course we are already aiding the Allies with our Air Force. We are letting them have planes ordered for our Army, including our most advanced designs.

In a pinch we could sell them a thousand or two more planes originally ordered for our Army and Navy. The only further aid we could give in the air would be our trained pilots. The Allies have plenty of men they can train as pilots. Thorough training requires several years, but it is hardly likely that the relatively small number of highly trained pilots we now have could determine the outcome of the European war.

THE ALLIES already have an overwhelming preponderance of naval power over Germany, with enough left, they say, to handle Italy in the Mediterranean. If naval power can decide this war, the Allies ought to be certain of victory with what they have.

They might, of course, suffer reverses in the Mediterranean. Or the German submarine and air counter-blockade of Great Britain might become really dangerous. If so, presumably, we could help to break the counter-blockade, as we did in 1917, by the use of our Navy.

But, if we put much of our Navy in the Atlantic, the Pacific would be left to the Japanese. We are probably helping the Allies, as well as ourselves, more by keeping our fleet in the Pacific, where it has been most of the time since the World War.

The essential fact remains that the Roosevelt Administration seems disposed, if the need arises, to go farther than it already has gone in aiding the Allies—even to the length of becoming a belligerent in the air and on the water. If we go that far we might as well count ourselves all the way in. Some of us can remember the early April of 1917, when it was said, and widely believed, that our entry into the World War meant only that we would lend money, send our Navy, and dispatch, at most, a "token" army, just to show that our heart was in the right place.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Genghis Khan

HITLER IS STILL a little man compared to Napoleon; and Napoleon, Caesar and Alexander the Great were small-time gangsters in comparison with Genghis Khan and his successors, the brown men on horseback who rode out from the steppes northwest of China and conquered the known world, from the Pacific Ocean across the deserts and mountains to India and Persia, on to Constantinople and Damascus, into Europe to Budapest, Moscow and Kiev. Harold Lamb tells their romantic story in "The March of the Barbarians" (Doubleday, $3.75).

It was part of a 1,000-year migration, the last and most terrible of all those waves of "barbarians" from the East, which surged into the Western world and threatened to end its civilization. Huns, Mongols, Turks—they seemed to come out of nowhere like a horde of locusts. They are said to have killed millions. They toppled empires. Within half a century a people almost without a history, led first by a barbarian, who had never seen a city until he was past 40; who did not know the use of writing; then by his sons and grandson, swept across all of Asia and half of Europe. Within another half century the greatest of empires was already crumbling. The fountain-burst of energy behind that invasion, and its swift failure, has for almost eight centuries mystified historians. Mr. Lamb's book, for all its gallant effort to humanize Genghis Khan and dramatize his people, still leaves it a mystery.

"HIS STRANGE genius lay in his immense strength of will," says Mr. Lamb. "A man's highest joy in life." Genghis once told his companions, "is to break his enemies, to drive them before him, to take from them all things that have been theirs, to hear the weeping of those who cherished them, to take their horses between his knees, and to press in his arms the most desirable of their women." So, at least, legend reports, and Mr. Lamb repeats it. It is still no explanation. There have been other men with similar ambitions, but there is only one Genghis Khan in history.

His people were nomads—without cities, without wealth in the Western or even in the Chinese sense. They seem to have swept out of their homelands inspired by some superhuman or subhuman dream. They did not want to enslave those they conquered; they killed. They had little use for the wealth of sedentary populations. Their armies could never have been large; the country they crossed—the desert heart of Asia—would never have supported huge armies; but they conquered with something of the mystic certainty which seems to have inspired Cortez's and Pizarro's men when they took command of the New World. For decades the armies swept on, seeking ever new conquests, returning only when a great khan died and the tribes were called to conference.

Then, in 1260, a Mamluk army defeated a division of Hulagu's Moslem army on its way to conquer Egypt. Hulagu's brother, Kublai Khan, by that time had settled down in China, prey to another kind of slower defeat. The spell was broken. The family and the empire of Genghis Khan was breaking up. Babar the Tiger was still to invade India; Tamerlane the Turk was to stage an imitation of the sweep of the Mongol hordes; Russia was to be permanently semi-Asiatized. But the thirteenth century melodrama was done.

Mr. Lamb makes the most of the melodrama, studding his story with bizarre bits from Marco Polo, Friar John Carpini and William of Rubruk's narratives and the Persian chronicles. Despite a somewhat pretentious bibliographical afterword, he writes for laymen, and sometimes as a layman. His account gives little evidence of familiarity with the geography of central Asia or with the resources of modern Chinese scholarship.

DIMITRI ALIOSHIN'S "Asian Odyssey" (Holt, $3) purports to be the blood-curdling story of a young Russian, former officer in the Czarist army, in Siberia and Monoglia in 1917-21. It is a rousing yarn of hairbreadth escapes, sadistic murders, reckless bravery and wild adventure. Mr. Alioshin says he served under Kolchak and Horvat, and with the American Army in Siberia, was captured variously by Reds, bandits, Mongols and Ungern-Sternburg (remember Ossendowski's fabulous stories?), masqueraded as a major in the Bolshevik army, helped kill a peasant girl Red leader by burying her alive, etc. His tallest exploit is his last: escaping into China in 1922 he says he heard of the flight to Moscow of Borodin and Mme. Sun Yat-sen, which was not to occur until 1927!

Third Round

By Barnet Nover

The Fighting In Norway

THE FIGHTING in Norway has so far gone through three main stages.

The first stage began early on Tuesday, April 9, with the sudden landing of German troops at various points on the far-flung Norwegian coast including Oslo and Kristiansand in the south and Stavanger, Bergen, Trondheim and Narvik in the north.

This action was so devastating in its suddenness, so skillful and complete in its employment of Trojan Horse tactics, that it went largely uncontested. At the end of 24 or 48 hours the invaders were in possession of Norway's principal ports, air bases and coast defenses. But to copper-rivet their unparalleled triumph the Nazis had either to persuade the Norwegian government to accept a German protectorate as a fait accompli, even as the Danish government had done, or to pour into Norway sufficient reinforcements to make it impossible for the Norwegians and the Allies to dislodge them.

He won the first round, lost the second and is winning the third. How many more rounds will there be?

The first did not happen. The Norwegian government refused to capitulate. Leaving Olso they raised the banner of resistance and this resistance has increased rather than diminished with the passage of time. At the same time the dispatch of German reinforcements to Norway was made difficult by the Allied use of sea power.

IF THE FIRST ROUND in this Norwegian struggle was unquestionably Germany's, the second round belongs to the Allies, particularly the British fleet. The British had been caught napping by the German invasion of Norway. They quickly awoke from their slumbers and in a series of engagements did tremendous damage to German sea power and opened the way to the dispatch of an Allied expeditionary force to Norway. And according to a joint admiralty-war office communique the landing parties managed to get ashore without the loss of a single life.

It is apparent that the British landed at three points on the Norwegian coast—at or near Narvik, at Namsos and at Andalsnes.

In the Narvik sector the British in conjunction with Norwegian forces have been engaged in a persistent effort to dislodge the German garrison, but so far with incomplete success. Narvik is important to the Allies for at least two reasons. In the first place its possession will make it possible for Great Britain once again to secure Swedish ore. In the second place Narvik is an essential jumping-off point for the dispatch of an Allied force to Sweden, should that country also be invaded by the Nazis.

But Narvik's importance is greater with respect to future possibilities than with respect to present needs. Even if the British destroy the German garrison there and restore rail communications from Narvik to Sweden that will have no bearing on the outcome of the fighting in the real Norwegian theater of war many hundreds of miles to the south.

In landing troops at Namsos and Andalsnes Great Britain put herself in a position to launch an attack on Trondheim, which has been held, it is believed, by several thousand German troops. From Namsos and Andalsnes the Allied and Norwegian forces were also in a position to move troops toward Oslo via the Gudbrandal Valley and the Oslo-Trondheim railroad.

HOW MANY British and French troops were landed at those points it is impossible to say. It is apparent, however, particularly from the very revealing dispatch by Leland Stowe in the Chicago Daily News, that they were neither so numerous or so well-equipped as to be able to achieve their objectives. Lack of numbers combined with the difficulties created by the rugged Norwegian terrain greatly slowed up their progress. German air operations appear to have interrupted or at least retarded the dispatch of Allied reinforcements to Norway. And most important of all, Germany's command of the air broke up Allied concentrations and did untold damage to them. The Allies have been forced to relinquish Steinkjer in the Trondheim Fjord and to retreat from the Lillehammer region. The extent of German progress in pushing forward from Oslo in the direction of Trondheim can be gauged by the report out of Stockholm that German troops have reached Rorps, which is within 70 miles of Trondheim.

Should the Germans clinch their possession of all of the Oslo-Trondheim railway, the plight of the Allies would be parlous indeed. It would then take far more men than they have in Norway to dislodge the Germans either from Trondheim or Oslo. And the Allied forces themselves would find themselves cut off from their supply lines and threatened with annihilation.

The third round has undoubtedly gone to the Germans. But the fight is still in its early stages. What will happen now depends on whether adequate supplies and reinforcements can be rushed to the Allied troops operating out of Andalsnes and Namsos, whether German air operations can be counteracted in Norway as well as by attacks on German air bases in Denmark, and whether new landing places can be found to replace those, such as Namsos, which have been made untenable.

The outcome of the war and the fate of the Allies may depend on the answers to these questions. But it is wrong to extend today's headlines into the future. The war in Norway will not be over until the last battle has been fought.

The Once Over

Movies-In-The-Slot

Are the movies going "back where they came from:" the nickelodian, the nicolet and the peepshow?

News from Hollywood so indicates. Dozens of promoters are getting in on a gold rush they think will come with the introduction of movies by slot machines in taverns, barrooms, luncheonettes, ice-cream parlors and poolrooms all over the country.

You drop a nickel in the slot and get a movie show with music. The idea is to flood the country with "movie cabinets" through which a customer may get a movie with his beer, coke, strawberry sundae, three-decker sandwich or hotdog.

Tyrone Power and Deanna Durbin will be presented with a short ale and an onion. Mae West, Eddie Cantor and E. G. Robinson may be obtainable with a cup of java and a plate of beans. Errol Flynn and Kay Francis through the mere deposit of a nickel will become inseparable from a cocktail and a hand of rummy.

You may even get Raymond Massay in a new Lincoln drama at the Seaside Grill.

The new device brings Radio City to Hogan's Elite Cafe, transfers Roxy's to Finnegan's Bar and makes Greta Garbo, bock beer, Mickey Rooney, Gary Cooper and a game of Kelly pool allied products.

It isn't hard to imagine a fellow rolling into a tavern, pulling out a handful of change and demanding "The Garden of Allah," a sardine sandwich, a rye highball and a couple of short newsreels with gingerale.

Jimmy Roosevelt is getting some of the blame. He was among the first to leap into the new idea with both feet. Since that time scores of movie figures are aboard, and it is reported that some of the major producers have money in it.

Tremendous returns are predicted, especially if Will Hays doesn't stop such screen revivals as "Fun in a Turkish Bath," "The Bathing Beauties' Ball," "The Boudoir Burglar" and "Parisian Nights."

The whole idea will cheapen pictures, topple the movie industry from the penthouse level to the underground rathskeller and probably throw another rock at the legitimate picture houses. But it's coming.

The pictures are to be limited to three minutes, which is the only good thing that can be said in their favor. Maybe "Gone With the Wind" is to blame. It may be just a normal reaction against four-hour films.

R. O. T. C. Inspection Held at Georgetown

Georgetown University's four R. O. T. C. companies had to demonstrate their familiarity with the new Army Infantry drill regulations yesterday afternoon under the critical eye of an official War Department inspector.

The annual R. O. T. C. inspection being conducted by Maj. George J. Engelthaler has been in process since Monday and is to end this afternoon with a visit to the medical unit. Whether Georgetown keeps its official rating of "Excellent" in the War Department records depends on the inspector's final report.

U. S. Cartographer Sees Orient Area Of Great Future

Warily avoiding reference to the United States' relations with the Orient, F. Irvine Burnham, cartographer of the State Department, stuck to geography last night in the opening lecture on the Far East in a series at George Washington University.

Spreading his hand on the map over China, Japan and neighboring islands, Burnham said:

"This is an area of a great future . . . because there lie the great populations of the world today."

The lecture on "The Geographic Foundations" was first in a series of seven by various authorities, presented by the university in cooperation with the Washington group of the American Council, Institute of Pacific Relations.

Class Lectures On Wane, Alumni Of Union Told

The formal class lecture is disappearing and more attention is being given to the individual student, Dr. Edward Ellery, of Union College faculty, told a group of alumni of the New York State College at the Cosmos Club last night.

George A. Holcomb was elected president of the group. Dr. Ellery said:

"We hear of regimentation and mass movements today, but look into the colleges and you will see a growing interest in the individual. The individual isn't lost in the mass. We're getting away from the formal class lecture, and the class now tends to be an informal exercise."

Dr. Ellery told of vocational tests given to students from year to year to help them determine whether they are on the right track in their choice of careers.

Senate Asked For More Aid To Crippled

$22,400 Sought In Education Funds; Ballou States Stand On Abbott School

The Senate subcommittee appropriations yesterday was urged to increase the House appropriation for education of crippled children from $15,000 to $22,400, and to transfer the work from the welfare department to the schools, by Mrs. Odetta O'Hara of the Association for the Education of Physically and Handicapped Children.

Children who have benefited by the educational service carried on as a WPA project were exhibited to the committee by Mrs. O'Hara.

L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Association, asked Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, and other members of the subcommittee to keep the District supply bill within the limits of revenue available to prevent an increase in the real estate tax.

Support of Overton Urged

Carruthers said that while he was not asking for an increase in the Federal payment this year because of the agreement between the Senate and House, he would urge all citizens' associations to get behind the Overton formula for adjusting fiscal relations next year.

Admiral Percival S. Rossiter, chief of staff at Gallinger Hospital, asked for 13 additional nurses, 14 attendants and 4 laboratory technicians beyond those carried in the House bill.

H. C. Phillips, of the school committee of the Federation of Citizens Asociations, recommended that the Abbott Vocational School be located at Brentwood Park and the Wilson Teachers Colllege at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

Ballou Cites Agreement

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, stated yesterday that The Post had reported incorrectly the position of the Board of Education on the Abbott school site. The school board and the Commissioners, he said, are agreed on the Brentwood Park site. The House bill specifies the Upshur street location.

Phillips also asked that money be placed in the bill for the purchase of school sites in American University Park, Bradbury Heights, and the Hillcrest-Fort Davis area.

Mrs. J. R. Lyddane, of the P.-T. A. Congress, asked for additional funds for school gardens, while Dr. Mitchell Greese, of the District Co-ordinating Council, approved the addition of two new vocational guidance officers to the schools.

Charles I. Stengle, of the American Federation of Government Employes, asked more custodial workers in the schools so they might be placed on a 44-hour week.

D. C. Magathan, of the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., requested the full quota of 33 teachers at the Coolidge High School.

The hearing of civic representatives will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning.

Crowd Traps Cutpurse Suspect Under an Auto

Two leisurely bandits were sought last night after two holdups which netted more than $200 and a colored purse snatcher suspect was captured after being cornered by an impromptu posse.

The liquor store operated by Hyman Kopit at 1001 K street northeast was robbed of $150 when the two bandits lined up all present and forced Mrs. Kopit to open the cash register. Later they held up the drug store at 2701 Evarts street northeast operated by Walter Donohoe, a cripple, took away Donohoe's crutches and had Mrs. Donohoe give them more than $100 from the register.

A 30-year-old man was captured when he was cornered in a blind alley in the 1200 block of G street northwest, after he had snatched the pocketbook of Mrs. Ann McSweeney, of 910 Massachusetts avenue northwest. He was surrounded by a number of citizens when he took refuge under an automobile and, on being dragged out, he blacked the eye of Private Thomas C. Sullivan.

Capital News In Brief

2 Sons at West Point

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Swank, of 1400 Fairmont street northwest, are unusually proud parents these days. One of their sons is to be graduated with a commission from West Point June 11, and July 1, a younger son will enroll there.

Walter D. Swank, 21, attended Central High School here and received his appointment to the academy through the District Commissioners. Lawrence E. Swank, 18, also attended Central High School and recently the Millard Preparatory School. He received his appointment from Nevada.

Central High Honored

Central High School's student newspaper, The Bulletin, won all-American honors in the 1940 Critical Service of the National Scholastic Press Association. Ann Wickard, 2101 New Hampshire avenue northwest, is the editor.

Baseball Hurts Boy

Five-year-old Edwin Culver, of 1231 Thirtieth street northwest, was in a serious condition in Georgetown Hospital after he was hit with a baseball while playing near his home.

West Point Alumni

West Point alumni of the class of 1898 will gather for a forty-second reunion at 1 p. m. today in the Army and Navy Club. Gen. Malin Craig, who retired as Army chief of staff last year, is a member of the class and is expected to attend.

Sidwell Pet Show Displays Wonders of Animal Kingdom

1. SALLY—She's not a comely canine, but she's the heart's desire of Christopher Turnbull, 9. The English bull was slated to take the prize for homeliest pet in the show, but won because she had the shortest tail

2. PORKY—This youthful side of bacon was the only pet that didn't enjoy the show. Helen Compton, 11, was on hand to comfort her pet, give words of advice and assure it that a prize was at hand

3. WHITE MICE—They never ran up a clock, said Billy Brobeck, 13, of Chevy Chase, Md. They're cut, said Alice Machliss, 12, of 2923 Thirty-ninth street northwest. They attracted attention at the Sidwell Friends School pet show

A pig, a lobster and a cat named President Roosevelt and her seven kittens helped make the fifth pet show of the Sidwell Friends School staged yesterday on the school grounds, 3901 Wisconsin avenue northwest, both a lesson in zoology and a good time for nearly 500 students and friends.

Dogs appeared to be in the majority among the 116 entries. There were dogs with long tails, dogs with short tails, decorative dogs, "useful" dogs, and just plain dogs.

Nine-year-old Cristopher Turnbull was slated to get the prize for the homeliest pet in the show with his English bull, Sally. Instead, he emerged with the prize for the dog with the shortest tail.

President Roosevelt and her seven 8-day-old kittens was definitely not a political cat, protested her owner, Billy Workman, 9. He saw nothing humorous in the suggestion that the kittens be called First Term, Second Term and so on.

"I think the name rather odd for a cat," said Billy, gravely. His President Roosevelt and offspring won the prize for the best family exhibit.

Clark DuBois, 13, was the grand-prize winner of the event with two firsts for the same entry, four white mice. They took prizes for the pets with the longest tails, and for having the best names—Sneak, Snoop, Snitch and Gabby.

One of the many focuses of attention was a screaming side of bacon named Porky, owned by 11-year-old Helen Compton. Rex, a Shetland pony, entered by Joan Murray, 6, was acclaimed the largest pet, while Nora, a frog entered by Helen Calhoun, 7, was judged the most unusual pet. Jane Miller, 9, with a group of puppies, won the prize for having the smallest pets.

A bewhiskered gentleman cat named Sammy took the prize for the longest whiskers. He was entered by 7-year-old Peter Welch.

The noiseless lobster who didn't want to stay was the pet of Elva Paul, 7. In addition there were ducks, goldfish and a host of others entered by the group which ranged from the second grade to last year high school.

Other first-prize winners were Christy Turnbull, Eunice Bauer, Chuck de Ganahl, Robert Owers, Molly Kramer, Florence Montford, Vanna Piquet, Calvert Watkins, Patsy Dowd, Julia and Francis Davidson and Harry Zehner.

Mrs. Charlotte Moreau was the teacher in charge of the affair. Judges included Thomas E. Lodge, Mrs. Joseph Paul, Mrs. Alexander F. Jones, Mrs. Agnes Dale Crosby, Mrs. Clinton Misson, Mrs. Francis Winslow, Mrs. Conway Coe, Mrs. Neville Miller and Mrs. Joe de Ganahl.

U. S. Tribute Paid Artists On Buildings

Leaders Praise Government For Keeping Culture Alive

The United States Government paid radio tribute last night to the artists who have decorated its public buildings.

In a program prepared by the fine arts section of the Federal Works Agency and the National Broadcasting Co., Dr. John Dewey, eminent Columbia University philosopher, joined Government leaders in giving Uncle Sam credit for keeping American culture alive during years of depression and world crisis.

The other speakers were Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Federal Works Administrator John Carmody, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Edward Bruce, chief of the section.

Dewey Speaks

The 80-year-old Dewey, introduced by Bruce as "this country's most cultured citizen," declared:

"It is by creation of the intangibles of science and philosophy, and especially by those of the arts, that countries and communities have won immortality for themselves after material wealth has crumbled into dust. . . . Creation, not acquisition, is the measure of a nation's rank."

Paying tribute to Bruce as the initiator of the work of the fine arts section, Dr. Dewey added:

"The work carried on . . . is a service to democracy so important . . . that to starve it or allow it to lapse would be a defeat for democracy as genuine as one taking place on a physical battlefield."

Bruce, in introducing Secretary Morgenthau, praised Mrs. Morgenthau, absented from the broadcast by illness, as a "delightful and inspiring associate." Morgenthau pointed out that, great as were the public works of the Romans and Greeks, these were survived by their sculpture and art. He read a letter to Mrs. Morgenthau from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt who said she had "never wavered" in her belief that a great nation could not fail to "utilize the services of its creative talents to the fullest."

Art Abroad in Blackout

Carmody declared Americans should see art "inside our public buildings as well as outside."

"With the single exception of music," Welles said, "art in Europe today is a complete blackout." He added:

"As other nations have given to us abundantly from the deep wells of their civilization, let us hope that we shall do all in our power to prepare a gift for them during the days of their unhappiness."

La Follette declared that both he and Senator McNary, the minority leader, believe support of American artists "should be shared by all, regardless of political affiliations."

Health Center Aides Stricken By Mild Pneumonia

A "mild form of pneumonia" has attacked the Public Health Center personnel, it was revealed last night, sending several members of the staff to local hospitals, and a half-dozen to the Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

Doctors, attendants and building employes in the headquarters at Twenty-fifth and E streets northwest, as well as in the center at Bethesda, are among the victims, Dr. L. R. Thompson, assistant United States surgeon general, reported.

"We found the patients suffering the same type of disease reported common lately at hospitals here and in other cities," said Dr. Thompson.

Most of the cases, the doctor said, are not serious, although hospitalization is needed. Death of one employe, a yardman, in a Washington hospital yesterday had been caused by heart trouble, he said.

Ten Churches Join in Service At St. Mark's

For the first time in the history of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, once the Pro-Cathedral of Washington, men and women of ten churches and six denominations last night enjoyed corporate Christian fellowship there.

More than 300 of them attended the second monthly midweek service and forum of the Southeast Inter-Church Council, and heard its president, Dr. George H. Bennett, who also is pastor of Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, urge a militant stand for the Christian Church in attacking community evils.

The Rev. Bernard I. Barnes, pastor of North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, read the Scripture.

Other congregations represented were Christ Episcopal (Navy Yard), Fifteenth Street Christian, Reformation Lutheran, Washington City Church of the Brethren, Metropolitan Presbyterian, and First and Trinity Methodist churches. St. Mark's is at Third and A streets southeast.

White House Opens Its Door to Cameramen

Associated Press photos.

1. STATE DINING ROOM—All formal dinner parties are held in this room of the White House. Over the fireplace is a portrait of President Lincoln, bequeathed by his son, Robert Todd Lincoln. More than 50 photographers were admitted to the mansion this week to photograph its interior, rarely seen by the public

2. SITTING ROOM—King George and Queen Elizabeth of England talked with President and Mrs. Roosevelt in this rectangular room on the second floor of the Executive Mansion. Heavy stage cable was stretched through the rooms by attending electricians who spotted lights while the best cameramen in the Nation made their pictures

Ruling Fails To Crack Nut Stand Problem

Washington's Zoo has a perplexing peanut and hot dog problem which was clarified somewhat, though not entirely solved, yesterday by Acting Comptroller General R. N. Elliott.

Replying to Secretary C. G. Abbot of the Smithsonian Institution, who had asked for an opinion, Elliott held that the zoo restaurant's lease may not be extended for a year from its expiration date June 30, as Dr. Abbot had requested.

Sidney W. Leech operates the restaurant, whose principal sales items are hot dogs and peanuts, under a contract with the Government. The contract, which became effective July 1, 1937, stipulates that he pay $9,012 annual rent.

A new restaurant building is now being constructed in the park with Federal funds and since it won't be completed until late this year, or perhaps early in 1941, Dr. Abbot reminded Elliott that intelligent competitive bidding for the concession could hardly be expected until the structure is finished and ready for occupancy.

"Mr. Leech is willing to extend his present contract for one year," said the Smithsonian secretary, titular head of National Zoological Park, "and to bear the expense entailed in moving from the present restaurant into the new building."

The Comptroller General's answer, however, was to the effect that competitive bidding for the lease shall not be waived. With the new, modernistic Zoo restaurant he is erecting, Uncle Sam stands to receive even more than the $9,012 rent now being paid on the dilapidated old structure, so on with the bids, Elliott held.

He left one loophole, however.

"If there be reason to believe that the new building will be ready for occupancy within a few months after the end of the present fiscal year, this office would not be required to object to permitting Mr. Leech to continue to operate the restaurant in the old building under the terms of his present contract during that time, provided bids for the concession in the new building are solicited when it is ready for occupancy," he said.

Southeast Citizens Hit Mail Service

Fort Davis Group Says Delivery Is Made in Boxes Too Far From Homes

Dissatisfaction with postal service in Washington's Southeast area, and demands for adequate supervision of recreation in the far Northwest section were voiced last night at citizens association meetings.

The Fort Davis group complained that mail is being delivered in boxes not in front of homes in the region. The Conduit Road association declared itself in favor of supervision for all public recreational activities.

Reports of the meetings follow:

Fort Davis

The United States Postoffice Department was petitioned last night by the Fort Davis Citizens Association for "better delivery" in the vicinity of Carpenter street, Highwood drive, Texas avenue and Thirty-eighth street southeast, at its regular meeting at the Southeast Branch Library, Seventh and D streets.

Members of the association pointed out that mail is delivered to boxes which are not located directly in front of homes in the section.

Improvements requested by the association were filling in and grading of Thirty-fifth street between Pope and Nash streets southeast, and the repair of Carpenter street between Texas avenue and Highwood drive southeast. An American Airlines motion picture, "Flagships of the Air," was shown.

Conduit Road

The Conduit Road Citizens Association last night went on record as favoring "all kinds of recreation under supervision" in the Palisades Field House, Sherrier place and Edmund street northwest, at its regular meeting held at the field house.

The resolution followed criticism of some phases of the center, officers of the association said.

The association concurred in a petition circulated by residents in the vicinity of Conduit and Reservoir roads northwest requesting that a house which has become an "eyesore" be torn down.

Other resolution adopted included approval of the Congressional move to investigate the small loan business here, and opposition to the chiropodist bill.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Remember the Iroquois And Don't Take Chances

Patrons Careless With Matches in Theaters; Blackfriars to Preview New Play Sunday; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS NO PART of the job of this column to usurp the prerogatives of the fire department, but there has recently appeared a boxed note on the National Theater programs that is worth reading carefully and observing. This is what it says:

BELL

"It is urged for the comfort and safety of all, that theater patrons refrain from lighting matches in this theater."

To many, this may sound like a superfluous warning, what with all the disastrous fires that have occurred from time to time in theaters throughout the country, but to an habitual theatergoer it has become alarmingly apparent that there is a growing tendency on the part of the thoughtless in this city, as well as in New York and other theatrical centers, to strike matches and ignite cigarette lighters to read programs during the action of plays. Others seem to think it is perfectly all right to light their cigarettes the minute they leave their seats for intermissions, let the matches fall where they may.

It would be an easy matter by these careless practices to set fire to a filmy gown, the carpet or even the program itself, causing a frightening emergency that might easily lead to panic and death. It has happened elsewhere and could happen here.

This is a matter that is causing concern to all theater managements and not the National's alone. The National merely happens to be the first that has printed an appeal for ordinary common sense and caution. To the best of my knowledge and belief, every usher in practically every theater in town carries a flashlight that may be borrowed by the patron in need of light for the asking.

As the spring and summer season advances this becomes a matter of increasing importance. Summer clothing and summer theater draperies are lighter and more inflammable than in winter and the danger of touching off a blaze increases proportionately. We don't want Chicago's Iroquois Theater disaster repeated in the National Capital. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient.

With Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne here this week in Robert E. Sherwood's new play, "There Shall Be No Night," added significance has been given the Civic Theater's next production, "At Mrs. Beams,'" opening on May 6, at Wardman Park. The Lunts played the leading roles during the comedy's original New York run. They will be assumed here by Morris Arkin, as Mr. Dermott, and Lansing Hall, in the role of Laura Pasquale. Miss Hall has had several years experience with the Civic and five seasons with the Roadside. Mr. Arkin is an old favorite with Washington audiences.

Speaking again of the Lunts in "There Shall Be No Night," we seem not to be alone in the conviction that this is the best play Robert E. Sherwood ever wrote and ought to win all the prizes there are, once it reaches New York—including the Pulitzer and the Drama Critics Circle. So overwhelming has been Washington's reception of this new drama of Finland in the throes of ravishment that standing-room audiences have viewed every performance to date and the ticket racks are stripped clean for the remainder of the engagment. Nothing but standing room remains to be had—and not too much of that.

It is announced by the Gayety Theater that beginning with the Sunday matinee, Jeral Dean, "the most beautiful showgirl on Broadway," has been secured as an extra added attraction. If she lives up to her billing, the gal must be plenty pretty!

"Nothing Begins," a three-act play, written by Rev. Brenden Larnen, O. P., M. A., will be previewed by the subscribing members of the Blackfriars Guild and their guests in the Guild's Little Theater, at 2115 Fifteenth street northwest, Sunday, April 28, at 8 p. m. Dramatic critics throughout the country have given the work an enthusiastic stamp of approval. The play is under the direction of the author, who has taught playwriting at Dunbarton College and Catholic University and has many other stage works to his credit. The cast will include Margaret Stack, Gertrude Heagney, Frank Keene, Barbara Van Wall, Karl Hess, Carol Rogers, Bette Bullock, Rita McGarry and Eleanor Mitchell. The story is of New York tenement life.

As already a little more than intimated in this space, Herbert Kline's "Lights Out in Europe," next screen attraction at the Belasco Theater, will be screened for members of the State and War Departments, the Diplomatic Corps and the press on Monday at 1 p. m., in the film theater in the U. S. Archives Building, at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue. The picture was filmed in Poland and England at the outbreak of the present war. When we recently said that two pages were devoted to it in a current issue of a national magazine, we had not looked far enough back in the book. Comment and pictures cover six pages.

Ed Sullivan, whose youthful "Star Dust Cavalcade" troupers were cocktail-partied in the Carlton yesterday afternoon, was detained in New York and did not arrive in town until this morning in time for the first show at Loew's Capitol Theater. He has a raincheck for a coca-cola!

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 25 (INS).—Raymond Massey wasn't on the Warner lot to break bread with Jack Warner just for the pleasure of lunching there. He was at Warners to discuss the possibility of his playing the lawyer in "The Letter" opposite Bette Davis. Massey, whose performance as "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" has put him in the class of being one of the important actors in filmland, is interested in the role. Since the picture cannot possibly start before June 1, the date suits him, too.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Massey is playing at the Biltmore now in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and will end his tour next month. Bette, by the way, left for Honolulu today and traveling on the boat with her is Bob Taplinger, publicity head of Warners and Bette's very good friend. Bob will have a two-week holiday.

Talked with Hal Roach today and he plans to do a modern story of the present day railroad, calling it "Broadway Limited." Remember I said that Hal himself would concentrate on comedy in the future, so this epic by Grover Jones is being handed to Richard Wallace who will direct it, with Victor McLaglen and Victor Mature. They will play brothers—one an engineer and the other a student. Mrs. Roach leaves for the Kentucky Derby early next week and Hal will meet her in New York for a holiday. It wouldn't surprise me if he flies to the Derby at the last minute, although he says he won't be able to get away until later.

Apparently Paramount's $165,000 suit against Don Ameche isn't keeping him awake nights because he's going to burst into song opposite Alice Fay in "Argentine Way." Personally, I'm inclined to think Paramount means business and they may step in with a legal action preventing Don from making a picture before their suspension suit is settled. On the other hand, these suits seldom reach an impasse and this particular one might be settled out of court. Anyway, Twentieth Century-Fox is going merrily ahead with plans for Ameche. It's interesting to hear he will sing in the rumba special, for Don has never had a chance to warble on the screen as much as he did on the radio.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Barney Oldfield, all by his lonesome, at the House of Murphy, looking tres sad after his matrimonial warfare; Richard Halliday's heartbeat is now Rose Hobart; you'd be surprised if you knew who has fallen for Marlene Dietrich and in a big way; Peter Hayes and Mary Healey act very serious these days; Lupe Velez trains in from the big town Sunday—and has she had fun? Walter Connolly is suffering from the treatments that were necessary because of an infected leg.

Mrs. Paul Muni is back in town at the Beverly Wilshire. Paul, who is still on tour with "Key Largo," returns next month; Gracie Allen and George Burns have been invited to officially open the World's Fair in San Francisco May 25; saw Mary Carlisle looking mighty, mighty pretty on the R.-K.-O. lot. She has checked in for "Have It Your Own Way;" Rita and Eddie Love, the proverbial honeymooners, will spend the weekend in Tucson as Mildred Loew's guests; the Dolly Hunt-Hal Roach, jr., romance is on again hot and heavy. They were ring-siders at Slapsie Maxie's.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gloria Jean Grows 2 Inches in Year

A milestone, or maybe it's an inchstone, has been recorded in the career of little Gloria Jean, who is currently costarring with Bing Crosby in "If I Had My Way."

When Gloria Jean arrived in Hollywood a year ago she was 4 feet 10 inches tall. And on the occasion of her twelfth birthday, April 14, she was measured once more.

She has grown exactly 2 inches in the year.

Incidentally, now that she's 5 feet tall, the studio is giving Gloria her first long dress, which she wears in a sequence of "If I Had My Way."

Hollywood, April 25.

Hundreds seeking film assignments is not news, but when someone turns down a seven-year contract for a life of poverty — that's news. Eddie Albert, whenever he takes his yacht to Catalina, hires Ralph Castelloni, cafeteria bus boy, to serve the guests. Yesterday Ralph visited Warners' lot with Eddie. The tall handsome youth attracted the attention of Lloyd Bacon, who offered him a part in "Knute Rockne," and a seven-year contract. Ralph refused, saying he was leaving shortly to become a priest of the Franciscan order, in which he takes an oath of poverty.

All you Loretta Young fans who have been complaining because she's had to cry through so many pictures (and she cries so beautifully, too!) can relax, because in her next picture, "The Doctor Takes a Wife," she's not only her happy self, but she'll make you laugh, too.

George O'Brien says in South America the theaters show five different pictures a day. Waat do you think of that, you double-feature enemies? Put out in front of each theater there's a cafe, where the patrons can spend their time between look-sees, or during a picture they don't want to see. Sounds like a nice custom—but what does it do to the waistline?

Kenneth MacGowan, now producing "Brigham Young," has a hobby which explains his keen knowledge of casting. He is "tops in the United States as a mask collector, with 203 famous ones. Many have been loaned to museums for exhibit. The U. C. L. A. anthropology class meets at MacGowan's home for study of masks representing primitive culture.

What a lad that Bob Cummings is—a regular guy from down Missouri way. I howled when he told me of his experiences trying to impress producers with an English accent. He learned in a hurry that what goes in pictures—as elsewhere—is naturalness . . . Bob will pilot himself and the missus to South America as soon as his new Cessna plane arrives from Wichita.

"We need your laughter in England"—says a cable to Charlotte Greenwood from Louis Dreyfus, manager of Theater Royal in London. Charlotte, who is now appearing in "The Young People," had to refuse the appeal because of her contract with Fox. For the same reason, she had to turn down three offers for plays on Broadway—but saying "No" to England was the most difficult of all.

Ragnar Qvale, the Darryl Zanuck importation from the ski trails of Sun Valley, was given his first movie role on the same day Germany entered his native land. The role is a Nazi officer in "Four Sons." Said Ragnar, "I'm grateful for the opportunity, but they must think I'm a terrific actor to be able to play the part of a Nazi officer—at this time."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 25.

LAMENT: When the touring Helen Hayes show, "Ladies and Gentlemen," played in Cincinnati, the Saturday performances were cancelled when Miss Hayes was notified of her father's death. She rushed to the airport, and flew to attend the funeral. All the seats in the Earle Theater had been sold for these two performances—and so the theater owners were compelled to refund $7,000 to the disappointed customers. Equity decided that the cast should be paid full salary, and the stagehands also were paid. In addition, the theater owner has made legal presentation for the percentage of the receipts which would have been his, if the star had performed . . . Miss Hayes, who figured in the "Act of God" law suit brought when she quit a show because of her impending motherhood, reviewed these events, and said: "People no longer can have children, or bury their dead, in dignity."

DISCOVERY: Gene Solow, who wrote the movie adaptation for "Of Mice and Men," now holds the record for the shortest writing contract in Hollywood . . . After "Of Mice and Men" was released, Goldwyn hired Solow, and showed him the story he was to adapt. Solow read it, told Goldwyn he didn't like it—and his employment was terminated at the end of that first day . . . "That's okay with me," Goldwyn told him. "Furthermore, I looked you up, and found out you didn't write 'Of Mice and Men' John Steinbeck wrote it."

ENTERPRISE: August Heckscher, who now is 92, has started to write his autobiography. The first chapter is completed, and describes the land that was Germany on the day he was born—the Germany which then was involved in the Revolution of 1848 . . . Mr. Heckscher is positive that he'll be able to complete his record of his long life, and now is negotiating for a magazine to serialize it. He will contribute his royalties to the Heckscher Foundation.

ↀↄ

TRIUMPH: Some months ago Norman Corwin, who directs the "Pursuit of Happiness" radio program, induced Charles Laughton to broadcast on that show, although the fee was an insignificant one, "You'll be able to do fine things, apart from your movie work," Corwin assured him . . . Laughton made the broadcast, and was so pleased that he returned thereafter for another appearance on that program . . . "And now," Laughton told Corwin, "you're going to do fine things, apart from your radio work." Laughton went to the officials at RKO, told them of Corwin's work—and as a result he has been signed by RKO as a writer-director.

CHATTER: Bernt Balchen is going to Canada within a few days, and from there to Europe, where he'll fly in the war sector . . . Willie Pogany, the artist whose portrait of Constance Bennett received so much publicity, will do a portrait of the Dionne quintuplets . . . Eddy Duchin's 3-year-old son, Peter, who has been living in California because of his health, will return to New York next week, completely recovered.

DEFEAT: The newspaper published by the students at Stephens, in St. Louis, reports that eight girls had received a phone call from John Garfield. The octette had contributed to a joint long-distance call to Garfield, who was unable to answer the phone. They wired him, and asked him to notify them where and when he'd be available. All they wanted to do was to hear his voice . . . The next evening the girls received the phone call. "Is this Mr. Garfield?" the caller was asked . . . "Yes," he replied. Each of them then took turns at questioning him, and the story was duly reported in the school paper. "We did hear his voice," the girls attested, "and it was wonderful" . . . If that voice was wonderful, then it's a surprising compliment to "Killer" Thomajen, who found only three jobs in Hollywood, now is Garfield's bodyguard—and is the one who called the girls.

FEALTY: The Hollywood Reporter adds this to the many professions of loyalty made by Gregory Ratoff to his employer, Darryl Zanuck. A screen-writer confessed to Ratoff that he'd like to raise a family, but was afraid. "You see, Gregory," he explained, "suppose my children are all boys—then I'd have to bring them up in this tough world" . . . Ratoff shouted: "Was Darryl Zanuck afraid of facing the world?"

600 Physicists Here Inspect X-Ray Gun

One of 68 Speeches Describes Use Of 'Electrical Zeros'

More than 600 delegates opened the three-day meeting of the American Physical Society yesterday by inspecting the new high-voltage electrical laboratory at the Bureau of Standards and listening to 68 learned addresses.

The high-voltage laboratory was described by Dr. Lauriston S. Taylor, chief of the X-ray Division. Its principal feature is a giant X-ray apparatus whose generator has a 1,500,000-volt capacity. X-ray targets are behind heavy concrete protective barriers

"Electrical Zeros" Harnessed

Dr. C. Guy Suits, 34-year-old physicist, of the General Electrical Research Laboratory at Schenectady, N. Y., told how it is possible to extinguish a 10,000-degree arc flame—about as hot as the sun—instantly by shooting electrical "zeros" into the fire.

The method, which is of practical application in motor engineering, is ten times as effective as old procedures, he declared.

Instead of suppresisng the arc in an electrical switch with a condenser permanently shunted across the contacts, the new method employs a much smaller condenser, which is introduced into the circuit as soon as the contacts have opened.

Five-Day Weather Forecasts

The condenser is charged to a polarity opposite the arc in the switch so that the current is momentarily reduced to zero. During this time the arc cools and is extinguished.

At the National Academy of Sciences Building, the American Geophysical Union heard Dr. H. C. Willett, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, report encouraging results in predicting the weather five days ahead by studying meteorological data gathered from the entire northern hemisphere. To date, he said, 70 per cent accuracy has been attained—appreciably lower than the record of the United States Weather Bureau, which makes no forecasts more than 48 hours in advance.

High School Girl, Missing 3 Days, Returns Home

Marion Louise Kerr, 15-year-old Paul Junior Migh School student, missing since Monday, returned yesterday to her home at 60 Farragut place northwest.

Exhausted and half-starved, the girl was under the care of physician last night. According to her mother, Mrs. Abbie Kerr, an employe of the General Accounting Office, Marion became ill while attending a motion picture at the York Theater on Georgia avenue, and wandered aimlessly around the neighborhood for more than three days.

Police said the child apparently slept in parks and had nothing to eat during her disappearance. She stumbled into the Kerr home shortly after noon yesterday and was immediately put to bed.

Except for exposure and hunger, Mrs. Kerr said her daughter was unharmed.

D. C. Payroll Tax Cut Legislation Runs Into Snarl

Legislation to cut the District pay roll tax and liberalize benefits from the District Unemployment Compensation Act has run into another snarl, it appeared yesterday, as the judiciary subcommittee of the House District. Committee met for two hours without reaching an agreement on the major provisions of two bills.

A proposal of the Board of Trade that a merit or experience rating clause be inserted in the measure was responsible for the latest disagreement, said Chairman McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi.

McGehee said he would call another conference today in an effort to effect an agreement.

Students to Vie In Speech Contest

The first public speaking contest for students in the Basselin Foundation of the Catholic University will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in McMahon Hall auditorium on the campus, with the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector, presiding.

Judges will be the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the School of Philosophy at the university; the Very Rev. Herbert F. Gallagher, O. F. M., vice commisary of the Franciscan Monastery, and the Rev. Edward J. O'Brien, director of charities for the archdiocese of Baltimore.

Station PDS Presents Old-Time Fiddler

Will E. Ayer, whose home is in Putney, Vt., and who is in Washington for the National Folk Festival, is today's guest star. He will play the old fiddle tunes which he started to play back in 1888.

Mr. Ayer's program is the last in a series broadcast over Station PDS in connection with the seventh annual National Folk Festival, which opened yesterday at Constitution Hall and will continue there today and tomorrow.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Hester Made Executive For Reserve Affairs

Secretary Woodring yesterday named Col. John H. Hester, who Wednesday was nominated for promotion to the rank of brigadier general, as executive for reserve affairs in the War Department.

He will succeed Brig. Gen. Charles F. Thompson, about July 1. Thompson will relieve Maj. Gen. Walter C. Sweeney as commander of the Third Division at Fort Lewis, Wash., when the latter goes on leave pending his retirement for age

Boys Club Show To Be Tonight

The first spring carnival of the Washington Boys Club will be held at the Southeast Branch, Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast, at 7:30 p. m. today, with movie stars nad local performers fetaured on the program.

Actor Arthur Treacher and Hollywood Columnist Ed Sullivan will appear. Included in the performance will be gymnastic and acrobatic routines by club groups, musical numbers by glee clubs, Harry Hiers' harmonica band, Bill Drew's five-piece orchestra and a club string quartet.

Republicans to Count D. C. Delegate Voters

Five Hundred Fans Protest Film Romance

Nearly 500 ostensible reasons why he shouldn't marry Dorothy Lamour were recently trundled out to Robert Preston on Cecil B. Le Mille's "Northwest Mounted Police" set.

All the objections were from fans and constituted nearly half the virile young actor's fan mail during the week.

As a result, the Preston-Lamour romance, which started when they worked together in "Typhoon," loomed today as an important issues between the two stars and their studio. And even more important was the exhuming of a question which had been considered settled in the negative years ago—whether it really matters at the box office when a star marries.

If the Preston letters are any barometer, it does.

Not one of the correspondents objected particularly to Dorothy Lamour—they just didn't want Preston toget married at all. As one girl put it:

"I suppose it doesn't make any real difference whether our film favorites are married or not, but we do so like to think of them single, and there are so few single screen heroes left! Please, please, Bob, remain a bachelor for our sakes!"

Preston, as usual, declined to commit himself on reports that he and Dorothy are bound for the altar.

Girl Scouts to Prepare Luncheon for First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt to Be Among Guests Of Intermediates of Gordon Junior High; They Give Recipe for Escalloped Chicken

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

A LUNCHEON that any Washington hostess might be proud to serve to her guests is the one that the Intermediates of the Girl Scouts, ages 10 to 12, of the Gordon Junior High School, are planning to give April 30 at the Little House with Mrs. Roosevelt, honorary president of their organization, as honor guest.

This party is in celebration of National Better Homes Week, beginning next Sunday. Other guests will be Mrs. Ralph G. Wright, Mrs. Walter N. Rothchild, Miss Agnes Leahy, New York City; Mrs. John A. Frick, Allentown, Penn.; Mrs. E. Swift Newton Daylesford, Penn.; Mrs. Henry H. Flather, Mrs. H. C. Kramer, Washington.

Martha Ellyn

The Scouts who will cook and serve the luncheon have been trained by their home economics teachers, Miss Nellie Riggles, Miss Ruth McRae and Mrs. Dorothy Graves. The girls selected by these teachers to prepare and serve are: Eleanor Robinson, Troop 1; May Swingle, Nancy Cowan and Marian Fadely, Troop 8; Fern Bogema and Virginia Steele, Troop 71; Betty Rosser, Troop 80; Sarah Donaldson, Troop 14.

Every item on the menu is to be made by the Scouts, and the following is the menu they will serve to their guests.

Luncheon Menu

Tomato juice with canapes
Bouillon Melba toast
Escalloped chicken Green peas
Stuffed tomatoes Clover leaf rolls
Strawberry ice cream
Sponge cake Coffee

The tomato juice and canapes will be served in the living room, and after the luncheon the coffee will be served in the living room. The girls have furnished me with the recipes for the escalloped chicken they are serving and the baked stuffed tomatoes with mushrooms. Here are their recipes:

Escalloped Chicken—Butter a baking dish. Sprinkle the bottom with buttered bread crumbs. Arrange pieces of cooked chicken on the crumbs. Pour chicken stock seasoned with salt and pepper over this, using only enough stock to keep chicken moist. Cover the top with buttered crumbs that have been mixed with finely chopped parsley. Place in moderate oven, 350 degrees, and bake until thoroughly heated and crumbs are browned.

Baked Stuffed Tomatoes With Mushrooms—Wipe and remove thin slice from stem end of 8 smooth, medium sized tomatoes. Take out seeds and pulp and drain off most of the liquid. Sprinkle with salt, invert and let stand 30 minutes. Add an equal amount of sauteed mushrooms to pulp, season with salt and pepper and a few drops of onion juice. Refill tomatoes with mixture. Place in buttered pan and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven, 400 degrees.

The dessert is to be made by the girls, too. It is to be fresh strawberry ice cream and sponge cake. The recipe for the sponge cake follows:

Sponge Cake—Wash, grate and squeeze 1 lemon. Separate the yolks and whites of 5 eggs. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, and beat until thick and lemon colored. Add 1 cup sugar gradually and continue beating until all the sugar has been added and the grains disappear. Sift cake flour 3 times, and measure to 1 cup. Add to other ingredients and beat until all ingredients are well blended. Beat 5 egg whites until stiff, then gently fold in the mixture. Pour into an ungreased pan which has a tube in center. Bake in 325 degree oven, from 50 to 60 minutes or until the cake springs back when touched gently in center. Invert on a cake rack that is covered with a towel. When cool remove with a spatula.

Fruits as Moisteners

An apple, well washed, will help keep spice, sugar or chocolate cookies moist, when stored with them in a covered jar (earthenware kind preferred). For a delicious subtle flavor put an orange and lemon (well washed, of course) with sugar cookies stored in a jar.

Preview of Foods to Be Served First Lady

Girl Scouts will entertain their honorary president, Mrs. Roosevelt, and other guests at luncheon, April 30, at the Little House. Above—Marion Fadley (left), Troop 8, and Sarah Donaldson (center), Troop 14, Fort Myer, have paused in preparation of baked stuffed tomatoes with mushrooms to look at the sponge cake Frances Dowden, Troop 79, has just finished baking. Both these dishes are on the menu for their guest luncheon

Mrs. Brownstein Takes Honors in This Week's Contest

MRS. McINTYRE

By The Post Food Editor.

THERE IS an old saying about strawberries: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did," which just about expresses almost everyone's feelings about these juicy red bits of goodness. The following winning recipes express the favorite ways of the contestants in this week's Post recipe contest, of preparing strawberries.

Strawberries Chantilly

First Prize, $3
Mrs. W. N. Brownstein, 921 Nineteenth street northwest

Recipe: Wash and stem 1 pint large strawberries. Reserve 8 large ones. Cut the rest in halves. Cover with 5 tablespoons powdered sugar. Set in refrigerator to chill. Beat whites of 2 eggs until stiff enough to hold their shape. Add 4 tablespoons powdered sugar slowly and beat until mixture stands in peaks. Add 2 tablespoons rum to berries. Stir lightly with beaten egg whites. Fill tall sherbert glasses, top with whipped cream. Garnish with 1 large berry. Chill and serve cold with sponge or angel cake or macaroons. Serves 6.

Strawberry Marshmallow Pudding

Second Prize, $2
Mrs. W. L. McIntyre, 2415 Fourteenth street northeast

Recipe: Clean, cook and mash 1 quart strawberries. Add 20 marshmallows and continue to cook until marshmallows are partially dissolved. Allow to cool. Add 4 tablespoons lemon juice. Fold in 1 cup cream, whipped. Set in refrigerator overnight. Makes 9 small servings. This is a dessert for children and adults.

Strawberry Fritters With Wine Sauce

Miss Jean Trantz, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest

Recipe: Sift together ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add 1 beaten egg and mix with milk. Stir until smooth and add 2 tablespoons melted butter. Drop 12 large strawberries into batter, coat well and drop into hot fat, 375 degrees. Cook until brown. Drain, dredge with sugar and serve hot with wine sauce. Wine sauce—Mix together 1 cup sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon in top of double boiler. Stir in 1 tablespoon softened butter; add 2 well-beaten egg yolks, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat with rotary beater 10 minutes. Stir in ½ cup port or Tokay wine. Place over boiling water and beat until thick and frothy, stirring or whisking with beater; do not let it boil. Serve at once with fritters.

Strawberry Shortcakes

Mrs. Martha Keith, Greenbelt, Md.

Recipe: Sift 2 cups flour with 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Cut in 6 tablespoons shortening until thoroughly mixed. Add about ¾ cup milk to make stiff dough. Roll dough ½-inch thick. Cut into large biscuits about 3 inches in diameter. Arrange biscuits in pairs, one on top of the other. Spread butter between. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees for 15 minutes, or until brown. Separate biscuits and pour a generous serving of sliced, sweetened berries between biscuits and on top, in layer fashion. Serve with rich cream. 4 servings.

Strawberry Puff

Mrs. Eugenia D'Camera, 1843 Burke street southeast

Recipe: Mix 1½ cups vanilla wafer crumbs with ¼ cup melted butter and 2 tablespoons sugar. Press firmly into 8-inch square pan. Add ½ cup sugar gradually to 4 stiffly beaten egg whites and continue beating until meringue forms peaks. Swirl over crumb mixture. Bake in slow oven, 325 degrees, for 20 minutes. Cool. Spread 2 cups sweetened strawberries over top. Whip 1 cup heavy cream. Add 1 tablespoon sugar. Spread over berries. Garnish with a few whole berries.

Wall Cleaning

To clean painted walls, wash carefully with a sponge dipped in warm sudsy water. Wipe off the soil with a cloth and repeat until the walls are cleaned. Rinse well with a cloth or sponge dipped in lukewarm water. Wipe dry. The walls should be perfectly dry before repainting.

Meat Partners

Corn and carrots are good partners, served in a savory white sauce or merely seasoned up with chopped, browned bacon and a dash of onion. Serve it some time with broiled chops or steak or with ham in any style.

No More Rattles

If you have trouble with rattling windows you can get temporary relief by pushing folded blotters in the spaces between the window casings.

'It's No Use Ruining Both Our Lives,' College Man Tells Girl Who Expects His Child; She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a co-ed attending a local university and I am in need of some real help. Until I enrolled here two years ago, I had never lived away from home for any length of time. After some dating experience, I started going regularly with a young man who is an upper classman in the same school.

One evening after a campus dance, we went to a roadside tavern and had a few drinks, which caused us to lose our heads completely . . . A few weeks ago, I learned I was pregnant. At first, the boy told me not to worry. He said he would quit school and stick by me. But now he says it's no use ruining both our lives and he advises me to write home and tell my folks everything.

He says what happened was all my fault, anyway; and that I am not the first girl to whom this kind of thing has happened. He says there are "ways to fix things" like this and I'm just a silly fool. But if I were to take his advice and write home, I think Mother would die; and I would never be able to look Dad in the face again.

What do you think I should do? I am trying to be calm and sensible and reason things out. But there just doesn't seem to be any solution. Please tell me what you think I should—or can—do.

WORRIED.

Discuss the Problem With Dean of Women

DEAR WORRIED: I think you should take this problem straight to the Dean of Women at your school. Her training for the job she holds presumably qualifies her to give dispassionate, intelligent audience to the story; after which she will co-operate with you in making such plans as the situation seems to require.

In all probability, she will work through the Dean of Men at the school in charging the young man with his undeniable responsibility in the matter—and this I consider to be extremely important under the circumstances, particularly in view of his despicably cynical, non-cooperative present attitude. He needs to learn that honorable minds do not second his theory that the girl is fully to blame in episodes of this sort; and, moreover, that his cruel taunts and callous intent to save his own skin—regardless of the additional punishment thus heaped on you—show pretty plainly who is the more unmoral character of the two.

The young man needs to have his thinking set straight in more ways than one; since his assumption that he can jump free of the entanglement by having you "tell your folks everything." doesn't quite make sense. If you were to take his advice, I imagine your parents would be down on him like a ton of bricks in the twinkling of an eye; and he would be in for a grim accounting that he hadn't bargained for.

So, if he knows what's good for him, as the saying goes, he'll recognize the wisdom of voluntarily shouldering his portion of whatever consequences are entailed; of working quietly with you toward a decent solution of the problem; and of identifying himself manfully with whatever story of the affair it may seem necessary to give your parents.

Romantic Disillusionment Pays Lifelong Dividends

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You gave "Old Maid" a bracer in your stern reply to her of April 20. But maybe she could use something in the way of solace, also. In her present anguish at being jilted by a man who leaned, for four years, on her companionship and financial aid—it may be some comfort to her to know that nearly every girl who fails to marry before 25 has at least one disillusioning experience of a similar sort.

The more generous and maternal a young woman's impulses, the more likely she is to lavish time, affection and even money on some weakling who makes a bid first for her pity and then for her love—as happened in the case of "Old Maid"—(who can't be much of an old maid, by the way, at 25). But such an experience should not be reckoned as a total loss. Far from it. It is money in the Bank of Experience, from which she can draw interest all the rest of her life.

I happen to know a woman who gave more than $1,000 to just such a man as "Old Maid" describes. Then he jilted her. And she told me afterward that she considered it an investment in education worth more to her than the four years she spent in college. She said the experience taught her to be a realist rather than a romantic idealist—and greatly helped her in both her business and social life thereafter.

Life and fun aren't over at 25 for the unmarried girl. In these days, many girls have more beaux in their thirties than in their twenties. And while single men are scarcer at that age, the girl knows better how to get on with those she does meet—often just because of some earlier experience such as "Old Maid" had.

How to Varnish New Floors

Although shellac is often used for wood floors, varnish is more resistant to water stains and scratches. It wears much better, too. A wood filler should be used to fill the pores of the wood before varnishing. Of course, the floor should be smooth, very clean and dry before the varnish is applied. At least two coats should be used over the filler. Quick-drying floor varnishes require a comparatively short time to dry; but be sure the varnish is hard before stepping on the floor or applying a new coat.

Scantily Dressed Mannequins So Lifelike They Embarrass Visitors at Studio

New York, April 25.

NO OUTRIGHT believer in spooks, I still practically go into a swoon when I step out of the elevator into the showroom of Jean Spadea's mannequin studio on East Fifty-sixth street. It's a big room, dimly lighted by a small, frosted skylight. And about its walls stand about 20 extraordinarily lifelike mannequins, a few in stylish clothes, but most either sketchily dressed or stark naked.

ALICE HUGHES

The first effect is literally numbing. The visitor feels she has stepped into the dressing room on Ladies' Night at a Turkish Bath. The girls are all very beautiful and shapely, and in the pale grey light they seem to be thoroughly alive. I have heard of a man who stepped into this startling feminine assemblage, started sharply, muttered "I BEG your pardon!" and backed into the elevator with his derby hat over his eyes. I can believe it with no effort.

The beautiful Mrs. Spadea makes mannequins for one of the best and best known big stores on the avenue. In the other room of her shop a tall and handsome blond viking models the figures from life—a beauteous girl was posing in a very scanty bathing suit on my last visit. Jean has names for most of her mannequins. One, a trifle hippier than the rest, is affectionately called "Fatty," though she really isn't. Her girl's faces are known to me for their stylish arrogance. I think I could tell a Spadea mannequin in a crowd of all breeds.

Jean is a lovely woman—undoubtedly one of the most beautiful in New York. Her nice husband, Jim, is a publisher, and there are two nice children. If you ever see a mannequin, in a store window, who seems to be snooting you in a high class way, that will be a Spadea.

Baba Hutton, whose divorce from the Danish count has been muddled by the sweet and kindly protection given his country by the benevolent Nazi government, is going to Hawaii for a long visit, adding one more to the already big New York colony in the Islands. Her reputed fiance, the handsome Bobby Sweeny, will be in London taking care of business.

Housewife Uses 2,200 Calories In Performing Daily Work

By Ida Jean Kain.

NOBODY ever thinks of calories in terms of work—a calorie is something to eat! But the mighty calorie is also a unit of measurement for energy. It is the heat required to raise one pound of water 4 degrees Fahrenheit. In terms of work, it is the amount required to lift one pound the distance of 3,08" feet.

All you have to do is figure out how many calories you require for your various activities—including work—and then get that many and no more in food. When you put the calories on that footing, your weight will never vary.

Let's take a housewife, weighing 130 pounds, and follow her through a busy 24-hour day to see just how many calories she uses.

When the alarm rings, she gets up after eight hours of gentle slumber during which she has been urning only .40 calories per pound per hour. Multiply the .40 by her weight and then by 8 and the total is 416 calories—not very many!

23 Calories to Dress

While she was lying awake trying to go to sleep and then again trying to get up, she would burn .47 calories per pound per hour. In the 15 minutes it takes her to dress, she uses around 23 calories. Dressing uses .71 calories per pound per hour.

In getting breakfast, she uses approximately the same number of calories as washing the dishes a bit later, of .87 calories per pound. This would total 113 calories per hour.

Making the beds and doing various other household tasks can be charged up as light exercise, using 1.02 calories per pound per hour. That is the number of calories she would use in sweeping the floor at 38 strokes per minute. If she sweeps for an hour, she uses 132 calories on that basis. Washing uses slightly more calories. When she washes out a few pieces, she averages 1.10 calories per pound per hour. But then she wants to take it easy for awhile—and gets at the mending, which uses only .87 calories per pound per hour.

163 Calories for Bridge

After lunch and the dishes, our housewife gets dressed to go to a bridge party and she plays bridge for two hours. Now, bridge playing is comparable to reading aloud and that takes only .63 calories per pound per hour. Our housewife would use only 163 calories in the two hours she played.

If she walks home moderately fast, she can burn 1.81 calories per pound per hour. Add to all these the calorie requirements for preparing dinner, washing the dishes, and sitting for several hours in the evening at home or in the movies and we find that our typical housewife does not burn more than 2,200 calories per day—but that is almost twice as many as the 1,300 it is estimated the "idle woman" requires!

The figures used in these energy expenditure calculations were taken from Mary Swartz Rose's "Laboratory Handbook for Dietetics."

Hobby Show

The annual hobby show for the benefit of the Clinic for Neurotic Pets was held yesterday at the Hotel Swank. Mrs. Casper de Menthe Bougonvilla permitted the public to view for the first time her famous collection of plush monkeys and Mrs. John John showed her amazing assortment of china porcupines.

Colonel Artemus Abercrombie exhibited his collection of nudes, including "Apartment Court Venus," also his valuable first edition joke books. Baroness Petunia von Patch displayed some of her Persian art, also her unique collection of hair nets. Judge Van Wyck Whiffington showed his collection of plug hats and Mrs. Montclair Schooner, grande dame of Truthtown society, exhibited for the first time publicly her assemblage of mounted cockroaches.

War Refugees

Mrs. Wheelwright van Ziltenham has just arrived from her villa in Southern France and has taken an apartment at The Mausoleum. Mrs. Ziltenham, who was forced to dismantle her beautiful villa and put her priceless paintings, statuary and objects d'art in storage, is desolated at being separated from her treasures, but like all other brave women who have known war's ravages is bearing up gallantly. She will entertain at a small dinner tonight at the Hotel Swank.

Mrs. Ambrose Fellowes Devereaux Kim has given up her London house due to fear of bombing and has taken a penthouse here which she will retain for the duration of the war. A former American, Mrs. Devereaux-Kim has lived abroad a large part of her life and is finding the adjustment here a bit difficult. She says she especially misses her British tea as Americans are unskilled at tea-making. She left her British staff of servants in London

Club Note

The final banquet last night of the Association for Improvement, which has been in convention here this week, was marked by the collapse of a large number of the members. Emergency first-aid stations were set up in the Hotel Arabesque where the banquet was held. Many of the victims later were taken to hospitals.

Members of the association had a very strenuous final day. Mrs. Mortimer Martinet, the president, said last night from her hospital bed. The program began with a breakfast, which was followed by a morning musicale and a drill team exhibition. The members then went to an art exhibit, then attended a luncheon, after which they went on a sightseeing tour, returning in time to attend a pageant, and afternoon musicale and later a tea and still later the banquet. Another pageant to have followed last nights banquet was postponed until next year.

Suburban Notes

The Merry Matron's Club of Spirea Village has abandoned its plans to present the play, "Fair, Fat and Forty," as it has been found impossible to cast the leading role.

The Hedgerow Drive Bridge Club has decided to disband as members can think of nothing new to give in bridge prizes, and all the members are overstocked with bath salts, stationery, cactus plants, dusting powder and compacts.

Justice and Mrs. Miller Honor Mrs. Alfred Knopf

Authors and Those Who Would Be Turn Out in Droves for Tea to Meet Wife of New York Publisher

By Hope Ridings Miller

AUTHORS AND WOULD-BE authors were a dime a dozen yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. When there's a member of a book firm around, you can always count on writers to turn out by the dozens; and the guest of honor at yesterday's fete was Mrs. Alfred Knopf, wife of the well-known New York publisher.

Hope Ridings Miller

In town for a series of interviews with writers, Mrs. Knopf has shop-talked with a number of Capitalites the past two days. And when she leaves town this morning, she will take with her some new manuscripts and the promise of several others.

Literary comments were tossed right and left over the tea cups yesterday as guests collected, and lingered, in the Miller's apartment from 5 to 7 p. m. From the way they clustered around Mrs. Knopf, you would have thought everybody present had a book on tap. May Merrill Miller, the hostess, was one of the few present who has a second novel almost finished. Her first, you will remember, was entitled "First the Blade," but she's not yet telling the name of the next one.

Receiving her guests informally, Mrs. Miller wore a floor-length frock of black crepe, made with long sleeves and a high neckline, edged in pastel sequins. Mrs. Knopf was trimly turned out in an all-black ensemble, accented with a smart straw hat.

Iris and sweet peas, arranged in unusual bouquets, decorated the drawing room and the buffet in the dining room. The tea table was centered with red roses and white stock, flanked by tall white tapers. Generally assisting the hostess were Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Mrs. Wesley Sturges. Among those who took their turns at pouring tea or coffee were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. Harold Stephens, Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Henry W. Edgerton, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge and Mrs. Donald Halstead.

Among those I saw there were Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Pendleton Hogan, Mrs. Sheridan Downey, Mrs. O. W. McNeese, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Justice Harold Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Grady, of San Francisco, who will end their Washington visit tomorrow; Lewis Loftin Moneyway, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, Miss Mary V. Johnson and many others.

OF PEOPLE AND PARTIES: The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun were the guests in whose honor Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith entertained at a dinner for 20 last evening. Others in the company were the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban, the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, the Turkish Counselor, Orhan H. Erol, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Lady Broderick, Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Arthur Bradley Campbell, Clarence Hewes and Ralph Hill.

Mrs. Meredith's granddaughter, Miss Barbara Bohen, who will graduate from the Madeira School this spring, will make her debut in Des Moines early this summer. Later, if plans work out, she and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick O. Bohen, and Mrs. Meredith, will go to Hawaii for several weeks.

SPEAKING OF TRAVEL—Miss Edith Ratcliffe, of Corpus Christi, Tex., who is the guest of former Consul General and Mrs. John Ball Osborne, of the Westchester, will sail tomorrow for Italy. Refusing to let the war abroad interfere with her marriage plans, she will leave on the American export liner, Excambion, and will marry Hugh Osborne MacCauley, of the United States Consulate in Rome, shortly after her arrival there. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne are Mr. MacCauley's grandparents.

A COMING EVENT is the "at home" planned for tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. Farley Smith, son and daughter-in-law of Senator and Mrs. Ellison Smith. The fete is being ararnged in honor of Mr. Smith's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton H. Pierce, of Lynchburg, S. C., who will celebrate their eighth wedding anniversary tomorrow. Mrs. Pierce is the former Anna Brunson Smith. More than 100 guests are expected at the Smith apartment at the Kennedy-Warren between 5 and 7 p. m.

Copley Amorys Hosts at Tea

Mr. and Mrs. Copley Amory entertained yesterday afternoon at a combination tea and motion-picture party at which their son, J. Forbes Amory, gave a travel talk to accompany the movies in color of his recently completed tour of South America.

Mrs. Amory, who received the guests for tea at 4:30 in the drawing room of their home on Q street, was gowned in deep purple, fashioned on classic lines. Her daughter, Mrs. Douglas B. Smith, of Port au Prince, Haiti, who is here for a brief visit, assisted in receiving. She was gowned in a black and white whirl print with a lipstick red belt.

In the drawing room and throughout the house were vases of pink and white snapdragons. The tea table in the dining room was centered with yellow roses and lighted by tall ivory tapers.

Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, who was among the early arrivals, was chic in a smart black outfit. Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman were there, in trim, dark-blue, she with silver fox furs.

Among others noted during the afternoon were Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, Miss Belle Gurnee, Mrs. Henry T. Flood, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hall, Mrs. Daniel Finly, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman Phillips, Mrs. Swagar Sherley, Dr. Walter Kendall, Thomas P. Ahrens, Mrs. James M. Beck, Mr. and Mrs. William Bradley Willard the Misses Patten, Mrs. Duncan McKim, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Waldo Knowlton, Dr. and Mrs. William B. Marbury, A. Bradley Campbell and many more.

Mrs. Amory will entertain again at tea this afternoon when many of her guests will be fellow members of the Colonial Dames.

Geographers To Hear Lecture On the Caribbean

The Washington group of the Society of Woman Geographers will meet at luncheon tomorrow at the Washington Club. Mrs. Arletta Ahrens will be guest speaker and show her motion pictures of lands about the Caribbean.

Mrs. Russell LeGear, Miss Edith M. Fitton, Miss Emma Mertins Thom, Miss Helen B. Smith, and Miss Taisia Stadnichenko will be hostesses. Among those who will attend are Miss Isabelle F. Story, Mrs. Katherine C. Hafstad, Miss Mary A. Nourse, Miss Irene A. Wright, Mrs. Sophia A. Saucerman, Mrs. Charles M. Hendley, Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, Mrs. William C. Huntington, Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, Miss Margaret A. Hitch, Mrs. Edward A. Stafford, Dr. Helen M. Strong, Miss Evelyn L. Yeomans and Mrs. Harry A. McBride.

Luncheon Given By Mrs. Norris

Mrs. George W. Norris entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Congressional Club in honor of Mrs. Edward R. Burke, wife of Senator Burke, and Mrs. Hyde Sweet, wife of the newly elected Representative from Nebraska.

Assisting Mrs. Norris in receiving her 21 guests were her two daughters, Mrs. John Robertson and Mrs. Gordon Rath. Among the guests were Mrs. Burke's daughters, Mrs. Lewis Lind and Mrs. Louie Bean.

Mrs. Higgins, Dr. Griggs Wed

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Karig, of Seminary Hill, Alexandria, was the scene of the wedding last evening at 7 of Mrs. Alvin M. Higgins and Dr. Edward Howard Griggs, internationally known educator and lecturer. The bride is Mrs. Karig's aunt.

Dr. Alexander C. Zabriskie, of the Episcopal Theological Seminary faculty, performed the ceremony, which was followed by a supper and small reception. Miss Keaton Karig, grandniece of the bride, was maid of honor. Later Dr. and Mrs. Griggs left for a motor tour of the South, after which they will make their home at Orchard Hill, Croton-on-Hudson.

The bride is the widow of Alvin M. Higgins, New York attorney and author. Dr. Griggs has served on the faculties of Indiana and Leland Stanford universities and is the author of more than 30 books of literary and historical criticism. Mrs. Griggs is the former Miss Margaret Keating, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Keating, of Terre Haute, Ind. She is active in Westchester County, N .Y., political, charitable and social activities.

Daughter Born To Riley Smiths

Mr. and Mrs. Riley Smith, of Lexington, Va., have announced the birth of a daughter on Monday.

Mrs. Smith is the former Miss Frances Ocllo Boykin, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Frank Boykin, of Mobile, Ala., and this city. The child will be named Ocllo, and is the fourth generation of her family to be christened thus.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Ambassador of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, will sail for Venezuela shortly for a ten weeks vacation. Senora de Escalante and Senorita Maria Teresa Escalante will remain at the embassy.

The Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch entertained at dinner on Wednesday for the former Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, who are visiting here. Ranking guests were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun. Several other friends were invited to drop in after dinner.

Gen. Edwin M. Watson, Military Aide and secretary to the President, is at the Gideon Putnam Hotel while taking the cure at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hutchinson I. Cone are at the Waldorf Astoria in New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin K. Leon, who have been vacationing in Mexico, have returned to their home on Van Buren street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price will entertain at dinner on May 3.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

AT THE SECOND of the spring series of Wednesday night supper dances the "spring" part of the title was conspicuous by its absence, only a few hardy souls daring to look out into a chilly garden through a momentarily opened door.

The "supper," however, was very important.

So much so that one bachelor worked out a system by which he may absorb a maximum of the delicious food which is a feature of the 1925 F street club. This young blade arrives early and alone, having gone to no cocktail party or eaten any cocktail "tidbits." He stakes out a small table in a corner and then arrives at the buffet with an empty plate in each hand. Here he has a waiter-pal, to whom he says, "Fill these to the brim. I've brought a beautiful young girl, but she has a most unbecoming appetite." The waiter obliges and my friends retires to his little table, eats both plates of food, including second helpings, and then, feeling considerably refreshed, dances until Sidney plays "Home, Sweet Home."

TO RISE TO A slightly more spiritual plane, the club was gay with spring flowers and bright with the spring frocks of pretty ladies. Among the latter were blonde Mrs. Edward Page, in mint green; Mrs. Lloyd Moore, in eggshell satin; Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, becomingly sun-tanned and wearing a flower print; Mrs. William Flather, in a pale gray dinner gown trimmed with gold buttons and belt; Mrs. Drew Pearson, in a dress of soft chiffon which combined a raspberry bodice with a pearl-gray skirt, and Mrs. Gray Foster, in white organza encrusted with delicate black lace.

ANNE MITCHELL, who has come down from New York with her mother to enjoy a week or so of Washington gaiety, wore pale pink chiffon combined with pink lame and fitted in a way which indicated Paris. Mrs. Hugh Cumming had chosen a very unusual and attractive frock with an olive green skirt, a wide band of chartreuse at the waistline and nasturtium-colored blouse, with a cowl which made a fetching hood. Mrs. William P. MacCracken's dress was of printed organdy, the pattern reminiscent of a paper-lace Valentine. Mrs. Francis Whitten was in classic white chiffon, and Mrs. Selden Chapin was smart in black and white.

Others present were Commander and Mrs. William D. Thomas, she just returned from a visit to Williamsburg with their young daughter; Mrs. Crosby Miller, Eleanor Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Elsie Ekengren, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Anne Perin, Stellita Stapleton, Diana Rowland, Brinkley Smithers over from Baltimore, George Renshard, Llewellyn Thompson, Andrew Wiley, William Mitchell, Jack Vietor and dozens more.

MRS. MONDELL GREGG gave a small cocktail party the other afternoon in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Henry Hoyt, of New York. Mrs. Arthur Woods came in looking very chic in a gray tailleur, worn with a red and white dotted blouse, and Mrs. Robert Scotten sported the most minute and amusing little sailor in navy blue, with a matching dress. Other guests were Mrs. Sherman Miles, Frank Currie, down from New York; Sherlock Davis, Robert Coe and John Stonborough.

Mrs. Harvey Firestone, jr., has arrived from Ohio and has taken an apartment at the Shoreham for the spring months. Mrs. Firestone is petite and blonde and very attractive. She has many friends in Washington, among them Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, whom she knew in Argentina when Mr. Bliss was United States Ambassador in Buenos Aires.

J. R. McLean 3d Christened At Friendship

For the second time within a year Mrs. Edward Beale McLean yesterday gathered a congenial group of family members and friends to celebrate a christening at Friendship, her rambling home on Wisconsin avenue.

Star of the afternoon was the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean who came down from New York for the ceremony. The baby is the third John R. McLean, having been named for his father, better known as "Jock," and his great-grandfather, the late John R. McLean.

Last November the Friendship was the scene of a similar party for tiny Emily Beale McLean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr. "Ned" and, the former Anne Meem, with their young daughter, were on hand for yesterday's party.

Wears Family Robe of Lace

The christening took place in the long drawing room which heretofore has been the scene of many outstanding social gatherings. Flowers filled the room and a temporary altar had been erected. It was banked in white carnations, tulips and branches of cherry blossoms. The latest addition to the McLean family wore the embroidered lace robe in which all the McLean children were christened.

The ceremony took place at 4:30 o'clock with the Rev. Dr. Walter Lowrie, of Princeton, officiating. "Ned" McLean was one of the godfathers for his nephew. Edward Reeves, who was down from New York City for the event with Mrs. Reeves, was the other godfather. Serving as godmother was Miss Evalyn Washington McLean, who has but recently returned from New York to make her home with her mother here.

Both Grandmothers Are Present

Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne, jr., the baby's other grandmother who arrived in town several days ago from New York, was on hand for the ceremony. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Meem. When the "Ned" McLeans leave for Colorado Springs next week they will take with them their young daughter, Emily, who has been "stopping over" with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Meem.

After the ceremony young John was carried off to his nursery while 125 or so guests remained to toast his health and partake of the buffet. Down from New York were Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Stockton and Mr. and Mrs. Edge Warburton. Associate Justice Frank Murphy was there as were Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Mrs. Welles, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson,

California Congressional Wives Set Town Talking With Party

Nine Hostesses Join in Giving a Tea Replete With Authentic State Touches, Including Love Strings, Orange Tree

The whole town seems to be talking about "that wonderful party" given by nine Congressional hostesses at the Congressional Club on Wednesday afternoon. The 500 guests who enjoyed the tea stepped into an atmosphere that was typically Californian the minute they entered the door. Those gaily colored lacquered ornaments known as "charm strings" or "love strings" were all over the place, and there was even a full-fledged orange tree—7 feet tall—to say nothing of dozens of palms to add an authentic California note.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Albert E. Carer, Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Mrs. Frank Buck, Mrs. John H. Toland, Mrs. John Z. Anderson, Mrs. Carl Henshaw, Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard, all wives of California Representatives, and Mrs. James MacLafferty whose husband formerly was in Congress.

Horn of Plenty Is Featured

Chambers of Commerce the length and breadth of the Golden State never turned out any display more glamorous than the one exhibited by these hostesses, who gave a party everybody probably will write home about. Receiving in the ballroom of the club, the group ushered their guests into a setting as colorful and as beautiful as any seen in the Capital this season. A huge horn of plenty, spilling California fruits, centered the tea table, which was covered with a gold tablecloth. Charm strings—made of painted gourds, pepper pods, eucalyptus leaves and what-not—were intertwined with the fruit; and there was a miniature grizzly bear on the table to add a further California note.

Blue bowls of violets, centered with towering yellow candles, ornamented the tea table. And at a smaller table where ice and cake were served there were candles, shaped and colored as oranges, arranged in a graduated effect down the center, and placed on a modernistic base of vari-colored blotters. Back of this table was the orange tree and all around were palms. California poppies, large bowls of japonica, cranes made of gourds and small Spanish guitarists also made of gourds, were also used as ornaments; and there was a handsome Spanish shawl draped on the piano.

Large Corps Assists Hostesses

Among those who alternated at the tea table were Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Mrs. Sheridan Downey, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Ed V. Izac, Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, Mrs. Thomas Ford, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. Willard E. Givens, Mrs. Charles Kramer, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mrs. Clyde Seavey, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin.

In the group generally assisting the hostess were Mrs. Frank Mayfield, Mrs. John Toland, jr., Miss Jane Downey, Miss Madge Hepburn, Mrs. Thomas Littlepage, Mrs. Frank Mouritz and Mrs. James Hogan.

Sr. Labarca Caberos' Guest

Guillermo Labarca, former minister of interior and national defense in Chile, was among the guests at the luncheon given yesterday by the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero. Senor Labarca is visiting in this country with his wife, who is a professor at the University of Chile and who is giving a series of lectures here.

Other guests at the luncheon included Manuel Bianchi, Chilean envoy to Spain; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; Ben Cherrington, chief of the division of cultural relations of the State Department; Mrs. Cherrington, Thomas Burke, chief of the department's communications division; Mrs. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Emilio Collado, Stanley Woodward, and Senora Concha Romero James, of the Pan American Union.

The Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gazitua and the Commercial Counselor and Senora de Campbell completed the party.

Mrs. Sims Snow Hostess at Party

Mrs. Sims Snow was hostess at a gay cocktail party yesterday afternoon in her apartment in Georgetown. Her apartment, by the way, is one of the most attractive in that section—with high ceilings, walls tinted a pale gray-green, and a drawing room which looks out onto a walled garden.

The hostess wore a spring print, short sleeved, and an orchid pinned on her shoulder. Delectable sandwiches and hors d'oeuvres were served, and pouring tea was Mrs. William Beale.

Among those who dropped in was Miss Margaret Frazer, practically next-door neighbor of the hostess. Mrs. Randall Hagner, who wore a pale blue flower turban with her black frock, and Mrs. William T. Mann, in a black tailored suit with a frilly white blouse and a tiny veiled hat, were among others present.

Several men had to dash away early for last evening's Harvard Club dinner. Among the guests who lingered on were Arthur Bradley Campbell and his two cousins, the Misses Meuser, both wearing lon, dresses; Mrs. Scudder Doeg, in a spring print.

Ava Singer Describes Escape From Gorilla

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

"Suddenly a huge gorilla swung down from a tree to where I stood with my cameras. With a shriek like the snarl of a dog ten times magnified, bared his teeth and reached for me with his hairy hands——"

It was Ava Hamilton Singer speaking. She sat before me trimly dressed in a brown tweed suit and a soft felt hat that appeared to have borrowed its color from her auburn hair. This was just one of countless experiences (she doesn't call them adventures) during her five years' explorations in Africa—from Cape Town to Morocco. And, believe it or not, she came to Washington to attend the D. A. R. Congress, the Associate Council of the Daughters of 1812 and the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women.

She returned some weeks ago to her home in Jacksonville, Fla., after spending five years on a trip through the heart of Africa she hed expected to require but two.

AVA HAMILTON SINGER

The encounter with the gorilla was in the Belgian Congo while she was attempting to get pictures of them. She had 200 natives working with her, rounding them into one area where they would be obliged to move before her camera in order to get into the open again. A Belgian officer and two native soldiers weer on hand to see that no harm came to the gorillas which are protected by the Belgian government. The officer was standing beside her when the great gorilla swung down at her feet. The creature was so mammoth a man looked like a pigmy beside him. He was killed before he could clutch her.

It was all over in an instant, she said, and she had no time to think of being afraid, but it was one of the narrowest escapes she ever had.

Herd of Elephants Almost Crushes Her

Another was while walking with two natives through the jungle, following "up-wind," a herd of about 500 elephants, to get pictures of baby ones.

The only danger, she explained, was that stragglers might become separated from the herd and come from another direction where they could get the human scent or that the wind should shift suddenly. This, they tested every few minutes by scattering ashese. But suddenly, almost without warning, they realized that a herd of elephants was charging up from behind them.

She and the natives swung themselves by vines into the largest trees at hand, climbing high into the top and remained there safely while the great beasts trumpeted below.

An average-sized tree is no protection, says Mrs. Singer, for they root them up like weeds or reach with their trunks to the top branches to pull you down. They can knock a car to pieces with one blow. The African elephant is considered the most dangerous beast on the continent, she says, and cannot be domesticated like the Indian elephant.

Like Grace Thompson Seton, another of the famous explorers among the Pen Women, Mrs. Singer tells many "facts stranger than fiction" in recounting her travels. There seems no end to experiences she has had.

She used the African pygmies as guides when looking for gorillas and on the opposite side of Lake Kivu, found the Watusi giants, who stand 7 and 8 feet, and are superb athletes.

Primitive People Easy to Understand

She feels at home among the primitive peoples and has no difficulty in making them understand. Their signs and symbols are much the same the world over, she says.

She spoke with wistfulness of the beauty of the jungle and of hearing the lions, leopards and different animals, all of which she was able to recognize, as they natives refused to go farther. She kept a fire burning at the front and back of the tent and, where the flap turned under at the sides, she placed cooking utensils so she would be instantly awakened should a stray jungle beast become inquisitive. She kept a flashlight and an automatic pistol under her pillow.

One of her exploits was climbing to the top of the active Nyamiagira, a volcano the natives believe is Hades. It was a five-day trip, the last two of which she made alone with cameras strapped to her back, as the natives refused to go further. She climbed over old lava beds with ashes falling around her and took pictures of the seething crater.

Mrs. E. Richard Gasch (right), elected yesterday as president of the National League of American Pen Women at its biennial convention, photographed with Audrey Wurdemann (Mrs. Joseph Auslander) who is retiring at the close of her two-year term. Mrs. Gasch, a resident of Washington, is also second vice president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs

Mrs. Gasch Is Elected President Of Pen Women's League

Mid-Administration Meeting in February To Be Held in Puerto Rico; Flying Ambassador Is Named by Group

The National League of American Pen Women yesterday elected Mrs. E. Richard Gasch president to succeed Audrey Wurdemann (Mrs. Joseph Auslander), and decided on Puerto Rico for the midadministration meeting in February.

The results of the election were announced last night at the closing banquet of the biennial convention, held at the Willard Hotel. Although the returns were to have been given as soon as the guests were seated for dinner, the counting of the ballots required a much longer time than had been expected and it was 9:30 when the announcement was made.

Officers who will serve with Mrs. Gasch are Mrs. Florence Hamilton, New York, first vice president; Francesca Falk Miller, Chicago, second vice president; Mrs. Charles S. Posegate, Cincinnati, third vice president; Mrs. John E. Norman, Coral Gables, Fla., fourth vice president; Mrs. William M. Greene, Kennebunk, Me., fifth vice president; Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, of this city, corresponding secretary; Miss Marguerite Merigold, of this city, recording secretary; Mrs. W. Scott Burton, Baltimore, treasurer; Mrs. Edmund Boone Luckett, Baltimore, auditor; Miss Clara Manderschied, Mount Rainier, Md., librarian; Miss Eva May Atwood, Cincinnati, registrar, and Mrs. Edna Lamoore Waldo, Bismarck, N. Dak., historian.

With the choice of Puerto Rico as the place for the next convention, the Pen Women also named Adele Davis, aviatrix delegate from the Cleveland branch, as "flying ambassador" for the conclave. She will fly her own plane, meeting the delegates who go by boat.

The convention will be held February 23-25 to coincide with the grand carnival. Time on the island will be given to sightseeing and entertainment, with business meetings on shipboard. Members of the national board of the league will be entertained at the Governor's Palace while they are there.

Mrs. Cajigas, wife of Dr. Cajigas, of this city, who is a native of Puerto Rico, arranged the banquet Tuesday night at which the invitation to hold the convention on the island was formally presented by Mrs. Ana Alfonso. Much of the enthusiasm for the Puerto Rican trip was due to Mrs. Cajigas' efforts to give the delegates a preview of what it had to offer.

The banquet last night closed the biennial convention. This morning the new president will have a meeting of the incoming and outgoing boards.

Awards in feature writing were announced yesterday at the nonfiction group's luncheon at which Mrs. Posegate presided. There was discussion of news features by Ruth Cowan, of the Associated Press and by George Elliston of the Cincinnati Times-Star, national features chairman.

Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton announced the winners, who received prizes bought by Miss Ellison on a recent world tour. Mrs. C. Antoinette Wood, Brookline, Mass., won first prize, an onyx compact brought from Paris; Lillian C. B. Mayer, Knoxville, Tenn., second, a sandlewood fan from Singapore; Vera Morel, New Orleans, third, a cinnabar and silver fillagree ring from Shanghai.

Play to Benefit Bryn Mawr Fund

The Bryn Mawr scholarship benefit performance of George Cohan's "Return of the Vagabond," Wednesday at the National Theater will draw a brilliant audience of both Democrats and Republicans.

Work for G.O.P., Women Urged

Women in the coming election have the greatest opportunity of their 20-year enfranchisement, Miss Marion E. Martin, director of the women's division of the Republican National Committee, told the League of Republican Women yesterday.

Addressing the 100 women at the league's closing luncheon of the season, at its clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street, Miss Martin asserted women "can turn the tide and sweep back the forces which have retarded the solution of domestic problems—unemployment, recovery and financial instability. Women have the power, if they will but use it, to stamp out the New Deal recklessness and heedlessness and replace it with Republican recovery."

"Unfortunately," she continued, "there are many of you in this audience who may be 'vote orphans,' but that does not mean you have to be 'political orphans.' Your responsibility in molding public opinion to form the principles and constructive program of the Republican Party is equally as great as that of those who have a voting residence 'back home.' Your activity and your influence, through daily association with thinking men and women can have far-reaching effect in eliminating the maladministration of the New Deal.

"This 1940 election is a challenge to the womanhood of America. Republican women, in Nation and States, are out to set a new fashion in politics. They are going to make it smart to be a Republican in 1940. It's going to be popular to work and win with the Republican Party this year."

Gen. Fries to Speak

The Wheel of Progress, of which Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell is president, will be addressed by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, at its meeting Monday night in the Willard Hotel. He will discuss the Children's Crusade. Mrs. Amy Buston will sing, accompanied by Miss Ruby Dean.

Mrs. John Francis Weinmann Compliments Officers of 1812 Daughters With Luncheon

MRS. JOHN FRANCIS WEINMANN, of Little Rock, Ark., honorary national president of the United States Daughters of 1812, yesterday entertained new officers at a luncheon at the Sulgrave Club.

The guests included the newly-elected honorary president, Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neill, of Chicago; another honorary president, Mrs. Robert J. Johnstone, of Iowa, and the new national president, Mrs. Percy Y. Schelly, of Philadelphia.

Others were Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, Detroit, first vice president; Miss Edla Gibson, of Buffalo, second vice president; Mrs. Llewellyn N. Edwards, of this city, third vice president; Mrs. Jonn Porter Gibson, Huntington Park, Calif., fourth vice president; Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, of Kansas, historian; Mrs. Claude W. Pound, Toledo, Ohio, treasurer; Mrs. John Adams, Dublin, Ga., curator; Mrs. Lane Schofield, of this city, registrar; Mrs. Albert L. Craig, Tennessee, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harold Sayre, Point Pleasant, W. Va., librarian.

JUST BECAUSE the work of raising the first $1,000 was so pleasant, the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission announced the pledging of a second gift of equal size to the building fund drive now under way. The second $1,000 will be paid during the campaign extension period of 30 months and with the $1,000 contribution from the Women's Guild, will make a total of $3,000 presented from these auxiliary groups for the proposed addition to the present mission.

Mrs. Mervyn Lanham, president of the Evening Auxiliary, gave the campaign chairman, W. W. Everett, a check for the first gift at the opening dinner at Calvary Baptist Church Wednesday night. Formal action to give the building fund another $1,000 was taken at a recent meeting of the auxiliary on motion from Miss Charlotte Barrow, honorary life president of the organization.

Mrs. William H. Ramsey made the presentation of the $1,000 pledge from the older group, the Women's Guild. Mrs. Ramsey has been president of this organization for 25 years.

SWING YOUR PARTNER—With interest in the folk festival at its height, the sponsors' committee of the Children's Art Gallery has announced a square dance benefit to be given at the Wardman Park Hotel Monday night. Kendall Foss will do the calling.

HOLD GARDEN TOUR—The Wesley Heights Florence Crittenton Circle is sponsoring a garden tour in Spring Valley today. The gardens will be opened from 1:30 to 8 and tea will be served from 3 to 7. The tour will start from the garden of Mrs. Allison N. Miller at Cathedral avenue and Forty-fourth street. Tea will be served in the garden of Dr. and Mrs. William Earl Clark, 4929 Rockwood parkway. Should it rain, the tour will be tomorrow.

SORORITY PARTY—The second section of Phi Delta Delta alumnae will have a buffet supper Monday night at the home of Mrs. Frances E. Hildebrand, 5501 Cathedral avenue, in honor of active members of Zeta chapter.

Alpha Delta Pi Opens Meeting

The three-day joint Gamma-Zeta province convention of Alpha Delta Pi opens here informally this evening with a buffet supper for all visiting officers and delegates at 2129 G street northwest in the Alpha Pi Chapter apartment at George Washington University. Members of the Alpha Delta Pi Mothers Club will be hostesses.

MRS. SIDNEY R. STANARD

In conjunction with the conference, Alpha Delta, sorority at the University of Maryland, will be installed as a new chapter of Alpha Delta Pi in ceremonies to take place at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow night.

Mrs. Sidney R. Stanard, of St. Louis, grand president of Alpha Delta Pi, will preside at the conference opening tomorrow at George Washington University.

Alumnae Club Plans Dinner

Pi Beta Phi Alumnae club will have its annual founders' day dinner tomorrow night at the Roosevelt Hotel. It will celebrate the founding of the national sorority at Monmouth College, Illinois, in 1867, and of the Washington alumnae club, April 27, 1899.

Miss Emma Harper Turner, founder of the local club, also was the originator of the settlement school Pi Beta Phi maintains at Gatlinburg, Tenn.

The active chapter at George Washington University will join in the banquet of which Mrs. W. J. Eccleston is chairman.

Women Voters Open Meeting

The National League of Women Voters' board of directors meets today at the Commodore, New York City, for a three-day session preliminary to the opening of its biennial convention Monday, with the largest number of proposed program subjects in its history. Over 300 proposals were received in advance from the units of the league throughout the country for Federal, State or local action. The subjects on the tentative program range from downward revision of the tariff by a scientific method to the recognition of relief as a long-time concern of government.

Thirty-one States and 550 communities will be represented by 1,000 delegates who will convene Monday. Since the first day will be given over to closed departmental meetings, the general delegates will be entertained in the afternoon by the Westchester County League with a drive among historic Westchester homes.

Mrs. Roosevelt is scheduled to speak at the banquet Thursday night. Kenneth G. Crawford, president of the American Newspaper Guild, is also on the program.

6-Run Rally in Ninth Beats Macks for Nats

Griffs Spring Deluge After Two Outs; Walker Is Hero With Double Scoring Three Men; Pofahl Triples

By Shirley Povich

In a ninth-inning finish akin to fiction that would have brought a blush even to Burt L. Standish, who chronicled the deeds of the Merriwell lads, the Nats slugged six runs across the plate yesterday to beat the Athletics.

Seven to six was the final score, and the final hero of the heroic ninth-inning proceedings was Gerald Walker who lashed a two-bagger against the leftfield wall to send the Nats' fourth, fifth and sixth runs of the inning across the plate.

It was story-book stuff. Two were out, none were on base, and the Nats were trailing by a 6-1 score before things began to happen. Moreover, they were being hooted and booed by the disgruntled customers among the 3,500 at Griffith Stadium. To that point, drab indeed, was their homecoming after a dismal Eastern trip.

Nats Bamboozled

Joe Krakauskas had been knocked out of the box in the sixth inning. George Caster's knuckle ball was bamboozling the Nats. A "boner" on the bases evoked the loudest booing heard in Griffith Stadium in years. Hundreds of sour-pussed fans were already leaving the park when the ninth inning opened.

The first two developments as the Nats went to bat in the ninth with a five-run deficit confronting them were most prosaic. Cecil Travis grounded out and Jimmy Bloodworth flied out. And then Jimmy Pofahl touched off the works.

He hammered a three-bagger over Center Fielder Sam Chapman's head and galloped all the way home when Chapman's return to the infield was wild. But it appeared to be a futile gesture. There wasn't much excitement, either, when Jake Early produced his third hit of the day, a single to center.

Caster Was Tiring

But the exit of the fans was suddenly halted when Pinch Hitter Johnny Welaj delivered a double down the third base lines. The situation still had possibilities. Caster was obviously tiring.

At this point the issue was strictly up to George Case, and he did nothing to disturb the tenseness of the proceedings. He lifted a fly to short centerfield, and when Sam Chapman failed to hold the ball after a nose-dive into the turf, Early and Welaj crossed the plate. Now the score was 6 to 4, and the customers were pleading with Buddy Lewis to make a hit.

He did. He slammed a single into righfield to move Case to third, and the Nats had the tying run on first. Nobody was moving from the park now.

Jimmy Wasdell was next. Even the anti-Wasdell delegation in the park, loud and unrelenting all day, were willing to forgive him in exchange for a long hit that would score Lewis. He made no hit, but he drew a base on balls that moved

Louis Plans 2 Title Bouts This Summer

Expects to Meet Galento-Baer Victor—Arturo Godoy Later

By the United Press

Lancaster, Pa., April 25.—Joe Louis will defend his world's heavyweight championship at least twice this summer, probably against the winner of the Tony Galento-Max Baer bout and Arturo Godoy, he said here tonight.

The Brown Bomber, here to referee a bout between Jackie Wilson, of Pittsburgh, and Bobby Green, of Philadelphia, was confident of winning over any of the trio of opponents. Of Godoy, who went the distance with him in their first meeting, he said:

"I figure I can knock him out if he stands up and fights instead of crouching."

"The way things are planned for me now," Louis said, "I expect to defend my title twice during the outdoor season. I'll probably meet with winner of the Galento-Baer fight, and if I get by the first one, maybe that fellow Good-y (Godoy) in September."

He denied emphatically that he intends to retire.

"I've never given that a thought," he said. "I plan to continue fighting just as long as they give me opponents."

D.C. Contingent Off for Penn Relays Today

By Jack Munhall

The strongest contingent the District has ever dispatched to the Penn Relays, four local college teams will depart today and tomorrow for Philadelphia to seek honors in the forty-sixth annual carnival against the cream of the Nation's trackmen.

Georgetown, Maryland, American and Catholic universities will be Washington's representatives in the games today and tomorrow, and between the four of them they should return with at least four championships.

Looming head and shoulders above his local mates as a championship contender is 240-pound Al Blozis, the Herculean Georgetown sophomore and holder of all indoor records for the 8, 12 and 16 pound shotput. Blozis is entered in the shotput and discus and is an odds-on favorite not only to win both events but to establish new meet records and possibly a world mark in the shotput. His indoor record of 55 feet 8¾ inches, established last winter, is less than 2 feet off Jack Torrance's world mark of 57 feet 1 inch, and many competent observers are of the opinion that Blozis will surpass that achievement before the end of the present outdoor campaign.

Blozis is one of two individual Georgetown entries. The other is Vincent Carnevale, who will compete in the 2-mile race. However, neither Carnevale nor the three relay teams representing Georgetown can be expected to grab a crown, although the varsity 1-mile quartet should give co-favored Pitt and N. Y. U. a run for their money.

A freshman 1-mile foursome and a sprint medley team complete the Hilltop's entries.

Maryland, which will enter four and possibly five relay teams and Joe Murphy in the Invitation 100, is conceded an excellent chance to win either or both of the 2-mile and distance medley events. Coach Swede Eppley announced yesterday that prospects appeared better for copping the distance medley and it may be that he'll concentrate on this race at the expense of possibly hurting his chance at 2 miles.

The Terrapin medley team is, indeed, a formidable combination. Alan Miller will run the 440, or first

Tippy Tin Wins Dog Obedience Trials at Show

National Capital Show Goes Into Final Events Today

By Anne Hagner

A snappy-looking little wire haired terrier survived two hours of gruelling workouts to win the novice obedience trials over nine smooth-performing entrants at the National Capital Kennel Club's dog show last night at Riverside Stadium.

The winner was Kathleen W. Smith's Tippy Tin of Stoneleight, a 2-year-old terrier who won the same event at Baltimore in February.

Second place, after Judge Samuel T. Brick put the dogs through every conceivable test of obedience, was Alfred Frank's tiny Schipperke, Jacominta De Raime, who placed over Wilson Davis' well-mannered English setter, Blue Freckles of Rockboro.

In division B of the tests, Mrs William R. Compton's Nila of Ruthland, a German shepherd, triumphed The McLean (Va.) owned dog performed beautifully to win over two other shepherds and a miniature schnauzer.

Tomorrow's sessions begin at 10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. Best dog of the show and best American-bred in the show will be awarded in the

Al Hollingsworth Starts for Nats Today Against A's

Al Hollingsworth, who shut out the Yankees in a seven-inning relief role in his first appearance for the Nats, is being promoted to a starting job today by Manager Bucky Harris. He will go to the mound against the Athletics this afternoon.

Supposedly on trial when he came to the Nats from Brooklyn in the deal for Catcher Angelo Giuliani, Hollingsworth has already made a place for himself on the Nats' staff. The 30-year-old southpaw took over in the second inning in New York last week after Ken Chase had been driven from the mound, and blanked the Yankees with three hits for the rest of the game.

Connie Mack indicated yesterday that his pitching choice will be Nelson Potter, a right-hander who won eight and lost twelve for the A's last season.

Bimelech Is Winner Of Blue Grass Stakes

Bradley Colt Scores Easily in Prep For Derby; Owner Sees Race; Roman Beaten by Two-and-a-Half Lengths

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., April 25.—Bimelech, the shortest Kentucky Derby winter book favorite in history, clinched his spot as the horse to beat in the Churchill Downs classic today by easily defeating two other Derby candidates—Roman and Bashful Duck.

Col. E. R. Bradley's never-beaten son of Black Toney—La Trioenne, looking and running like the great champion he is, captured the $5,000-added Blue Grass Stakes before a record crowd of nearly 13,000 persons in the feature race of the closing card at Keenland race course.

The winner's owner, Col. E. R. Bradley, whose horses have won four Kentucky Derbies, said after today's race:

Wins Easily

Watching from his automobile, Col. Bradley saw "Big Bim" collar Joseph E. Widener's highly regarded Roman in the back stretch and gradually widen the margin to finish in an easy gallop 2½ lengths in front, with Bashful Duck, Bimelech's stablemate, three lengths back of the Widener horse in the three-horse field.

Time for the mile and eighth—one-eighth short of the Derby route—was 1:51. The Bradley entry paid $2.20 on a $2 win ticket. Only win bets were accepted.

The victory was worth $5,575 to Bradley, whose entries have won the stake three times previously. It was Bimelech's first start this year.

After the race Trainer William Hurley expressed satisfaction with Bimelech's race, grunting: "He won, didn't he?"

Hurley said both Bradley colts may run in the Derby trial at Churchill Downs next Tuesday and that Don Meade, who was reinstated by the Kentucky State Racing Commission today, may ride Bashful Duck in the Derby, May 4.

Roman Takes Lead

Meade, who was ruled off the turf in 1936, rode Bradley's Broker's Tip to victory in the 1933 Kentucky Derby.

Roman took the lead out of the gate today with Bimelech close behind. They ran in this order until they neared the half-mile pole. There, Jockey F. A. Smith, who has ridden Bimelech in all of his seven victorious starts, gave him his head and the Bradley colt responded easily. Bashful Duck never was a contender.

Bimelech, who won $135,090, as a 2-year-old last season, boosted his earnings past the $140,000 mark by his victory.

In the $1,500 mile and a sixteenth Woodburn handicap, preceding the Blue Grass, Dixiana Farm's Sirocco defeated the slight favorite, Black Brummel. Both are derby eligibles. Sirocco passed Black Brummel going into the stretch and finished two lengths ahead of Bucking, a non-derby candidate. Black Brummel faded in the stretch and finished third.

Jockey Meade Reinstated In Kentucky

May Ride Bradley's Bimelech, Bashful Duck In May 4 Classic

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., April 25.—Secretary Thomas R. Underwood announced today the Kentucky racing commission had reinstated Jockey Don Meade.

Meade, who rode Col. E. R. Bradley's Broker's Tip to win the 1933 Kentucky Derby, probably will ride either Bimelech or Bashful Duck, the colonel's 1940 Kentucky Derby nominees.

Meade was ruled off all tracks in 1936 but was reinstated in some States last April. He did not apply for a license in Kentucky last year.

DeCamillis Gets New York License

New York, April 25 (AP).—Jockey Eddie De Camillis, 28-year-old jockey, who has been barred from New York State tracks since last July 21, was reinstated by the Jockey Club today.

The club granted his application for a license, ending his suspension which began when he was accused of using a sharp instrument or an electric battery on the horse Elwawa in winning a race at Empire City, July 19.

Derby Favorite Wins in Year's First Outing

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

From the bench of the New York Yankees the other day the owner of a loud and rasping voice shouted, "Give back that $45,000, ya bum!" Second Baseman Bennie McCoy had just made an error and his heckler's implication was plain enough. McCoy was stealing Connie Mack's money.

POVICH

Three months ago Free Agent McCoy pocketed $45,000 for signing with the Athletics. When he did that he created a hot spot for himself, although nothing that 45 G's in his jeans couldn't assuage. But he did unwittingly provide the opposition with ammunition that could be leveled at him the moment he failed to perform like a $45,000 ball player. And the Yankees didn't hesitate to use it. Whenever the A's poke their noses into the other towns of the circuit McCoy will be the target for verbal abuse.

He knows it. He was saying so yesterday as he doffed his sweatshirt in the A's dressing room before going on the field. And as he was talking there arose some doubt as to who was the lucky guy in the $45,000 transaction—McCoy or Connie Mack? Of all the young men Mack might have placed on the spot with that kind of a deal, he seems to be fortunate that the young man of his choice was McCoy. He's the sort of a level-headed kid the jibes won't bother. At least that is the impression one comes away with.

"Sure, I'm going to get it," McCoy was saying. "Other players in this league are bound to resent the dough I got. But I'll suffer along with it. It isn't going to bother me. I'd be a chump to let it. My only concern is how I stand with the fellows on my own club. They've been swell. Mr. Mack told me before the season opened that he only expected me to play good ball for him and he'd be satisfied. He said I didn't have to be a star.

"I'm no star and I know it. I never pretended to be a great player, but I can play pretty good ball. I'll help the A's, I think. The intelligent fellows in this league aren't going to climb on me. They know the whole business was just an accident. Clubs have paid more for ball players than Mr. Mack paid for me, but in my case I simply happened to get the money instead of some club owner. What's wrong in that? Was I supposed to turn the money down?" Then he smiled. "Mom would have spanked me if I did."

Until yesterday McCoy had, indeed, been something of a flop. In the A's first six games, the lad made only three hits and he threw three errors into the proceedings. But never for a moment has Connie Mack rued his purchase. In fact, Mack is making no secret of his joy at the transaction. He is receiving exactly what he bargained for in the McCoy deal—gobs of publicity. To Mack the publicity is important. For too many years Philadelphia fans and newspapers have been cold to the A's. The old gent was literally forced to do something spectacular, so he bought McCoy.

"We had to buy him," related Earl Mack. "Ten days before we had much idea of signing McCoy, a Philadelphia newspaper printed a story that we would top all bids for him. The fans had been led to expect it. If we hadn't signed McCoy it would have been an awful let-down for the fans. Here was our chance to do something on a big scale.

"We were prepared to go as high as $75,000 for McCoy, honest. That was the figure Dad and I set when we made up our minds it would be good business. We didn't know how high Larry McPhail, of Brooklyn, was going for McCoy. If McPhail dropped out to Grand Rapids in one of his free-and-easy moods he'd be apt to offer McCoy $60,000. But for some reason McPhail dropped out of the bidding.

"The McCoy deal brought the publicity we needed. Our club hasn't had such a fine break in the papers since we won our last pennant in 1932. More was written about McCoy while we were on the Coast this spring than about Dizzy Dean, who was out there with the Cubs. The Philadelphia fans know we are serious about building up our ball club.

"He's going to help us, too. McCoy can play that bag. He hit over .300 for the Tigers in 55 games last year and he'll hit for us. We know he'll have it tough the first swing around the league when they point him out as the '$45,000 Player,' but he's the kind of a kid who can take it. He'll settle down to play nice ball for us. I think we've finally come up with a good second baseman."

If the A's have, indeed, come up with a capable second baseman in McCoy, it will be the end of a long and expensive hunt. Not since Max Bishop started slowing up eight years ago has Connie Mack had much protection at second base. He paid $35,000 for Johnny Lodgiani and saw him flop. He paid $20,000 for Sian Sperry with the same results. Bill Cissell cost him $7,500 and no dice. And he paid Wayne Ambler's way through Duke for four years and Ambler didn't pan out. Now it's McCoy at $45,000. His second base troubles have cost Mack approximately $140,000 in eight years.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 25.—The highest paid ball player since Babe Ruth's boom-time prime sat on a little stool in the visitors' lockerroom at the Yankee Stadium yesterday and told us that his ambition was to hit .300.

In case you don't know who the highest paid ball player since Ruth is, his name isn't Joe DiMaggio, Hank Greenberg, Bobby Feller nor Jimmy Foxx. It is Benjamin McCoy, of the Philadelphia Athletics. Between now and September 30, when he and the A's wind up in seventh place in the American League, Bennie will receive $10,000 to add to the $45,000 he received for signing his contract. That totals about $25,000 more for the year than DiMag or Greenberg will make.

CONSIDINE

Next year, in a sense, he will take the greatest paycut in the history of baseball. For he'll get 10,000 again, whether he has a good or bad year, and that will represent a $45,000 reduction of income. Not even Ruth, who holds most salary records, ever had a cut like that, though he dropped from $75,000 a year in 1932 to $52,000 in 1933.

He's a humble little fellow, this McCoy. The short, stocky, inoffensive looking blond has about him all the honest bewilderment of a sweepstakes winner. Or perhaps it is the resignation of a meek file clerk who is suddenly promoted to boss, and secretly pines for the blessed anonymity of the ranks. This is how McCoy seemed to us.

"I'm no great star," he said, "never was and maybe never will be. But I know I can play better ball than I've played so far. Gosh, I've only gotten two hits . . . doubles. Let a ball go through my legs, too.

"The trouble with me is I'm pressing. I'm not loose out there. I guess it'll wear off in time. But right now I'm tight. Trying too hard. I feel like people expect me to knock the fence down, after all that money I got. I feel like people are critical of me, too, if I bobble one in the field. Well . . . I guess I'll get a lot of that, until I get going."

"No, not a one," he said. "Their attitude is, 'the more you can get, the more power to you.' That's true of the fellows on other teams, too. Everybody's been swell to me, particularly Mr. Mack. The first time I met him, he said to me, 'Bennie, I don't expect you to be another Collins. Just go out there and play your game and we'll go along with you.' My only hope is that I'll play some good ball for him. If I can hit .300 . . ."

McCoy still doesn't know just what crime the Tigers committed to prompt Judge Landis to declare him a free agent.

"I was just lucky. You see, the real reason I got to be well known was that I substituted for Charley Gehringer when he hurt himself. If I had substituted for Joe Doakes . . . You know, somebody you never heard much of . . . Nobody wouldn've noticed that I hit .325 while I was in there. The Tigers were hot when I was in there too. We won nine out of 13 on an Eastern trip, and everybody noticed that Gehringer was out of there and I was going good. Gehringer did a wonderful thing, too. He recovered, just when I was hottest but he sat on the bench voluntarily for another week and gave me my chance."

We strolled across the room and sat down on a trunk next to Earl Mack. Mack looked over at McCoy and said, "that's a nice kid. He's pressing, something terrible. But he'll come out of it. He hits a nice ball . . . surprisingly long for a fellow that size. We're satisfied, even at that price."

Two Homers Help Feller Beat Chicago for Indians, 3 to 1

Cleveland's Hurler Gives Up 8 Hits

Hemsley, Heath Turn The Trick; Single By Taft Wright in 9th Gets Chisox Score

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 25.—Bob Feller conquered the Chicago White Sox again today, 3 to 1, but it took a pair of home runs—by Rollie Hemsley and Jeff Heath—to turn the trick.

The lad who opened the season at Chicago with a no-hitter held the Sox to six scattered blows until the ninth frace, when the invaders converted a walk and single into their first score off Feller in 18 innings.

Chicago collected eight hits, one of them a triple by Bob Kennedy, while the Tribe nicked Southpaw Edgar Smith for six and Clint Brown for one. Brown succeeded Smith in the eighth.

Hemsley blasted his homer into the leftfield bleachers with two out in the second. Heath rifled his circuit clout with two down in the eighth. It was the outfielder's second home run of the season.

Cleveland scored in the seventh on a wild throw. Keltner opened with a walk and scored when Kennedy whipped the ball into rightfield attempting to catch Hemsley, who bunted down the third base line.

Moose Solters drew a base on balls in the ninth. Luke Appling sacrificed and Solters romped in on Taft Wright's single. Eric McNair popped out. Mike Tresh singled but Tom Turner, batting for Brown, fanned.

Tigers Down Browns as Newsom Stars

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 25.—Buck Newsom held the St. Louis Browns to five hits today and got revenge for the season opening defeat by his former teammates as Detroit won, 4 to 2.

But he had to have help and it was forthcoming in Pinky Higgins' bat. The Browns were leading, 2 to 1, as the eighth inning opened. Rudy York walked. Then Higgins socked the ball into the leftfield bleachers. Singles by Barney McCosky and Charley Gehringer, sandwiched around Bruce Campbell's sacrifice in the ninth, brought an extra run.

Elden Auker, who retired for a pinch hitter in the St. Louis half of the eighth, had assists on all three outs in the sixth. He tossed out Higgins, Bartell and Newsom.

Homer by Manush Beats Charlotte, 11-7

Charlotte, N. C., April 25 (AP).—Heinie Manush, former Washington outfielder and now manager of the Rocky Mount club, didn't duck any responsibility today. With his team trailing in the eighth inning, Manush inserted himself as a pinch hitter, knocked a home run with the bases full and beat Washington's Charlotte farm club, 11 to 7.

After his homer lifted Rocky Mount into the lead, Manush played first base and collected another hit in a later time at bat.

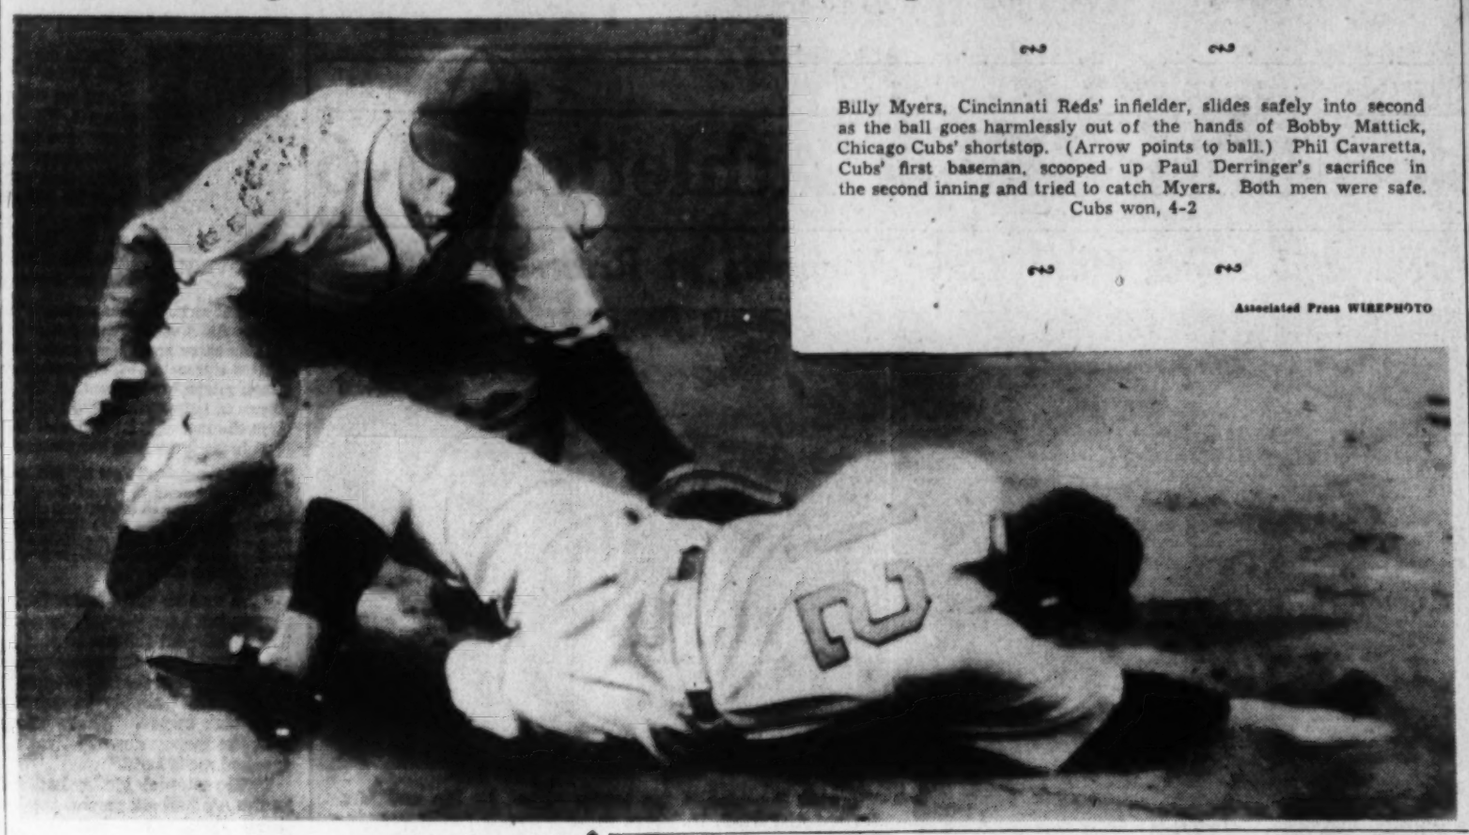
Redleg Safe at Second as Cub Shortstop Lets Ball Get Away



Billy Myers, Cincinnati Reds' infielder, slides safely into second as the ball goes harmlessly out of the hands of Bobby Mattick, Chicago Cubs' shortstop. (Arrow points to ball.) Phil Cavaretta, Cubs' first baseman, scooped up Paul Derringer's sacrifice in the second inning and tried to catch Myers. Both men were safe. Cubs won, 4-2

Dizzy Dean Allows 5 Hits, Beats Reds, 4-2

Clings to Comeback Trail for Cubs By Surviving Wobbly Start; Bests Cincinnati's Derringer Before 6,000

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 25.—Ol' Diz Dean clung doggedly to the come-back trail today. He gamely survived a wobbly start and pitched a five-hit game as the Chicago Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 2.

Shooting his famous "nothing" ball across the plate in a 40-degree temperature, Dean bested the Reds big mound star, Paul Derringer, in a speedily played game which had 6,000 fans giving Diz a great cheer at the finish. Dean walked four batsmen and only had one strikeout, but it came on the final out of the contest and at the expense of Pinch Hitter Wally Berger.

Dean, in winning his first game of the season in two starts and also snapping the string of 11 consecutive National League victories Derringer carried into the contest, appeared headed for the showers before the game was five innings old.

Ival Goodman bunted safely and was hit on the back by Dean's throw, Werber scoring and Diz getting an error on the play. Frank McCormick was intentionally passed to load the bases after which Ernie Lombardi forced Frey at the plate. Dean to Al Todd. Harry Craft flied. Goodman scoring and then Mike McCormick grounded out.

The Cubs came back with three runs in the third. With one out, Bill Herman walked and went to third on Augie Galan's single. Hank Leiber scratched a single, scoring Herman and putting Galan on third. Galan scored as Bill Nicholson grounded out, but Phil Cavarretta singled to center, scoring Leiber, after which Todd singled and Bob Mattick was tossed out by Bill Werber.

The other Cub run was scored by Dean himself. He singled to open the sixth, was sacrificed to second and came home on Herman's safety.

Dean, who in his first start of the year last Sunday was beaten and roughly handled by St. Louis, used his "fast" ball sparingly, depending on a change of pace and a slow curve. After the opening inning his usual good control consistently kept him ahead of the hitters. Derringer, usually a Cub nemesis, gave up 11 hits and received weak support, the Reds being charged with three errors.

As Berger fanned to end the game, Cub players rushed en masse from the dugout to congratulate the eccentric Cub hurler. Manager Gabby Hartnett, with whom Diz has quibbled several times this spring, was the first to pump Dean's hand.

9 Errors Hurt Hoya Frosh; Central Wins

Central High batting power plus the whole-hearted cooperation of the Georgetown freshman team combined to produce the interhigh champion's third successive victory of the season yesterday, 17—3, on the winners' diamond. The game was called in the seventh because of darkness.

The freshmen chipped in with nine errors.

Meanwhile, in the absence of ace Billy Fisher, who saw nine innings of action Tuesday, young Dick Buckner was turning in a highly creditable job on the mound, limiting the Hoyas to six scattered hits, only one of which was for extra bases.

Tedious Game Sees Pirates Faltering In Ninth Inning

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 25.—The St. Louis Cardinals took their second National League victory of the season today by nosing out the faltering Pittsburgh Pirates, 10 to 9, in a game requiring three hours and 12 minutes.

The Red Birds rapped out 22 hits off four Pittsburgh pitchers, Stu Martin, Enos Slaughter and Pep Martin each getting three safeties. But with Elbie Fletcher driving in four runs while Lloyd Waner, playing his first game of the season, was getting four hits and scoring three times, the Pirates remained in the game until the ninth.

With two Bucs on base in the final inning Johnny Mize threw out Pep Young at the plate on a weak roller by Lloyd Waner, and Bob Elliott grounded into a force play to end the contest.

The Maryland yearlings tapped Intandola, Brierley hurler, for seven hits, as they assured themselves of victory with four runs in the first two innings.

Booth and Gordy divided batting laurels for the victors, each with two hits in four trips to the plate.

Brooklyn Tops in National League With Fifth Straight; Hugh Casey Robbed of Shutout by Arnovich

By International News Service

Philadelphia, April 25.—Brooklyn took sole possession of first place in the National League today after turning in its fifth straight win, a 3-to-1 triumphant over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Big Hugh Casey, who allowed the Phillies but five bingles, was cheated out of a shutout when Morrie Arnovich's infield tap in the first scored Herman Schulte, who had doubled.

The Dodgers scored once each in the second, sixth and seventh innings, the sixth inning marker being a home run by Dolf Camilli. Ike Pearson was charged with the loss.

Joe Jacobs Rites To Be Sunday In New York

By the Associated Press

New York, April 25.—Joe Jacobs, the little fellow with the big cigar who was the fight game's most colorful figure and lavish spender, will be buried Sunday, but fistiana isn't going to forget him in a hurry.

In fact, about the same time funeral plans were announced for the shrewd little fight manager who died last night, Tony Galento, the last of his gladiators, insisted he was going through with his May 28 battle with Max Baer in Jersey City—and would dedicate that battle to "Yussel."

They are going to give Joe the kind of funeral he would have liked. His "pals," the New York boxing writers, will act as pallbearers. Services will be at the Riverside Chapel at 9 a. m. (E. S. T.) Sunday and interment will be in Mount Judah Cemetery, Cypress Hills, Long Island.

Giants Trounce Bees, 9 to 1; Lohrman Stars

By International News Service

New York, April 25.—With Bill Lohrman fanning nine and giving only 6 hits, and Burgess Whitehead hitting a homer, the New York Giants walloped the Boston Bees, 9 to 1.

The Giants pounded Callahan, Earley and Barnicle for 11 hits, routing Callahan in the first on a triple and two singles, good for two runs. Whitehead made his homer off Earley with two aboard in the third. Young's triple accounted for three more in the fourth.

Ross' triple and Andrews' single gave the Bees their lone run in the seventh.

Pros May Lose P. G. A. Guarantee for Open Tournament

$1,000 Cash Prize Still Holds Good

Banks May Transfer Purse to Open Event In July or August; Harper Has Claim

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Sidney Banks' $1,000 offer for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Championship at Old Point Comfort, Va., still holds good, it was learned last night, and if the District, Maryland and Virginia pros cannot agree Banks may put the cash toward an open tournament at the Chamberlin Club in July or August.

While Ralph Beach, the sectional pro association president, Leo Walper, the two-time winner at Old Point, and Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree pro, were homeward bound on the Norfolk boat last night, local professionals suggested an open meeting of the Mid-Atlantic mentors to thrash out the differences that resulted in the championship being canceled at the last minute. It was scheduled today and tomorrow for the $1,000 purse given by the general manager of the Chamberlin Hotel.

Chandler Harper, the Portsmouth professional over whose ineligibility the Virginia pros pulled a walkout on Wednesday, had a new claim as to his P. G. A. membership. The rule, changed several years ago, is that a golfer must serve five years as a pro before he is eligible to make application to the P. G. A. Harper claims he had been a pro for three years and ten months when the old three-year rule was discarded, and at that time his application had been refused.

The Virginia pros, led by Bobby Cruickshank, of the Country Club of Virginia, in Richmond, spread the word that Harper and other Virginia pros have never received proper consideration from the District and Maryland professionals, and that, as much as the present Harper case, was back of the walkout.

When the Virginia pros backed down, the only thing for Banks to do was call the tournament as he had received only five entries from the P. G. A. members in Baltimore, other parts of Maryland and Washington. At least nine local pros were to have made the trip, but neglected to send in entries. However, only 3 out of 13 Baltimore pros planned to compete, and that disappointed the sponsor.

Now Connie Mack was out on the steps of his dugout waving furiously for a relief pitcher from the rightfield bull pen. In came Right-Hander Buck Ross to relieve the faltering Caster, who had held the Nats to seven hits and a single run in the first 8 2-3 innings.

At the plate now was Walker, the man Washington brought from the White Sox for just such emergencies as confronted him at this point. There were muttered imprecations in the stands when Walker watched Ross' first pitch float by for a perfect strike. The next pitch was wide. The next pitch never reached the plate.

It never reached the plate, because Walker stepped into the ball viciously and produced a line drive that cleared Left Fielder Bob Johnson's head and nit the base of the concrete bleachers. Three of the fastest men in the league were running for home—George Case, from third, Buddy Lewis, scoring easily from second, and Jimmy Wasdell bearing the winning run and making it a brilliant dash from first.

Into their dressing room streamed the joyful Nats. Walker was wearing an ear-to-ear smile as he left the field. Case unblushingly smacked him with a kiss as Walker reached his locker. In pure joy, the rest of the Washington players mobbed him.

Until Walker broke up the ball game, all of the honors belonged to the A's. The only run Caster had allowed spawned from his own error—a wild throw on Lewis' bounder into the box. Walker's single and Travis' infield out scored Lewis, in the sixth inning.

In the eighth, after Case dropped a single in short center, Caster committed a balk that moved him to second. When Lewis walked before anybody was out, a rally seemed imminent, but suddenly the Nats found themselves scuttled. On Wasdell's fly, which Siebert caught in short rightfield despite collision with Moses, Case galloped to third. When Shortstop Lillard called for the ball, however, and tagged second, Umpire Quinn declared Case out for leaving the bag before Siebert's catch. The Nats stormed him without avail. Quinn stuck to his decision and the bottom fell from the Nats' threatened uprising.

Four four innings Krakauskas was superb. He held the A's scoreless and allowed only two hits, both cheap affairs. But in the fifth he surrendered two runs to break the scoreless tie. He walked Lillard, who was sacrificed to second, and with two out Moses and McCoy singled in succession. The latter blow scored Moses, who had stolen second.

Browns Sell Joe Glenn

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 25.—Joe Glenn, holdout catcher of the St. Louis Browns, was sold today to the Boston Red Sox.

The Browns' office, announcing the sale, said it was a straight cash deal, but did not disclose the amount.

It was understood Glenn was offered a contract which would make him $10,000 for the season, provided he fulfilled certain conditions. He sent it back. When he failed to report at training camp within reasonable time, this was slashed in half. Last year he reportedly earned $8,500.

Glenn has been here recently conferring with club officials. He now is in Chicago, and is expected to join the Boston club soon.

Dodgers' Gilbert Born With Baseball in Blood

Rookie Fielding Star Follows Footsteps Of Father in Majors

By George Kirksey.

United Press Staff Writer

New York, April 25.—Ball players are born, not made.

For instance, Charlie Gilbert, the rookie centerfielder of the red-hot Brooklyn Dodgers. His dad, Larry Gilbert was a major league ball player before him and young Charlie was born with baseball in his blood.

When he was only 6 he showed enough baseball instinct to draw an offer of $1,000 from a major league scout, Joe Engel, Chattanoga's colorful owner and then scout for the Washington Senators, called on Larry Gilbert, manager of the New Orleans Pelicans, at his home after a ball game in the Crescent City. Larry had a tough day and wasn't home. Engel went on the back porch and sat down for a breath of air. A kid ball game was going on in the back yard.

When Larry arrived he found Engel all wrapped up in the kid's game. "Say, there's quite a ball player here," said Engel, pointing out a stocky little youngster.

"That's my boy, Charlie," said Larry.

"Well, I'll give you $1,000 now for your signature on him for the Washington Club," said Engel.

"No, Joe," replied Gilbert. "I couldn't do that."

Then the boy grew older and last fall the Dodgers bought him from the Nashville Southern Association Club for $20,000 cash. Several other clubs, including the Indians and Giants, were bidding for him. Charlie himself got the entire $20,000. Under the terms of the agreement whereby Larry Gilbert purchased half-interest in the Nashville Club from Fay Murray, it was understood that young Charlie didn't become the property of the team. After his sale young Charlie married his childhood sweetheart in New Orleans October 25.

Great Outfield

Young Gilbert played only one year in the minors—last season with Nashville, where he hit .317. But he had been hanging around the ball park in New Orleans when his dad was manager there and had attracted attention of scouts and other baseball men by his actions at the plate and in the field.

Gilbert was one of ten outfielders who reported to the Dodgers in Clearwater. After a week's training Larry MacPhail, Dodger president, told Secretary John McDonald Brooklyn had a great outfield in the making—Staller, Gilbert and Reiser.

"They'll play on our Montreal farm club this year," said Larry, "and then they'll come up to Brooklyn intact."

But MacPhail was reckoning without young Gilbert's baseball instinct, born and bred in him. Ten days later Manager Leo Durocher told MacPhail, "That kid Gilbert is too good to go out. I am going to alternate him in center with Koy."

Gilbert, a left-handed hitter, was to play against righthanders, and Koy, a right-handed hitter, against southpaws. Yesterday the Dodgers faced Southpaw Joe Sullivan, of the Bees, and Gilbert stayed in the line-up. In his first four games he's scored five runs, made five hits (including two homers), drove in five runs and pitched one strike from centerfield which cut down Babe Young, of the Giants, in a close play at third. His batting average is a neat .312.

Charlie's father before him was a centerfielder on the Boston Braves of 1914. He was a good player but Charlie promises to outdo his dad. In the rekindling of the Brooklyn spirit, Gilbert is one of the key men. He's fast and smart and hustles. He doesn't play ring-around-the-rosy under fly balls, and when he gets hold of a ball in the outfield he knows what to do with it.

Gilbert is a born ball player, and he won't be 21 until next July 8.

Right-Handers Battle Today For G.W., G.U.

Hoyas, Colonials Meet First Time in 20 Years On Medical Field

A pair of big right-handers, Frank McGinnis, of George Washington, and Bill Wixted, of Georgetown, will be mound opponents today when the Hoyas and Colonials meet on the Georgetown Medical School diamond at 2:30 p. m. It will be the first diamond meeting between the intra-city rivals in nearly 20 years.

McGinnis, a former Western High School hurler, will take the mound for the G. W. team as he already holds victories over Vermont and Washington and Lee. Coach Ed Morris will hold southpaws Toby Bright and Lee Kushman for relief.

Coach Joe Judge will call on Wixted to start, while infield changes for the Colonial game include George Pajak back at third base after recovering from an arm injury in the basketball season.

Joe Mahoney is expected to stay on first base in place of Russ Miller, as in the American U. game on Tuesday. Although beaten by Fordham this week in its first defeat of the season, the Georgetown nine will be a heavy favorite over the Colonials, resuming diamond activities for the first time in several years.

Rivaling the all-local clash will be North Carolina's visit to the University of Maryland where the Tarheels will attempt to repeat an early-season triumph.

The Carolinians scored their sixth victory of the season against Virginia's strong team yesterday at Charlottesville.

Mrs. Pray, Mrs. Harris Tie in Keefer Cup Play

Club champions, Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, and Mrs. Elbert Harris, of Beaver Dam, tied with 36-hole net totals of 167 in the ninth annual Keefer Cup Tournament yesterday at Chevy Chase, and will play-off for the trophy this morning at 9 a. m.

Mrs. Pray, who was tied for third low net at the end of the first day's play with 91-6, 85, added 88-6, 82 yesterday for the tying total, while Mrs. Harris, the former Ellen Kincaid, posted respective gross scores of 97 and 90, and took a ten handicap for 167.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Kenwood, who led both net and gross scores Wednesday with an 83, slipped to 90 for a 173 gross total, six strokes better than anyone else in the field. Mrs. Pray was next with 179, while three were tied with 182; Marion Brown, with 90-92; Mrs. Bishop Hill, 95-87, and Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, 93-89.

Scores Are High

The tourney set a new high in scoring, Mrs. Meckley being the only 90-breaker the first day out of 86 starters while yesterday only Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Pray and Mrs. Stokes were able to better 90.

Third and fourth low nets were divided between two more club champions, Mrs. Leo Walper, of Capital, with 91, 93—184—14, 170, and Sally Whipple, Washington, with a pair of 96's and an 11 handicap deducted from each. Mrs. Walper played consistently with a 43, two 46's and a 47.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, a former club champion at the host club, whose last three nines were the best in the tournament, won fifth low net with 172. After starting with a 52, Mrs. Hill followed with 43, 42 and 45. A clubmate, Elizabeth Houghton, added a 98 to a 91 and less a 16 handicap won sixth net with 173, in a draw with Mrs. F. G. Crisp, Columbia. The latter had 100, 99, less 26 strokes.

Mrs. Harris included a dozen consistent drives on her card yesterday, including one on the sixteenth hole where she drove in the ditch and took a penalty stroke, but reached the green in two more and dropped a nice putt.

Mrs. Pray had two disastrous sevens within three holes on the outgoing nine, but she chalked up par threes on the fourth, ninth and tenth. The Manor Club titleholder was driving well and had her putter under control until a three-putt green crept in on the seventeenth. The tying players both finished with fives on the long eighteenth.

Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the Women's District Golf Association, made the presentation to other prize winners, while Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, donor of the trophy, assisted.

Gent Named Irish Angel Beats Murphy

The Irish Angel, one of Jack Pfefer's outstanding wrestling freaks, triumphed over Dropkick Murphy last night at Turner's Arena before a near-capacity house by stealing the favorite weapon of Jim Londos and punctuating it with his own innovation.

After being tossed out to the customers in Rows A and B from time to time, the toothless "Irishman" clambered back into the ring, put Dropkick through an airplane spin and then finished him with a neat right to the jaw.

The main event, topping Promoter Joe Turner's first venture in wrestling with the Pfefer troupe of grean artists, lasted 30 minutes, with the boys hitting new highs in dramatics to the great delight of the faithful wrestling public.

In the semifinal, Zim Zam Zum defeated Otto Wallick in 8½ minutes over the violent protest of Otto. Otto insisted that Zim had strangled him, whereupon Zim assured one and all that this was quite the custom in old Hindustan. Zim claims to be a mystery man from those parts.

Carol Zbyszko defeated Vanka Zelexniak in 24 minutes, Maurice Boyer dropkicked John Melas out in 16½ minutes, and Benny Rosen downed Juan Olaguival in 17½ minutes in the preliminaries.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Again this season, The Washington Post and Station WJSV conduct The Man of the Month contest to determine the Nats' most valuable players for each month. Following each game, Arch McDonald will distribute points to the Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Post will reward each winner of the Man of the Month contest with a $50 merchandise order.

Gerry Walker was the undisputed hero of the Nats' triumphant ninth-inning finish yesterday and to him is awarded the greatest cluster of points in the Man of the Month contest.

But because every run in the ninth inning was important, we are awarding points to every Washington player who reached base in that inning.

GERALD WALKER

To Walker, eight points, because he rescued the Nats from defeat and crowned them with victory by his crucial two-bagger which cleared the filled bases in the ninth.

To Jake Early, three points, because he made three of the Nats' hits, one a triple, and contributed an important single in the ninth-inning rally.

To Buddy Lewis, three points, because his single in the ninth put the tying run on base.

To Johnny Welaj, two points, because he doubled as a pinch-hitter in the ninth.

To Jimmy Pofahl, two points, because his ninth-inning triple launched the Nats toward their six-run rally.

To Jimmy Wasdell, two points, because he drew a base on balls in the ninth and showed a brilliant burst of speed to score the winning run from first base. The totals:

Jimmy Bloodworth	12	Buddy Lewis	8
Cecil Travis	9	Jake Early	5
"Dutch" Leonard	8	Rick Ferrell	2
George Case	9	Bucky Jacobs	2
Gerry Walker	8	Jimmy Wasdell	2
Walter Masterson	6	Johnny Welaj	2
Al Hollingsworth	5	Jimmy Pofahl	2

D.C. Contingent Off for Penn Relays Today

leg, followed by Jim Kehoe in the half mile, Mason Chronister in the mile and Tommy Fields in the 2 mile.

American University and Catholic University will send comparatively small squads. Both will compete in the Mason-Dixon Conference championship 1-mile relay, while the Cards will enter one individual, Johnny Corbett, in the 2-mile race. C. U., with a quartet that is deemed capable of shattering the existing mark of 4:31.4 for this race, will be one of the favorites and quite possibly may sneak in first.

Comprising C. U.'s team will be Jim Milks, a freshman from Washington-Lee High, and Charles O'Keefe, John Weschler and John Doyle and Alternate Leo Wall. American's foursome will be chosen from among Otto Streitsberger, Jim Flaherty, LeRoy Cooke, Bill Adams, Allen Hinkel and Cy Smith. Streitsberger and Adams are definite starters.

Central Trackmen Leave for Relays

With hopes high, six Central High track representatives accompanied by Coach Hardy Pearce, leave today for the Penn Relays in Philadelphia.

The team will be represented in the mile relay, in which it has shown considerable class to date in winning every time it went to the post.

His team is not yet selected but Pearce is expected to choose James Zuppa, Johnny Bredbenner, Bill Edgerton and Al Hayden to represent the school. John Thomas and Clayton Norris will also make the trip.

Hoya Frosh Net Team Beats G. W.

Georgetown Freshmen's tennis team captured all but one singles match and made a clean sweep of the doubles to record a 7-1 victory over George Washington Frosh on the Hilltop courts.

The Hoya yearlings lost the No. 1 singles match when Len Sokol defeated Jerry Raskopf, 6—2, 6—4.

SINGLES—Sokol (G.W.) defeated Raskopf (G.U.), 6—2, 6—4; Nunez (G.U.) defeated Newcomer (G.W.), 6—3, 6—0; Uniack (G.U.) defeated Wholahan (G.W.), 6—0, 6—2; Coleman (G.U.) defeated Carter (G.W.) 6—1, 6—3; Dunar (G.U.) defeated Clements (G.W.), 6—1, 6—2; Grainger (G.U.) defeated Haamser, 6—1, 6—2.

DOUBLES—Raskopf and Nunes defeated Sokol and Newcomer, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3; Coleman and Dunar defeated Clements and Hamser, 6—4, 7—5.

Kantan Runs Third At 'Graw; Lemmons Rides Winner; Quatredom Sets Pace

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 25.—With the favorite, Hard Way, racing in a manner that his name suggests, the Starmount Stable's Damaged Goods, whose dam was Perjury, won the Belair Purse featuring today's program here. Jockey C. Charlton, riding Hard Way for Gustave Ring, Washington contractor, registered a foul against the winner. After listening to the stories of Charlton and Apprentice H. Lemmons, who rode Damaged Goods, the stewards put their O. K. on the finish. Kantan, who ran last in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap last winter, was third.

From the press box it appeared that Damaged Goods, being rushed along in reckless fashion, bumped Hard Way at the clubhouse turn. Hard Way was knocked far to the outside. Approaching the stretch, Hard Way was jammed in between Damaged Goods and Kantan and Charlton was forced to pull up. He finished with the colt on the rail but a length off the winner. Some wisecracker said that Hard Way should have claimed a foul against Charlton.

Pays $7.60 Mutuel

Damaged Goods, away from the winner's circle for some time, paid a $7.60 mutuel and was clocked in 1:53 3-5 for the mile and 70 yards. Despite a shower that sent early arrivals scurrying to the stands, the track was fast and the sun greeted the start of the program.

Quatredom set the early pace in the feature. Damaged Goods joined the leaders on the back stretch and assumed command just before reaching the half pole. On the swing to the stretch Hard Way and Kantan began their moves together and came up as a team to almost get on even terms with the leader.

After the jam at the top of the stretch, Damaged Goods drew clear and was kept to the whip to the finish.

Labrot Stable Returns.

The Labrot Stable which returned to racing after a long absence this year sent its first winner to the post in today's opening event. Mardi Gras, a first-time starter in a field of ten juveniles, ran out at the turn into the stretch, but recovered to go on to win. A paddock tip, Mardi Gras paid only $7.10, but he paved the way for a $332.70 mutuel in the daily double.

The big payoff in the twin wager was caused by W. Royle's Amerlee, a maiden. This 4-year-old took command early and was right there at the end of 6 furlongs. Kaptime and Cleaning Time followed the leader to the wire, but it was payoff time for Amerlee backers who collected $77.70.

Jockey George Oros, who rode Amerlee to victory, also piloted Surprise Box, a $17 shot, in the third race. This was the closest finish of the program to that point, with Grand Pageant and Greeny, noses apart and second and third.

Renewal of Feud Between Kayak II, Challedon Seen

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 25.—W. L. Brann has nominated Challedon, 1939's outstanding colt, for the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup July 27 at Hollywood Park.

Challedon ran second to Johnstown in the Kentucky Derby last year but captured the historic Preakness and went on to become the No. 1 3-year-old of the season.

Whether the Maryland sportsman-owner will send Challedon to the West Coast for the summer season remains to be seen, but a renewal of the Challedon-Kayak II feud in the Gold Cup would make the race one of the best turf offerings of the year. Challedon defeated Kayak II in their match race at Pimlico last year.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARDI GRAS, $7.10, $4.50, $3.40; NANCY V (Jones-Bonsal entry), $3.90, $2.80; BARDY, $9.80.

MARDI GRAS, off alertly, set pace accompanied by MISS IDENTIFY, ran out at stretch turn, but recovered quickly and regained command to win going away. NANCY V was taken up in early stages and came with rush in final stages. BARDY closed ground steadily from slow beginning. SAXON PRINCESS, first away, was snatched up and dropped back to last and came with bold rush in stretch run. LAST BET was well placed early and was carried wide by winner entering stretch. CHIVES went evenly. MISS IDENTIFY took a brief lead in midstretch and stopped. BACK BAY had early speed. OAK TAR had some early foot.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:04. Winner, W. Royle's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AMERLEE, $77.70, $28.80, $7.40; KAPTIME, $5.10, $3.10; CLEANING TIME (entry), $2.60.

AMERLEE was hustled to front in opening furlong, drew clear, withstood challenge of KAPTIME and was drawing out at close. KAPTIME was hard ridden to hold forward position and held on gamely, but could not cope with winner in stretch run. CLEANING TIME, slowest to begin, came through on inside to improve position and hung in final drive. GEODESIAN went evenly. MURPH was taken up at break and failed to rally thereafter. EASTER HOLIDAY broke poorly and closed some ground. SUN HIGH lacked early speed. HERALDIC was through early. RIOTOUS flashed early speed. SPARKLING had speed at start and dropped out of it.

Daily Double, MARDI GRAS and AMERLEE, Paid $332.70

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:38½. Winner, Mrs. A. Knight's dk. b. or br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURPRISE BOX, $17.00, $7.90, $4.30; GRAND PAGEANT, $6.40, $3.90; GREENY, $3.10.

SURPRISE BOX, steadied along when lacking room to improve position to stretch, came between horses when placed to drive and wore down GRAND PAGEANT inside sixteenth pole. GRAND PAGEANT came to outside of LIKLY LAD to take command and fought it out willingly. KEY MAN moved up menacingly in midstretch and was tiring gradually at close. GREENY lacked early speed, came very wide for racing room entering stretch and closed with a belated rush to be going fastest of all. GHOST FLYER was taken up when in close quarters directly after start and ran a winning race from there. ZOSTERA had speed in spots. ELTON HEAD was used up forcing early pace of LIKLY LAD. SUBURBANITE had good early speed and stopped. LIKLY LAD set pace to stretch and quit.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:08½. Off 4:09. Winner, Mrs. D. Kerr's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PORT WALES, $34.20, $8.40, $3.50; ROBESPIERRE, $7.90, $3.50; CLINGENDAAL, $2.40.

PORT WALES, steadied along while close up, came to inside to improve position, assumed good lead in midstretch, but had to be put to punishment to withstand closing bid of ROBESPIERRE. CLINGENDAAL lacked early speed and came wide into stretch to close full of run. DOUBLE B forced early pace of CACODEMON and tired gradually through stretch. CACODEMON set good early pace and weakened when displaced. MY ELSIE was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:36½. Winner, Starmount Stable's dk. b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAMAGED GOODS, $7.60, $3.50, $2.70; HARD WAY, $3.10, $2.30; KANTAN, $3.30.

DAMAGED GOODS bumped HARD WAY at first turn, disposed of QUATREDOM to take command on backstretch, drew clear and held away to end. HARD WAY recovered to go to outside on inside horses, was squeezed back in stretch and came to outside to hang in closing test while under punishment. KANTAN came wide while improving position with rush approaching stretch and tired gradually thereafter. GOOD RECEPTION had speed for a half and faltered. QUATREDOM got to front under hustling tactics and stopped. STORMONT was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:10. Off 5:10½. Winner, W. J. Susini's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRIUS, $11.40, $6.00, $3.50; GREEDAN, $5.90, $3.00; CAREFUL MISS, $2.90.

CRIUS assumed command in opening furlong, withstood mild challenge of PLAY GOLD and drew out to win easily. GREEDAN, allowed to race on own courage in early stages, came with good energy when placed to drive, but was held safe. CAREFUL MISS was outrun to stretch, saved ground at bend and finished with good speed. PLAY GOLD was close up to stretch and tired. ZEVSON could not keep up. OVERSIGHT failed to rally.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place easy. Went to post 5:42. Off 5:43. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROOM SERVICE, $8.90, $3.50, $2.90; AUTUMNQUEST, $3.40, $2.90; LIGHT CHATTER, $3.80.

ROOM SERVICE, lacking early speed as usual, came wide for racing room while improving position gradually after a half and closed with rush to dispose of AUTUMNQUEST in final 20 yards. AUTUMNQUEST was sent to front under hustling tactics, was steadied along to stretch and fought it out willingly. LIGHT CHATTER was rated for half and ducked to inside when placed to hard drive and hung thereafter. COUNT TETRARCH was held safe throughout. SCARLET O had early speed and tired. IN MEMORY was well placed for three-quarters and stopped. HOFFBERG forced early pace and quit.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Former Jockey Frank Cusimano, who used to ride at the smaller tracks, is an exercise boy now. Honey Cloud turned in a good workout today under the handling of Jockey Danny Driscoll. The 6-year-old son of High Cloud and Honey Pot stepped a mile in 1:42 4-5 under a snug grip. Goes in the Philadelphia Handicap on Saturday. Honey Cloud will be up against tougher opposition than in his two stake victories at Bowie. The Marley Stable has sold Hatteras Light to Frankie Fitzgerald, former trainer for the Neil McCarthy horses on the West Coast. Apprentice Jockey George Oros is now sixth on the list of the year's top riders and he is improving every day. Al Boyle, president-general manager of Charles Town, took in a day of the sport and renewed acquaintances. There is no shortage of horses for the West Virginia meeting. The plant has had applications for 1,200 stalls. The Millsdale Stable's Airflame has returned to Maryland. He won in New York and then was beaten in New England. The former Vanderbilt horse will be seen in action at Pimlico. Just when Challedon will be seen in action again is not known. The decision rests, of course, with Trainer Lou Schaefer. Challedon, W. L. Brann's "horse of the year," began his racing at Delaware Park, July 6, 1938, running third to Brich Rod and Bud's Bell in a 5½-furlong dash. Although Mr. Brann is a heavy nominator for the Delaware Park Stakes in this and other years, he will not race his colt at Delaware. Now the big star in this country, Challedon, is being pointed for bigger game than Delaware has to offer. The Delaware policy has been to run many medium-priced stakes and keep up the per diem distribution to horsemen, rather than to spend all the money on one or two enormously rich features. Challedon tried again at Delaware in 1929, in the $10,000 added Kent Handicap, but he ran third once more—this time to Sun Lover and Eight Thirty.

Confucius' Hard Way was second and the bank roll is $26. For today, he says Royal Business for my deuce.

BILL.

First race—Burner failed to show her best effort when fourth to Little Mowlee in the mud recently. She meets a cheaper field today and should be up to score. Chief contender appears to be Longful on the merits of her winning race at Bowie. Connie Plaut rates well with this company.

Second race—I'm The Guy was third to maiden juveniles in Florida and competing against these Maryland bred maidens she receives call. Sun Triad makes his first start but the stable thinks highly of this one and Peters has been engaged to ride. Bright Arc for show.

Third race—True Knightess was a good filly last year and after freshening up during the winter months is reported fit and ready for this race. Hazel W. has been running consistently close in late races and appears capable of handling the others. Busy Fingers, a recent winner, moves up.

Fourth race—Briar Sharp needed his race when second to Ringle on opening day and figures to improve over that race. Flaming High makes her seasonal bow but stable connections report her fit. Gala Quest is a speedy colt and deserves consideration.

Fifth race—Boston Pal drops weight after his recent third to Advocator and John Francis and receives first call in this company. Royal Business is a consistent campaigner and looms as a dangerous factor despite a poor recent race. White Sand is not outmatched and has a good money chance.

Sixth race—Knoxville has been running fair races in late trials and falls into field of very cheap platers today. Pascua displayed good speed in her recent outing but stopped; she may stick it out for the place award. Brilliant One can better his late efforts.

Seventh race—Playmore failed to match strides with Petit Jean when they met last Monday but he meets competition of a cheaper sort today. Portunus moves up on an off track and in the event of mud might whip the top horse. Flag Etta appears capable of taking care of the others.

Best bet—Briar Sharp.

Washington A. A. Stickmen Face W. and L. Next

Washington Athletic Association lacrosse men will be gunning for their third victory of the season tomorrow at Central Stadium where they engage Washington and Lee at 3 p. m. The District team worked out yesterday and will drill every afternoon this week.

Well satisfied with last week's 9-4 decision over North Carolina, Coach Joe Deckman will employ the same starting line-up. This gives him the advantage of "South" Sothoron's defensive work at midfield which was an important factor in the victory.

Most improved player on the squad is Ed Fletcher, who was the sparkplug of last week's drive. Dob Williams paced the scorers with four goals but quite a few of them were set up by Fletcher.

'The Muscle's' Last 'Big' D. C. Invasion

U. S. Steel Files Security Offer Of $75,000,000

Bethlehem Orders $1.25 Dividend On Common June 1

A registration statement covering $75,000,000 in serial debentures for refunding outstanding obligations was filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday by the United States Steel Co.

The offering, one of the largest industrial issues to be brought forward in recent years, was made in an effort to obtain a lower interest rate than presently paid on securities to be called and refunded.

Coincidental with this action by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel announced a dividend of $1.25 a share on common, payable June 1, less than a month after a $1 dividend paid on March 31.

Bethlehem reported profit in the March quarter was $10,891,139, equal to $3.02 a share on the common stock. In the 1939 March quarter, it was $2,409,059, or 17 cents a share.

Extraordinary Dividend

The $1.25 dividend is the largest ordered in any quarter in recent years. In 1939 the corporation paid 50 cents a share on September 15 and $1 on December 1. No dividends were paid on the common in 1938 but $5 was paid in 1937. Eugene G. Grace, president, said Bethlehem's current operating rate of 74 per cent of capacity is being supported by incoming business.

Proceeds from the United States Steel debentures, which the corporation estimated would be $73,812,500, will be used along with corporate funds to redeem $95,140,000 principal amount of 10-year 3¼ per cent debentures due July 1, 1948.

The company will use approximately $24,559,617 of cash funds. The total amount in the refunding operations will be $98,732,117.

Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., New York, heads a list of 113 underwriters with $8,400,000. Other underwriters taking $1,000,000 or more of the issue include:

Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York, $3,900,000; Dillon, Read & Co., the First Boston Corporation, Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., Smith, Barney & Co., all of New York, and Mellon Securities Corporation, Pittsburgh, $3,300,000 each; Blyth & Co., Inc., New York, $2,400,000; Kidder, Peabody & Co., New York, $1,920,000; Drexel & Co., Philadelphia; Lazard Freres & Co., New York; Lee Higginson Corporation, New York, $1,800,000 each; Bonbright & Co., Inc., New York; Clark, Dodge & Co., New York; Dominick & Dominick, New York; Goldman, Sachs & Co., New York; Lehman Bros., New York, $1,200,000 each.

$81,000,000 to Be Spent

U. S. Steel said in its statement that it had authorized $81,000,000 for modernization, extension and replacement of various plants and facilities, of which a major portion would be spent this year.

Further extensive expenditures may be necessary to meet competitive conditions, it added, particularly in its wire and bar manufacturing facilities and certain steel making and rolling mill equipment in the Pittsburgh district.

Highest salaries paid by the corporation last year were listed as Benjamin F. Fairless, president, $138,410; Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman, $105,620; Enders M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee, $105,610, and Myron C. Taylor, a director, $98,100.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, April 25 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Quotations were showing a firming tendency today on three-eighths and quarter blood domestic wools in the Boston market. Sales of graded combing three-eighths blood territory wools were being closed on moderate quantities at 72@74 cents, scoured basis. Bright fleece wools, country packed lots, offered direct from producing areas were bringing 35@36 cents, in the grease, delivered to users, for lots composed largely of three-eighths and quarter blood grades, and 34@35 cents, in the grease, for lots containing sizable amounts of half blood, in addition to three-eighths and quarter blood grades.

Construction Advances 25% Over Last Year

New York, April 25 (AP).—Private engineering contracts awarded during the week ended Tuesday were 25 per cent greater than the corresponding period last year and 1 per cent above a week ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

It marked the fourth successive week showing gains over the comparable 1939 values. The latest rise brought private construction for the year to date to a level 12 per cent above the corresponding period last year.

Total engineering awards for the week were 7 per cent larger than a year ago, but 3 per cent below the previous week. Public construction failed to keep pace with private contracts, falling 1 per cent under the same week last year and 5 per cent from a week ago.

Because of the lag in public contracts, 1940 construction volume, totaling $854,557,000, is 18 per cent below the corresponding period of 1939.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, April 25 (AP).—Heavier hog receipts, attracted by a steady advance during the past 11 market sessions, dropped prices today 10 to 25 cents. Steer, yearling and heifer prices were steady, but fat lambs were around 25 cents down early.

Hog receipts in the open market totaled 12,000, or 2,000 more than expected, while big packers had 5,000 direct. Receipts in the 12 principal corn belt markets totaled 70,500 hogs, compared with 46,900 a week ago. Most prices here were 15 to 20 cents down, with top at $6.40, or 25 cents under yesterday's best.

Cattle supplies were slightly larger than expected. Choice, 321-pound steers selling at $12.25. Very few wooled skin lambs were sold early.

Stocks Are Jittery, but Steel Issues Hold List on Upside; Profit Taking in Aircrafts Halts Rise; Loft Advances 2⅜ Points

New York, April 25.—Emotional reactions to domestic and foreign situations of nonfinancial nature appeared to carry more weight with share traders than factual developments, mostly on the bullish side, on business and industrial fronts today.

Stocks acted in jittery fashion and but for a flurry in the steels motivated by overnight announcement of a restoration May 1 of the $4-a-ton price cut on flat-rolled products, the market would have ended with a net loss.

The steels moved in wide arcs with Bethlehem a feature at a new high and United States Steel common, Republic and some of the others were active and firm. Inland equaled its high.

Aircrafts Are Active

Aircrafts picked up for a time following announcement that the Allies will buy $200,000,000 more warplanes in this country. Profit taking held prices down.

Coppers, rail equipment and manufacturing specialties showed fractional losses. Shares at new highs for the year or longer included Evans products, Lion Oil, Pet Milk, Savage Arms, and General Time instruments.

Loft was a late feature with a run-up of several points and wound up as the most active stock with a net gain of 2⅜ on 26,700 shares.

Comment by numerous business executives at annual meetings held during the day were largely optimistic as to near-term trends. This tended to offset unfavorable factors.

Bonds Are Quiet, Steady

Listed bond trading brought few changes of any note in the quiet session today. Domestic speculative issues were of chief interest. The tone was steady to firm in the low-priced rail and similar groups, while highest grade bonds held their ground.

Foreign dollar securities showed only a few changes of more than a point, gains being more numerous than losses.

Treasury securities were marked higher by small fractions, the largest advance in the counter market being 5-32 point.

Small gains were the rule in Norwegian and Danish bonds, and a turn for the better developed in issues of Australia, Canada and Germany. Belgians dipped and Italians barely moved.

Wheat Drops 1c on Weather, Storage Sales

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 25.—Wheat lost a cent today, closing lower for the fourth consecutive session, due largely to favorable weather conditions in the domestic belt and continued marketing of grain that has been released from storage through payment of loans. Prices have declined 2 to 3 cents since the three-year peaks were reached last week.

Final figures were ⅝@1¼ cents lower than yesterday, May $1.09⅝@$1.09⅝, July $1.08⅛@1.08. Corn closed ¼@⅝ down, May 64⅞@64½, July 65; oats, ⅛@½ off; rye, 1⅛@1¼ down, and lard 12@15 lower.

Banking Group Holds Outing At Columbia

The fiduciaries section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association held its annual outing at the Columbia Country Club yesterday afternoon, followed by a dinner and meeting in the evening. In the afternoon the members enjoyed the golfing and tennis facilities of the club and in the evening the section, under the chairmanship of Bernard L. Amiss, assistant trust officer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. received reports from the standing and special committees.

Amiss, at the close of the business meeting, introduced G. Gould Lincoln, political writer of The Evening Star, who spoke on the Presidential campaign and political situation as affected by national and international conditions.

Lincoln discussed the effect of the administration's foreign policy in the coming political campaign and stated that the belief is growing that the foreign situation will play an important part.

Included among the guests were A. M. McLachlen, first vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and Aubrey Carter, national bank examiner of the trust division.

Idle Cash Rises $70,000,000 to Set 6.1 Billion High

Lendable excess reserves of banks increased $70,000,000, to a new record high of $6,120,000,000, in the week ended April 24.

The Federal Reserve Board said the increase was due to Treasury spending, decreases of money circulation and imports of gold.

Brokers Loans Up $1,000,000

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $480,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented an increase of $1,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $547,000,000.

Money Markets

Foreign Exchange

New York, April 25 (AP).—Open-market rates for the British pound and currencies which usually move with it rose somewhat in terms of the American dollar today. The "free" sterling rate at one time was up about a cent. The Canadian dollar and French franc also were up a bit. Trading was small because much of the business is done through official rates of the war-time exchange controls of the Allies. Offerings of the Swedish kroner, which broke widely yesterday on fears of an invasion of Sweden, diminished and rates were described by dealers as largely "nominal." Sweden has shipped more than $150,000,000 gold here during the war period and apparently was in position to support the currency as long as she preserves her freedom. Noon rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian Control Board rates for U. S. dollars—Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent. Canadian dollar in New York open market, 15⅞ per cent discount, or 84.43¾ U. S. cents.

Utility Plans Holding Co. Act Adherence

North American's Stockholders to Be Protected, Shea Says

By the Associated Press

New York, April 25.—Edward L. Shea, president of the North American Co., told stockholders today the company intended to "comply fairly and in good spirit" with the integration provisions of the Federal Utility Holding Company Act.

"At the same time," he said in the annual meeting of shareholders, "we are going to reserve all rights to protect the interests of our security holders under that same law of the land."

He indicated directors were preparing integration plans, but did not go into details.

Profits Advance 7 Per Cent

The Securities and Exchange Commission recently began proceedings for simplification of utility holding systems in accordance with the integration clause of the act.

Shea reported North American Co. in the first three months of this year earned net income of more than $5,500,000, a gain of 7 per cent over profit for the like 1939 period.

First quarter profit, he said, was equal to about 54 cents a share on the common stock, compared with 51 cents in first 1939 quarter.

Defends Holding Companies

Shea defended holding companies and said there was "increasing doubt as to the wisdom of parts of the Holding Company Act" and whether the breaking up of the top units was in the public interest.

"The function of this company," he explained in reference to North American, "is to supply needed capital for the operation and development of American industry to bring the advantages of the best experience gained in each operating company to all the operating companies and to diversify our investments widely enough to insure both safety and a reasonable return on our money.

"Because of this primary function, I know of no reason why our capital is necessarily limited to investments in utility properties alone. We started out primarily interested in transportation. We saw opportunities to serve the public and make a return on our investment in the then infant electric business."

If opportunity rose in a new field, he added, the North American management would not be hampered by tradition in taking advantage of it.

Wheat Stocks Drop, U. S. Says

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday combined stocks of wheat in interior mills, elevators and warehouses and on farms April 1 totaled 238,301,000 bushels, compared with 278,554,000 on the same date last year. Stocks in interior mills, elevators and warehouses were reported at 80,817,000 bushels, compared with 90,046,000.

Foreign Markets

London, April 25 (AP).—Gilt-edge issues advanced sharply today on substantial public and institutional buying, but reacted partially in the last hour. Copper shares and dividend-paying industrials were well supported at higher prices and oils were firm throughout the day. Home rails finished fractionally higher. Japanese, Chilean and Austrian bonds advanced, while Chinese issues lost a point.

Paris.—Small gains were registered in domestic industrial and electrical shares today, while rails were mixed and coal mining securities closed lower. Ordinary rentes gained 15 to 20 centimes and the sterling guaranteed rentes were up 130. Scandinavian shares were weak, but Turkish and Egyptian securities were better.

Amsterdam—The bourse held fairly firm today, with American shares generally advancing slightly. Traders, however, were wary of extensive commitments in view of the present status of the fighting in Norway.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures developed irregularity as trade price fixing and speculative support encountered profit-taking and hedging. Final prices were 2 points lower to 2 higher.

Listen! with Slocum

Even my best friends are beginning to shun me these days. It seems I have become something of a mad man and a terrific bore and will continue as same until Glenn Miller concludes his stay in Washington. I'm suffering from jitterbugmania and there's nothing to be done.

Mind you, this jitterbugmania has nothing to do with the type of music Mr. Miller plays. I guess it's good music because his sponsors pay him him well and millions of people try to get into his broadcasts at the Wardman Park. My mental ills are the result of intimate contact with Miller's jitterbug fans. Intimate contact meaning being knocked down in the hallways and trampled by eager-eyed young music lovers seeking tickets at WJSV.

I've seen the jitterbugs bouncing around WJSV, and the other evening I went up to watch them worship at the Miller shrine. In the first place the young folk come dressed pretty much as they please, which means on the whole spotless attire, but a trifle on the rakish side.

They all crowd into the hall as quickly and as noisily as possible, and sit through an extremely well-done commercial moving picture called "Tobaccoland." It's a fascinating job, but the watchers are only roused to any display when their favorite college is mentioned.

After Miller asks the audience to remain silent during the playing of numbers and the reading of script the broadcast begins. The whole mass of people sway in rhythm with Miller's music. It looks like a choppy lake, with some swaying to the left and right and others forward and backward. When the quarter-hour show is over the jitterbugs let loose. They jump and scream and whistle and shout. Then they suddenly quiet down and walk slowly out, all looking pretty happy and some talking animatedly, others quite silent as though lost in reflection.

These Women!

"Surprise! I mean, HANDS UP!"

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

Everything seemed to be falling about Smoky O'Toole's ears after Karl Hetrick jilted her. He married instead Dagne Olsen, another belle of the neighborhood, and to cover her humiliation Smoky obtained a job in the chorus of a new Broadway show. There she met Tex Stacy, a cowboy singer, whom she liked and who was kind to her. Clancy O'Toole, her father, also liked Tex and so when Smoky married Tex suddenly, Clancy was sympathetic and understood why she had done it. But immediately afterwards Clancy lost his life saving that of Dagne Hetrick when the Hetrick house caught fire and she was trapped upstairs. Clancy had been retired from the fire department because of an injury received in the line of duty, and the effort of getting upstairs and dragging Dagne out of the burning building was too much for his weak heart. After the funeral Tex tried to comfort Smoky who was numb with grief. And then Karl came to beg Smoky to visit Dagne in the hospital and Smoky did not feel that she could refuse. Dagne, sure she was dying, told Smoky she was sorry for the trouble she had made an' that she hoped Smoky and Karl would marry later on.

Chapter 18

"SMOKY," Karl said in a stricken voice. "I've got to talk to you," as Shamrock came from the room where Dagne lay injured.

There was no one in the corridor of the hospital and Shamrock told him angrily: "You stay away from me, Karl Hetrick! Go back to your wife, where you belong."

"Oh, Smoky!" he wailed miserably. "Don't treat me like this. I'm going crazy."

Smoky saw that he had grown pounds thinner, and his eyes were dull with unhappiness. She said, weakening: "What do you want to talk about? I can't see there's anything to say. You—you're married and I'm married."

He took her arm: "Please, Smoky, come down and sit in the car a little while. I must make you understand. I—I'll go crazy if you don't."

She shrugged hopelessly: "Oh, all right. But I hope nobody that knows us sees me with you."

Karl led the way down the corridor to the elevator and neither of them spoke until they were sitting in Dagne's car parked back of the hospital. Smoky gripped her handbag, looking away from him: "All right. Talk fast. I'm not going to stay here long."

Karl asked miserably, "What did Dagne say to you?"

Smoky said bitterly, "She told me she expects to die.

"Oh," Karl looked away. "I guess you were surprised."

"I certainly was," Smoky told him coldly. "I think some one ought to take you out and horsewhip you."

"You—don't have to hope anything like that, Smoky," Karl said grimly. "I'm taking my beating. I've burned with remorse.

Smoky was silent for a little while, then nodded sadly: "Oh, I suppose you have felt pretty bad, Karl. But it doesn't matter much how you or I feel. It's Dagne I feel sorry for in this mess."

"Yes," poor kid." Karl hesitated. "She's an awful fool. But I guess she was pretty gone on me."

Shamrock said with a little sob: "She loved you a lot more than I did. She wouldn't have done what she did if she hadn't loved you enough to die for you."

Karl looked at Smoky surprised, but could not see her face because her head was turned.

"I—I suppose." Smoky added thoughtfully, "any girl would do the same thing if she loved a man enough."

Smoky Pleads for Dagne

Karl was silent and Smoky suddenly wailed: "Oh, Karl, you've got to make it up to her. You must! Go to her and tell her you love her and want her to live.

Karl laid his head in his arms over the steering wheel and Smoky was amazed when he began to cry. She wept with him for a little while and then she dried her eyes and urged gently: "Go back to her, Karl. You can make her happy. Take her away from here where nobody knows her and start all over again. You've got enough money——"

Karl gripped the wheel with his hands until the knuckles were white. "It's you I love, Smoky. You know that, don't you? Will you always remember that if I go away?"

"Yes," Smoky whispered. "I—I'll remember."

Karl said very low: "Tell me something, Smoky. I've got to know. Do you love that man you married? You just married him to get even with me, didn't you?"

She looked away stonily. "Of course, I love my husband. Don't be silly. He—he's wonderful to me."

Karl did not believe her. Suddenly he reached out and took her in his arms. When she resisted he begged, "Kiss me good-by, Smoky. Just once."

With all her strength she pushed him away and said between clinched teeth:

"Go back to your wife. And stay away from the theater and don't send me any more orchids. My husband is very jealous. If he finds out—there'll be trouble!"

Karl opened the car door and was gone, up the walk that led to the hospital.

Her Brain in Turmoil

Smoky walked home through the gathering dusk. The March wind blew wild and strong, but she did not feel it. The drama of her life, moving with such swift suddenness, had left her too numb to feel the biting cold of the raw, wet snow that swirled around her.

Clancy was gone. Never again would he hold out his arms to her when she needed their shelter. Or stroke her head with his big hands or threaten to give her the paddling she had always been promised but never received.

Now there was Tex waiting for her in the old home. Tex, who was a stranger, and yet she was married to him. He was home waiting for her kisses and soft, warm arms.

Dagne was dying in St. Agnes' Hospital, they had said. But perhaps if Karl made her believe he wanted her to live, a miracle might happen. For months she had been eating her heart out because she loved him and he did not want to marry her.

Shamrock closed her eyes to shut out the picture. The nights and nights Dagne had spent weeping for Karl while she, Smoky, was with him. How it must have killed her to see Karl and she so happy together.

Those long nights in the house next door without lights. Dagne lying in the dark weeping because Karl had told her she had ruined his life and that he loved Smoky and hated her.

Poor Dagne! Shamrock's own heart had broken. But she knew her suffering would not have been half as keen as that of the girl she had hated for taking the man she loved away from her.

It was a man's world, Smoky decided, bitterly.

Could She Love Karl Again?

Karl had been untrue to her, and had completely wrecked Dagne's life. Could she really ever love him again, knowing that?

If Dagne died, and Karl was free—would she get a divorce and marry him as Dagne had tried to make her promise? Shamrock prayed desperately that she would have too much common sense to do that. But in her stormy heart she wasn't sure.

For all her life she had dreamed of Karl's home and Karl's babies, until those dreams had become a part of her very being. Was it really love when a woman couldn't find it in her heart to forgive a man one mistake?

Tex opened the door when Smoky stumbled up the steps wearily. When he saw her tear-stained face he stifled the questions that were on his lips.

"I called Melvin," he told her, taking her silver fox jacket and helping her off with her galoshes. "We begin rehearsals day after tomorrow for the 'Go West Young Woman' skit."

"That's nice," Shamrock sighed tiredly.

"You rest, dear," Tex got up from the floor. "I'll raid the ice box and see what I can find for a light supper. You'd better take it easy and try to get some sleep tonight."

Maybe, Smoky told herself uncertainly, she hadn't made such a big mistake after all. Tex Stacy was the most perfect gentleman she'd ever known in her life.
